Trenton Courier: The long expected has come at last. Mr Rogers and Mr Brophy, Civil Engineers, of Peterborough, have taken up their residence in Trenton, having rented a brick residence at the G T Station and are employing men to stake the Canal, make borings to find the nature of the excavation, location of the locks, &c., between Trenton and Frankford. They expect a transit man and assistant from Ottawa immediately to assist in this preparatory work, which must be done before tenders can be called for. It will take from three to five weeks to complete this work, otherwise tenders would be out now for the work in two sections.

THE BRITISH TROOPS GAINING MORE LAURELS

A Handful of Men Make a Dash from Kimberley and Drive Boers Off With Great Loss.

THE CUNNING BOERS USE A WHITE FLAG AS A BLIND.

General Symonds Was Buried at Dundee on Tuesday. Only Incapacity of Boers' Intelligence Department Saved General Yule's Force From a Great Disaster.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Special—A despatch from Paris this afternoon says: "The Journal to-day states that the Government is considering the advisability of sending a strong squadron to South Africa."

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Special—Another Paris despatch says that a cable from French sources at the Cape declares that Sir Alfred Milner is arming and subsidising the Basutos.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Special—To Cape Town comes an unconfirmed despatch from Fort Tuli, which says that the Boers have shot some women and children in Rhodesia.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A special despatch from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, dated Oct. 24, says: "Nine hundred and eighty-eight Boer prisoners arrived here this morning. They include Captains Dewitt, Hamer, Fighlue, Dorey, Vanegger and Dottner."

New York, Oct. 27.—Special—The Journal's correspondent at Ladysmith sends the following this afternoon: Additional reinforcements arrived here to-day from Pietermaritzburg. The British force now consists of 12,000 regulars and 54 guns.

Cape Town, Oct. 26.—Evening—Official reports from Kimberley, dated to-day, state that Colonel Scott Turner, with 270 men, proceeded northward to Macfarlane's Farm, where they unsaddled their horses. At nine o'clock a party of Boers was seen on the right flank and was quickly scattered, Col. Scott Turner opening fire on them and [illegible] of the enemy move[illegible] and help and opened fire on the British, which was returned.

Col. Scott Turner attempted to prevent the Boers advancing against Col. Murray, but was met with a heavy fire from a dam wall 600 feet to the east. At 11 o'clock Col. Murray ordered 100 men of the Lancashire regiment to proceed to the north.

An armoured train is already supporting Col. Scott Turner. At midday Col. Murray started also, with two field guns and two Maxims and 70 mounted men. One of the two British guns opened suddenly upon the Boers, who were in an unfavourable position. The Boer artillery fire was weak.

Another armoured train was held in readiness. At two o'clock the second train was sent forward with additional ammunition.

The Lancashires behaved splendidly and Col. Scott Turner highly commended them.

Commandant Botha and many Boers were killed. The British loss was three killed and 21 wounded. The engagement was a brilliant success for the British forces.

THE FIGHTING WAS SEVERE.

London, Oct. 27.—During the momentary lull in the fighting in Natal momentary lull in the fighting in Natal comes news from the western border which temporarily shifts the scene of chief interest to the beleaguered British force at Kimberley. The sharp struggle there on Tuesday appears to have been the result of a sortie with the view of breaking the cordon surrounding the place.

The British, apparently five hundred strong, met seven hundred Boers, and according to the official and other accounts, routed them after severe fighting, in which the armoured trains appear to have done valuable service.

The Boers were entrenched strongly seven miles northward, and the British brilliantly carried the enemy's position without serious loss. tion without serious loss.

It is said that the Boers twice unfairly used a white flag. The commandant, Botha, who was among the killed, was a member of the Volksraad and a famous Dutch fighter. He distinguished himself as a marksman at Bronkhorst-Spruit, when the ninety-fourth British regiment was mowed down. He afterwards defended a farm house against the British. When he surrendered the farm house Botha was found with five wounds, bathed in blood.

On Oct. 19 reconnoitering patrols proceeding along the north bank of the river in a westerly direction suddenly encountered a party of Boers in some dense brush on the Rhodesia side of the Limpopo. The patrol retired and the Boers fired, wounding a trooper.

Subsequently Captain Glynne, with a patrol, left Tuli with the object of locating the Boer force.

At Rhodes' Drift.

On October 21 a strong Boer patrol was encountered at Rhodes' Drift, in a thick bush. A sharp skirmish was the result. Two of the British were killed and two were wounded. The Boers had seven men killed and many wounded. The Boers retired to a strong position at Pont's Drift.

Major Tilson, with an ambulance, proceeded to fetch the dead and wounded, and while placing the bodies on a cart the Boers re-opened fire, killing two horses. But in spite of the sharp shooting, the British succeeded in carrying away their comrades.

The latest despatch from Tuli, dated October 24, says: "A Boer patrol crossed the river on mules above Rhodes Drift twice recently, harrying native women and children. The shot cattle and looted."

Great preparations are being made to welcome the New South Wales Lancers at Cape Town to-morrow morning.

THINGS FROM DUNDEE.

London, Oct. 27.—The Colonial Office has made public the following telegram received from Governor Hutchinson, dated Pietermaritzburg, October [illegible]:—

The following telegram has been received from Greytown, from D. Greig, a resident of Dundee, formerly in the telegraph service:

"I left Dundee this morning. Gen. Symons died on Monday, at five p.m., and was buried the following morning, close to the English church, by the Rev. W. Bailey. There was a firing party, and a few medical officers and a few civilians attended the funeral. There were 30 Boers. Colonel Eckett, Majors Boultbee, Hammersley and Nugent, and also Crum, Johnstone and Ryan are improving. The Boers occupied Dundee Monday afternoon."

DECISIVE BATTLE IN NATAL.

New York, Oct. 27.—A special copyright cable to the Journal and Advertiser says:—"A decisive battle, which will decide the fate of Natal, is about to be fought, and may even now be in progress. General Sir George Stewart White, commander of the British forces at Ladysmith, has been reinforced by General Yule with his 4,000 men from Glencoe, and by several thousand more who came up from Pietermaritzburg and from the Cape. His army numbers something over 15,000 men.

"He is ready to give battle, and he knows that he cannot afford to delay. To put off the fight will endanger the safety of his army it would give the Free State burghers and the Transvaal Boers an opportunity to combine forces.

"It is understood that Gen. White will move out and attack the Free Staters at Bester's station, as soon as the men of Gen. Yule's command have rested after their forced march from Dundee through the heavy rain."

IT WAS A GREAT FIGHT.

London, Oct. 27.—A despatch from Utrecht, Transvaal Republic, says:—

"The fighting at Glencoe lasted nine hours. The burghers state that they never witnessed such a fight. General Lucas Meyer's force of six thousand men with eighty guns was several times repulsed."

Belated despatches from Tuli fort partially elucidate the situation on the Rhodesian border. It appears that Col. Plumer ascertained that all the Soutpansberg Boers, numbering 700 men, mustered under Piet Joubert, at the Brack river, and proceeded to Limpopo river, where they arrived Oct. 16, accompanied by a number of armed Shangaan and Soutpansberg Kaffirs, whom they had compelled to take up arms. The British thereupon captured three Kaffirs chiefs, who are now held as hostages for the good behaviour of their tribes.

OPINION ON THE CONTINENT.

London, Oct. 27.—A Paris despatch this afternoon says: "Much attention is given here to the attitude of Germany in the Transvaal conflict. The question is considered very complex and is governed by circumstances of a contradictory nature. While it is admitted that public opinion is squarely opposed to the British policy, it is held that the Kaiser is not at all disposed to break with England, believing it for the best interest of his country to maintain good relations with Great Britain. In France, too, public opinion is wholly on the side of the Boers. A league has just been formed to offer them money and moral support.

YULE'S NARROW ESCAPE.

London, Oct. 27.—The official announcement of the joining of General White and General Yule has come as a great relief, and all the more so in view of the fact that later despatches have shown that only the incapacity of the Intelligence Department of the Boers saved General Yule's column from what might have been a great disaster.

It seems that on Friday night Dundee was full of alarms. Heavy firing was heard at one o'clock and again at 4. A severe thunder storm soon after stopped the Boer cannonade. Saturday passed in the same anxious manner, in momentary expectation of an attack. The British finally evacuated, taking all they could, but leaving plenty behind for the Boers to loot. The appointments of the Boer hospital at Dundee are described as very inadequate and primitive. The Boers themselves, in the absence of a nursing staff, get only scant attention.

Dreary March Back.

It is reported that Sir Wm. Penn Symonds died on Wednesday, not yesterday, and was buried at Dundee yesterday. General Yule's column had a very exhausting march, chiefly, it is believed, by night. The reason for a night march is not given, but it was probably a fear of Boer surprises. The heavy rains and mist hampered the march, but were perhaps the means of saving General Yule from molestation. It took the column 24 hours to cover the last sixteen miles.

General Kock, who was badly wounded in the thigh and shoulder, said that the advance of the patriots under Commandant Pienar, without guns was simply with the object of cutting the railway, and that this body was subsequently reinforced without General Joubert's orders, General Viljoen accompanying them. The latter was killed early in the fight.

According to another correspondent, the Boers say that General Kock during the battle read his Bible and prayed for victory. His brother, two sons and a nephew were all wounded and taken prisoners.

Soldiers in Little Clothes.

Colonel Schiel of the German corps and Commandant Pretorius were both severely wounded. Many prominent Boers are yet unaccounted for. Philip Kock says the Boers suffered most from the "soldiers in little clothes, half men and half women," meaning that the Gordon Highlanders and in the charge of the 5th Lancers. He says, also, that the two quick firing guns captured by the Devonshire Regiment are those that were taken from the Jameson raiders.

Col. Schiel assured a correspondent that nothing could stand against the accuracy of the British field guns, which repeatedly drove the Transvaal gunners from their embrasures. The British infantry fire was also a complete surprise to the Boers, who were confident of their ability to master an infantry attack.

One Elandsgatte correspondent expresses the belief that the British killed fewer Boers than might have been expected, considering the heavy fire of the British artillery.

The bullet of the Boer Mauser it appears, makes a clean, healthy wound, where it passes out. No operations for extraction have been necessary at the Ladysmith hospital.

With regard to the western frontier, it is reported that President Steyn recently visited a force of 7,000 Boers encamped ten miles south of Kimberley.

DIRECT FROM AFRICA.

Durban, Oct. 27.—A transport has arrived with a battalion of the Rifle Brigade.

Ex-State Attorney Koster, the defender of Von Veltheim, the murderer of Woolf Joel, at one time the partner of the late Barney Barnarto, was among the killed at Elandsgaate. It is said here that Colonel Schiel's German force was almost annihilated at that battle.

Cape Town, Oct. 27.—The troopship Zayatha, whose voyage from Liverpool was delayed by difficulties with her machinery, has arrived with a battery and a half of field artillery. Her sister transport with an equal force, which has been similarily delayed, is daily expected.

WERE BADLY INSPIRED.

Paris, Oct. 27.—The Figaro says that the Boers were badly inspired when they declared war. It would have been better to grant the concession asked, since the issue of the war was inevitable. The universal impression is that the war will not last long. The Figaro says that England does not fear foreign intervention. Germany is occupied with her own affairs and France is busy woth the coming exposition.

SUPPORT FROM THE STATES.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27.—Clifton R. Breckinridge, who was Minister to Russia during the second Cleveland Administration, says that in case any nation or combination of nations should attempt to embarass England in the present war in South Africa it would be the imperative duty of the United States to take the part of Great Britain and sustain her with our whole moral and material strength.

The missing newspaper man, Easton, who was supposed to haveb een captured by the Boers, has been traced by the State Department and found to be all right. Consul Macrum, at Pretoria, reports that Easton is at the front with the Boer forces.

THERE ARE GRAVE FEARS.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—The Record's correspondent at London cables a letter in which he says—

"It is growing on the people of London that the British forces in Natal are in a bad way, whatever the War Office may suppress, and however euphemistically it may dress out what it sees fit to give to the publics. Lists of dead and wounded tell the difference between "skirmishes" and battles; victorious generals rarely leave their wounded to the mercy of the enemy and the protection of the Geneva convention, and when the War Office really feels no alarm it seldom deems it necessary to say so.

"These meagre official despatches, edited into bland complancy by Lord Wolsley, have been a strong factor in increasing public apprehension, nor does late news go far to relieve the tension.

"General Sir George White's first despatch, announcing the engagement at Rietfontein, near Ladysmith, in the light of his subsequent telegram, appears unduly to have minimized the importance of the action. Although he describes the encounter as mainly an "artillery duel," and makes no allusion to the casualties, so that it was thought at first that the action had not been attended by serious loss, the actual facts are as different as possible. The list received shows a total loss of 109, including 12 killed, 93 wounded, and three missing. This is considered here an unexpectedly heavy list.

Situation is Perilous.

"It is a matter of surprise here that Gen. Joubert has not followed General Yule and forced an action on the march. This is considered among military men here to be a consequence of the moral effect of the recent victories.

"It can readily seen that the situation is quite perilous enough to warrant the general uneasiness prevailing here—an uneasiness which is not lessened by the brief statement issued by the War Office to the effect that a whole squadron of the 18th Hussars had been captured by the Boers. As to the fate of this squadron of cavalry, people, indeed know not what to think. From the fact that the War Office says it has its news 'from unofficial sources,' not a few persons are inclined to think it has official —and perhaps worse—news which it is suppressing. On the other hand, the Daily Telegraph prints a despatch from Ladysmith, dated Monday, affirming that the Hussars are safe with General White's command.

What About Europe?

"No one outside of the most intimate Government circles pretends to know the truth as to the possibility of international complications arising in connection with the Transvaal war. The fact remains, however, that the naval reserves are under orders to hold themselves ready to join their ships at 24 hours' notice, that the reserve cruisers are ready to receive their crews and go to sea at a day's warning, and that the construction yards are as busy as when Great Britain had to emphasize its opinion as to the merits of the Fashoda affair.

"All this may be simply a matter of reasonable caution against unfeared contingencies, or the Government may know that some of these continental expressions of ill-will are not only unfriendly, but hostile. Nobody tries to know, but everybody recognizes the wisdom, and, indeed, the necessity of taking these exceedingly warlike precautions. Continental advices, on the other hand, indicate that the other powers see in British naval movements grounds for suspicion, for the French fleet has been ordered to watch British movements in the Mediterranean while Italy, it is said, is about to concentrate its fleet in the Gulf of Spezia."

The First Time.

London, Oct. 28.—Lord Pauncefote' British Ambassador to the United States, took his seat in the House of Lords to-day for the first time.

Canadian Bankers.

Montreal, Oct. 28.—Mr E S Clouston, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, was this morning elected president of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

Third Warrant for Weir.

Montreal, Oct. 28.—This afternoon a third warrant was issued for the arrest of William Weir, the president of the Banque Ville Marie. This time he is accused of having forged the name of Louis Perrault for $11,000.

Like English Rules.

Montreal, Oct. 28.—The Executive Committee of the Quebec Rugby Union held a meeting last night and passed a resolution favouring the adoption of the English rules for Canadian football: This is the result of the visit of the Irish football players.

In about ten days time, when on mid-ocean a deplorably large proportion of the Canadian contingent will be wishing to heaven they had never heard of the Transvaal or the British Empire, and praying to be home or somewhere.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Continuation of the Evidence Before Judge Weller.

ALD. IS LANGFORD SWORN

And Tells What He Knows Concerning the Matter.

He is Followed by Ald Dunne and Other Members of the Council—Some Startling Evidence Adduced.

The investigation was continued on Thursday, Ald. Langford being duly sworn.

He stated that he acted as chairman of the Board of Works from about June 7th to Aug. 7th.

Q.—Was your attention called to any matter with this work?

A.—Yes.

Q.—In what respect?

A.—The engineer called my attention to Ensign cement. I stated to the engineer that I believed Ensign cement to be good cement but I asked him is his specification did not call for Star Cement. The engineer "No," He made tests. The reason for the talk was there was a scarcity of Star cement.

Q.—Did you ever use Ensign cement?

A.—I did in work for the county. It proved satisfactory and was approved.

Q.—You asked Mr. Hay if his specifications did not call for Star cement?

A.—I did.

Q.—Were any directions given for the use of Star cement?

A.—None whatever.

Q.—After Aug. 7 th did you act at any time as chairman of the Board of Works?

A.—No.

Q.—While chairman of the Board of Works was any report made to you of Mr. Sheehy's contract?

A.—Once by Mr. Ranney. Mr. Ranney said that they had stolen a bag and a half or two bags of cement. I did not know what he meant. I asked him if he had told the engineer. I think he told me that he had not. I told him to tell the engineer. Previous to that I had some talk with Mr. Ranney regarding the quality of the work. Mr. Ranney had complained that the men would keep raising the base so as to make the surface finish thinner. He stated that he had watched them. The matter of getting the base exact is one of some difficulty. It was when Mr. Shhehy was working on Brock-st. about Water-st., that Mr. Ranney complained to me. I understood from him that it had been going on all the time.

Q.—Did you know they were using the sand?

A.—I did. Everybody could see them.

Q.—Was sand used last year?

A.—It was. All sand was used on some of the work last year.

Q.—Was this matter of difference in quantity called to your attention again.

A.—Mr. Hay spoke to me two or three days afterwards and I came to the conclusion that the specifications were being carried out, and that the engineer had the right to order whatever sand he thought right to put in.

Q.—Was that your understanding of the contract?

A.—It was.

Q.—Has anyone approached you directly or indirectly, regarding these matters?

A.—No.

Q.—Is there anything else?

A.—Yes. I was not present when Mr. Sheehy started his contract or when Mr. Ranney made his tests. When it was about half a block down I saw the work being done and made a remark to Mr. Ranney that the cement and sand was apparently making a strong mortar. I did not know that even Mr. Ranney thought there was anything wrong until Brock street was reached.

BY MR. McWILLIAMS.

Ald. Langford was then examined by R. F. McWilliams, counsel for Ald. McWilliams.

Q.—You consulted Mr. Hay regarding the proportions of sand, etc?

A.—No.

Q.—You watched the work being done?

A.—Frequently.

Q.—When did you learn from your observations what materials were being used, that 5 1-2 bags of cement were being used?

A.—When about a block was done, when about London street.

Q.—And you thought this sufficiently good?

A.—I did.

Q.—You knew that the specifications were not being carried out?

A.—I did.

Q.—Why was sand added?

A.—To make it strong.

Q.—You are aware that good work can be done with two parts of granite and one of cement?

A.—I am not. It would not be as good work.

Q.—The contract could have been carried but according to specifications and first class work resulted?

A.—I question whether it would be first class work.

Q.—If you decrease the proportion of granite and increase that of sand less cement would be required?

A.—It would take less cement.

Q.—Then the adding of the sand would be a great benefit to the contractor?

A.—True.

Q.—And would give the town poorer work?

A.—No. Just as good.

Q.—The contract called for a mixture of [illegible] per cent. granite and [illegible] per cent. cement?

A.—Yes, if you examine the work done you will find two parts of granite to one of cement. I am not aware that these specifications have been departed from in the least. I want you to understand clearly.

Q.—Tell me what was used in the contracts?

A.—There were 9 feet granite, 5 1-2 feet cement, 8 feet of sand used. Figure that up as you like.

Mr. McWilliams—It gives 9 feet of granite out of 22 1-2, less than [illegible]

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

Morning Times

Amount voted up to date is $1,403.20. Council adjourned until Saturday, 18th November 1899.

Wm. H. JOHNSON, Clerk.

MIDGETS ARE TO BE MARRIED.

Chiquita Will Wed at the Paris Exposition Next Year—Combined Weight of Bridal Pair Under Fifty Pounds.

When Chiquita, the little fairy who appeared at several Chicago theaters last season, gives her hand to Major Mite at the Paris Exposition next year the smallest man and woman in the world will be married.

The major is 22 years of age, thirty-three inches high, and weighs twenty-five pounds. He is perfect in proportion, and in all respects except size is very much like any ordinary American gentleman you might meet any day in the week. He devotes himself to the stage because of a decided proficiency in that direction, rather than on account of his stature, and objects to being billed as a freak. Those who have seen the major perform are quite willing to accept this view and accord him hearty praise for his vocal and terpsichorean talents. Chiquita is only twenty-six inches high, is perfectly formed, but weighs less than twenty pounds. She is a few years older than the major.

It was during Major Mite's latest tour throughout the middle west that he first met the fair Chiquita. They were introduced socially in the city of Omaha.

An extraordinary thing happened.

The two smallest people in the world fell in love with each other.

Friends of the little people declare that it is really a case of personal affinity, having nothing to do with the peculiarity which distinguishes each. They really loved at first sight. It was not a case of freak marrying freak, but of an honest little man uniting himself with a woman he really loved.

Both of these small folk are unusually intelligent and highly educated. Both have traveled extensively and have gained much of that polish and largeness of conception which travel alone can afford. It was only natural that two such keenly developed minds should be attracted to each other by a kinship of taste and knowledge of the world and by a conviction that each might sympathize with the other in that closer relationship which their union would entail.

This, added to the similarity of aims in a professional direction, made the prospective match a most welcome one to both parties. It is perhaps most furtunate that the distinguished midgets are thus spared a life of loneliness to which their peculiarity of circumstances and physical limitations would otherwise have condemned them.

They are going to be married at the Paris exposition next year. In the meantime they will pursue their respective professional sources and play out the engagements which they have on hand. As these engagements were already billed to finish at the Paris exposition, both Major Mite and Chiquita concluded that their meeting there would be the most auspicious occasion for their wedding.

It will be something of a distinction itself to be married at the Paris exposition, a distinction for them and a most novel event for those who are permitted to witness the strange ceremony. If the affair is made a part of the exposition programme it will certainly be one of the most interesting features to be seen there.

The trousseau for this Liliputian lady will doubtless puzzle the Parisan dressmakers, but certainly it will be all that French art in that line can make it.

One advantage which the diminutive couple will enjoy is the avoidance of paying for extra baggage, as both of their extensive wardrobes, themselves included, can be carried in a good sized trunk.

That they will travel in most luxurious style goes without saying, as both of them are wealthy and making more money every month than either of them weighs.

Their honeymoon will be a grand tour of the world, which, although they have seen it almost in its entirely, will under these felicitous circumstances appear in a new light.

They will be the most wonderful married couple from a physical standpoint that the world has ever seen, and will doubtless spread consternation among the easy going and narrowed horizoned people of China and Japan and the other oriental peoples to whom the American [illegible] the rest of the world with something that is forever a wonder and a delight.

Major Mite is just lately from Europe, where he has appeared before kings and queens and fraternized with the aristocracy of all the capitals of Europe.

It would be difficult to estimate which brings more fame to this connubal union, although in America Chiquita is the better known of the two.

Major Mite is of German descent, while Chiquita comes of Cuban parentage.

Major Mite is now journeying on his way from Omaha to fill an engagement in San Francisco.

An Enterprising Editor.

An exchange has this item of local news:—"We regret to record the explosion of the boiler in Major Tompkin's sawmill. The six men who were employed in the mill were all subscribers to our paper. Two of them landed on their heads three minutes after the explosion, but we were unable to collect their dues, as they were unconscious when we reached the scene. The other four, have not come down yet, but we are patiently awaiting their return to terra firma."

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

Hutch Cures Phil Davey of Sour Stomach.

Toronto for some time past has not been favorably regarded by the travelling public in the matter of hotel accommodation, but it is safe saying that with a few men like Phil Davey of the Tremont House to look after a guest's comfort, this state of affairs will undergo a change.

Phil for many years ran the Walper House of Berlin and is a born hotel man. An old-timer wouldn't know the old "Bay Horse" in its present modern dress of the Tremont House, or for that matter its class of customers either. It's all different now, and all owing to Phil's splendid management. Phil knows about Hutch, by the way, and has an interesting story to tell about how Hutch cured him of stomach trouble.

"For quite a long time before I left Berlin," said he, "I was troubled with a sour stomach and indigestion. Sometimes I couldn't eat my breakfast, and a disagreeable flatulency was always present. I was up to that time a very healthy man and got very impatient under my illness. When I came to Toronto I had an idea that after consulting some of the specialists here I could get relief. Well, I spent money, but I could only get free from the discomfort for a while. Had the same thing back on me in a very short time. Then Hutch was advertised. Your representative, whom I know well, called my attention to it, and I started taking the tablets. Well, sir, I got such relief that I kept on taking them, and I believe I am cured now. I wouldn't permit my name to be used in connection with any other medicine, and I only do so in this case because Hutch has given me so wonderful a cure. I recommend Hutch to everybody. It's great."

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was of this character. Indeed 28 days after it was compounded it was almost certain to explode of its own volition, so to speak. And on the upper shelf of the checkroom of my New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was wornout under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

For America's Cup.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—There is a movement on foot for the Canadians to challenge for the great yacht trophy, the America's Cup. The scheme is to build a yacht with money raised by popular subscription through Canada.

If the idea of those at the head of the scheme are carried out the yacht will probably be built at some point in the Maritime Provinces. The challenge, if sent, probably go through the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Club, as according to the deed of gift, the challenge must be from a club having quarters at a seaport.

YULE'S COLUMN SAFE.

London, Oct. 26.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General White...

Ladysmith, Oct. 25.—12.410 p. m.—General Yule's column has just marched in here after a very hard march during a night of exceptionally heavy rain. The men, though done up, are in good spirits and only want a rest. The enemy did not molest them.

Admiral Kautz reports that the Samoan king is a trifle shy on trousers. It is pretty hard to keep anything on with three or four great powers pulling and hauling in different directions.—Minneapolis Journal.

A New Jersey minister has begun a crusade against Sunday funerals. If he should succeed in abolishing the undesirable things entirely, Sundays and weekdays, none of us would rise to file a protest.—Denver Post.

If the fad for sending messenger boys on long journeys takes hold of this country, there will be a rush to secure places in the service only equaled by the strife for the privilege of carrying water to the circus elephant.—Omaha Bee.

Protect us, heaven! They have begun sending snakes to New York druggists through the mail. At least a druggist says he got one. Of course it is possible he may have been putting up rock and rye for medicinal purposes. — Indianapolis Sentinel.

Ingersoll has been sued for $135 for breaking a statue of Charles Dickens in a house that he rented furnished. The owner has only himself to blame, for Colonel Ingersoll is a notorious iconoclast.—Boston Traveler.

Russell Sage gave a little flower girl whom he accidentally jostled a $5 bill, and Hetty Green has leased a cottage at Newport. Is the millennium in the offing, or have those New York reporters been stringing us about these worthy people?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heerd you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his presence.

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

THE GOOD HEALTH

Promised by

Paine's Celery Compound

Nothing Vague or Indefinite About Results

There is nothing indefinite about the kind of "good health" that is promised by Paine's Celery Compound and that is so strongly vouched for by letters that come from our best people. Paine's Celery Compound among other blessings gives firmer and stronger nerves, perfect circulation, complete digestion, clear complexion, sweeter breath and more regular bodily functions. These blessings are always secured by Paine's Celery Compound when other remedies fail.

It is foolish and criminal to neglect daily aches, pains and the unmistakable symptoms of dangerous diseases, when it is well known that a few bottles of Paine's Celery Compound will completely banish every trouble and give a condition of health that guarantees a long and happy life.

Every man or woman whose nervous strength is overtaxed, or whose life is a busy one and full of mental worries, will soon feel the invigorating and vitalizing effects of one or two bottles of nature's health-giver, and see his or her health improve after the first dose of this greatest of all remedies.

Repudiates Laurier.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Mr. Thos. C. Casgrain, M.P., one of the leading French Conservative members of Parliament, in addressing the electors of Granby last night repudiated the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Tarte on the question of sending a Canadian contingent. They did not represent the real sentiment of Quebec, he said, and the hesitation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Tarte's opposition to the scheme had caused French Canada an incalculable wrong in the eyes of the Mother Country and other provinces.

Civic Row at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—Civic departments here have again fallen out. The Board of Works ordered the Engineer to make certain repairs costing $2,000. The Finance Committee refuses to authorize the expenditure, and has warned the Engineer that cheques for any money spent on the repairs will not be signed. The Board of Works has already overdrawn its appropriation, but the Finance Committee promises to do what it can to furnish the money if the Engineer furnish a detailed statement of the repairs.

GENERAL SYMONS DEAD.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing as rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.

CO BO

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will

Every bottle of this universal blood-maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evident sickness tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. CO BO, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries food and strength to every tissue, and gives back health when once lurked death. WAR WAS INEVITABLE

Some Stirring Scenes in the Imperial Commons.

HOT WORDS WERE SPOKEN.

Mr. Chamberlain Defends His Actions in Regard to the Transvaal.

Whatever May be the Result of the War, Equal Rights Will be Given the Dutch.

London, Oct. 26.—The exit of Mr. Davitt from the House of Commons yesterday was not the only exciting event there. Mr. Dalziel, Liberal, charged that Mr. Chamberlain was responsible for the belief of President Kruger that he, Chamberlain, was in league with Cecil Rhodes.

The Speaker ruled such references out of order.

Then there was a tilt between Mr. G. B. Clark, Radical, ex-agent of the Transvaal, and Major Rasch, Conservative. Mr. Clark denied Major Rasch's statement that he was in the Boer camp at the time of the fight at Majuba Hill, and characterized the assertion as "a sample of the misrepresentation now prevailing."

Rasch replied that Clark himself told him so, and that if he again denied the statement, he, the major, would take the first opportunity of repeating the statement to him outside of Parliament, when he could take what steps he liked.

Alleged Provocation.

Excitement No. 4 was caused when Sir William Harcourt alluded to Mr. Chamberlain's "provocation" during the Transvaal negotiations. This was repudiated by the Secretary, who remarked:—"It was necessary to impress upon President Kruger the seriousness of the step he was called upon to take and the consequences which would follow any mistake on his part. It was not desirable to include in an official despatch collateral suggestions and indications of opinion; but semi-official warning was frequently conveyed in a speech. I am still absolutely unrepentant. Respecting to-day's speeches, they are simply a rechauffee of old arguments from Irish members, whose boast is that they are England's enemies, and from the Radicals who in principle oppose the war. What would have been the Irish argument in the Spanish-American war, in which Spain showed herself infinitely less capable of defending herself than the Transvaal—"

Here Mr. William Redmond shouted: "The Transvaal did not blow up your war-ships!"

Why the Interference.

Continued Mr. Chamberlain, "We have never denied that the Transvaal was a foeman worthy of our steele. Not only was the disparity between the forces in the Spanish-American war as great as those now engaged, but the contention of the United States and their right of interference arose from the fact that at some distance from their territories there was oppression not of American citizens, but of another race and people, and that justified the intervention of the United States in the mind of the civilized world, or, at any rate, in the eyes of Englishmen and Irishmen. But we are interfering in behalf of our own people. It is perfectly certain that Mr. Davitt, but for his hatred of England, would sympathize with us, as he did with America."

After the Speaker replied to criticisms that he would not accept the mediation of Mr. Hofmeyer, the Afrikander leader, he concluded thus:—

War Was Inevitable.

"I believed that, from first to last, President Kruger never intended to give anything approaching equal rights to the white race, or any acknowledgment of British supremacy. War, therefore, was inevitable. We are told we shall lose South Africa. Our foreign friends are convinced of it, yet they are not happy. Such predictions were made before, and were even current in the days of Elizabeth! But I am not alarmed. One great Teutonic people want to hold in subjection another great Teutonic people but this has never been our course. It is impossible to pretend that the Dutch at the Cape are crushed by our rule when they have all the rights Englishmen possess, and even, in individual cases, are permitted to talk and write treason. Whatever may be the result of the war, and the premature talk of the result of the present war does anyone imagine that we shall fail to do for others what we claimed for ourselves, or refuse equal rights to the Dutch in the Transvaal, which they refused us?"

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

THE EDITOR'S PASS.

How a Needy Traveller Was Vouched for by a Stranger.

Jack Rogers was a newspaper reporter and broke. He had hung around the Dubuque newspaper office for a job until he had been requested to move on. So he decided to move on to Des Moines. But how to get there was the question, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Jack put on his thinking cap and the result was that two hours later he found himself on a train and the conductor standing by his seat.

"Ticket," said the conductor.

"See here, conductor," said Jack, easily, "my name's Rogers, and I'm a reporter on the Des Moines Air Blast. I'm broke and I'm in a hurry to get back home with a scoop. You let me ride and the office'll fix it up with you. See?"

"Well," said the conductor, "I guess that'll do all right. The road feels pretty friendly toward the Air Blast. In fact, the editor is in the back coach. Come along and I'll introduce you. If he says you're all right, it goes."

Jack was knocked all in a heap at the turn things had taken, but he had nothing to do but follow the conductor. They halted in front of a man in the back coach and the conductor said:

"Mr. Smitten, this is Mr. Rogers. He says he's a reporter on your paper, and wants the office to pay for his transportation when he gets to Des Moines."

"How do you do, Mr. Rogers?" said the editor, pleasantly, extending his hand. "Glad to see you; sit down here with me." The conductor didn't wait for any more, but went off.

"Well, this is nice of you," said Jack, too astonished and embarrassed to talk straight. "Of course, I'm not on your paper, but I'm broke, and yarned to the conductor, hoping to get a job and square it up later."

"Oh, that's all right, my boy," said the other. "Neither am I on the paper. I'm only riding on the editor's pass."

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I, 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

When a locomotive goes off the track it looks at first as if nothing could ever put it on again. No ordinary tools will move it an inch, and yet there is apparatus powerful enough to lift up that enormous engine and set it smoothly running again. When the human constitution is thrown off the track by some frightfully complicated disease, it looks as if only a miracle could restore it; and yet it can be done.

"It is my greatest desire," writes Mrs. Wm. S. Vollmer, of Concord, Cabarrus Co., South Carolina, in a grateful letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "to have you publish my daughter's cure; for it is the nearest to a miracle that I ever witnessed. She had St. Vitus's Dance so badly she could not hold her hands, feet or head still one moment, only when asleep. Mornings she could not dress herself; she would reel and often fall. Her shoulders and head were constantly jerking with great difficulty. Her tongue was often thrown out, and her face in different shapes.

"She could not take a dipper of water nor food, nor anything to her mouth. If she tried to put any food to her mouth she would smear it over her face and bosom. For several weeks she could not chew her food; all solid food I had to mash up fine. We could hardly understand anything she would try to say.

"I bought one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one bottle of his 'Favorite Prescription' and one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets.' I wrote to Dr. Pierce and he answered promptly, giving advice how to give his medicines, and also how to keep her hygienic surroundings as near perfect as I could.

"After taking the medicines three weeks, I noticed the symptoms gradually leaving. I continued until the last dose of the two bottles (one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the other of 'Favorite Prescription') was given, then she needed no more. Those two bottles, with a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, made her perfectly well. I wish everybody knew the great virtue in Dr. Pierce's medicines. If persons wishing to know more will write, enclosing stamp, I will gladly answer."

Do not hesitate to write to Dr. Pierce. He will advise you by mail, free of charge.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Mersaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Texas Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.60 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

A BUCKHORN WEDDING.

Marriage of Miss E. Freeburn and Mr. J. J. Coons, of Bridgenorth.

On Wednesday afternoon Oct. 18th a very interesting event took place being the marriage of Mr. E. Freeborn of Buckhorn, to Mr. J. J. Coens, of Bridgenorth. Mr. J. Calder drove the party to Lakefield in a handsome equipage where the knot was tied by the Rev. A. C. Reeves, at the Manse. The bride was charmingly attired in a wine colored silk velvet gown trimmed with satin and lace, with pearl necklace, and a hat trimmed with white plumes, and carried a bouquet of the conventional orange blossoms. She was assisted by Miss Marguerite Eastwood, of Buckhorn, who was handsomely gowned in a dark blue cloth costume with satin and pearl trimmings, and wore a blue velvet picture hat with white plumes, and a necklace of turquois and diamonds. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations. Mr. W. J. Kelly, of Bridgenorth performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony the party returned to Buckhorn, and sat down to a sumptuous wedding supper at the Buckhorn House, the evening being spent in a social manner. The bride was the receipient of many handsome and valuable presents, which testified to the esteem in which she is held by her hosts of friends.

The happy couple will take up their residence at Bridgenorth, and start out in double harness with the best wishes of their large circle of friends.

FIRE AT BUCKHORN.

Tom Eastwood's Stables and Blacksmith Shop Shop Destroyed.

About two o'clock yesterday morning a fire was discovered in the stables of Mr. Tom Eastwood, Buckhorn, which are situated across the wood from the hotel. Before an alarm was given, the stables were enveloped in flames. The fire quickly spread to the blacksmith, which was also destroyed.

In the stable was three horses belonging to Mr. Eastwood, and a valuable hound, which had been tied to the stable by Mr. Snowden when the Gold Lake Hunting Club passed through, and had been forgotten. The dog was the property of Mr. Snowden, and was valued at $100. Besides the loss of the buildings and horses, the stables contained considerable hay, oats and a number of rigs. It is said there was a small amount of insurance, but Mr. Eastwood's loss will plobably amount to $1500.

The cause of the fire is a mystery.

ON A FRIEND'S RECOMMENDATION

Mrs. Gampton Uses Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart and Receives Instant Lasting Relief—Immediate Relief is What the Sufferer Wants—and Gets when Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is Used.

"I was for a long time a great sufferer from heart trouble. I had palpitation and smothering accompanied by great weakness and painful spasms. I got very little relief from remedies, and doctors failed to give me real benefit. A friend of mine had used Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, and it had been a great relief to her. I procured a bottle and it has proved a great blessing to me. I think it a great heart cure and heartily recommend it to all sufferers. Mrs. Gampton, 46 Bishop Street, Toronto." Resolution of Condolence.

The following resolution of condolence has been sent to Mrs. H. F. Mellor by the members of Court Lakefield, No. 43, C. O. F—

Lakefield, October 6th.

Mrs. H. F. Mellor,

Dear Madam,—The members of Court Lakefield, No. 43, Canadian Order of Foresters, desire to tender to you and the members of your family an expression of their sympathy in the great loss sustained by you in the death of your husband, Mr. H. F. Mellor.

Our late brother by his fidelity to the principles of our Order was held in high esteem by us and we greatly mourn his loss.

We beg to assure you in your time of trial that you have the sympathy and prayers of the members of this court.

May the Father of Mercies and the God of all Comforts, who comforteth us in all our tribulation, be round and about you and yours in this dark hour.

Signed on behalf of the Court,
A. G. Reeves, J. R. Fraser, M. D., J. C Balsdon. Committee.

Mrs Mellor expressed her thanks to the Foresters for their kindness to herself and family during the illness and death of her husband, Mr. H. F. Mellor.

Diamond Dyes Are the True and Unfailing Agents.

In November thousands of women will be coloring dresses, skirts, jackets, coats, vests, pants, shawls, wool yarns and carpet rags.

The dyeing operation is an important one and demands great care. The principal point is to secure the right dyes—colors that are pure, bright and fast to washing and sunlight.

The Diamond Dyes—the only guaranteed dyes on earth—possess all the grand qualities that make perfect and true colors. Diamond Dyes have such a universal sale that unscrupulous dealers make efforts to imitate them. If you would be successful in dyeing, avoid all crude imitations. Promply refuse all dyes recommended by dealers to be just as good as Diamond Dyes. The Diamond Dyes are the best in the world, and all dealers are aware of the fact.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

Ald [illegible] have given you the [illegible] when I saw. It makes a strong mixture.

Q.—[illegible] was a totally different contract being carried out and said nothing?

A.—Do not try to make me say things. I do not know that it was a different thing. I utterly deny that I knew it was not according to the specifications. You are rather fresh, that's what the matter. Your Honor (to Judge Weller) I do not want this young man putting words in my mouth.

Q.—Then what did the specifications call for?

A.—Two of granite, one of cement and as much sand or dust as the engineer thought necessary.

Q.—What is the cost of the ingredients?

A.—[illegible] granite as it is made in Peterborough it costs about $4 a yard. [illegible] made it costs $4 or $4. Sand costs about [illegible] cents.

Mr. McWilliams—About one-tenth of the cost of granite.

Q.—When Mr. Ranney reported to you it was prior to the Council meeting of Aug. 7th?

A.—I think so.

Q.—Did you report it to the Council?

A.—No, I told Mr. Ranney to report it to the engineer.

Q.—Did you tell him to shut his mouth?

A.—I did. It was on the street he was talking.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Ranney to go to the engineer in order that the engineer might report it back to you?

A.—No. I expected him to send to his inspector. He would not report to me. I was simply the mouth piece of the committee.

Q.—And you knew that Mr. Ranney accused one of the contractors of fraud and you did not report it?

A.—I never said a word.

Q.—What is your understanding of the engineer's power to make alternations?

A.—I believe he would have the power to make the amount of sand more or less.

Q.—Was not the sand used last year a special kind of sand?

A.—It was good sand. There was enough granite in it to swear by. The reason we called it "granolithic sand" was because we were supposed to be laying granolithic sidewalks and had run out of granite and wanted to keep the men working.

Q.—Did you have any talk with Mr. Bartlett, regarding the material used in the George street contract?

A.—Yes, regarding the base. He told me that they were using 4 bags of cement to a yard of gravel and cement and that it did not quite come up to the specifications. I told him that it was the same as had been used on Sheehy's contract both this year and last. I understood that 4 bags was the quantity to be used.

Mr. McWilliams—And yet 4 1-2 bags was what the specifications called for.

Q.—Are you interested in Evans and Langford's contract?

A.—Not at all.

Q.—Did you assist in the preparation of their tender?

A.—I did. I gave them the specifications I had got from Mr. Ranney of what was being used on Mr. Sheehy's contract. They based the figures on what Mr. Sheehy was putting it. I supposed Mr. Hay would allow the two contractors to go on the same.

Q.—Do you know of any threat being made to Inspector Bartlett about exposures?

A.—Nothing.

Q.—Do you know of the reduction in the term of guarantee?

A.—I do not know that I suggested it in Council but I approved of it. An inspector was over the work and as the work was being done the same as by day work I thought it was all right. It would help contractors to get bonds.

BY MR. DUMBLE.

Mr. Dumble, counsel for Evans and Langford, next examined Ald. Langford. The witness stated that the concrete on the canal was not as rich in mortar as the base of the pavements. All sand is but pulverized granite for pulverized limestone is clay. Sand is invariably used in making concretes. The witness did not think that the town had suffered in the quality of sidewalks laid.

CROSS-EXAMINED BY MR. McWILLIAMS.

R. F. McWilliams asked regarding tenders received by the town last year for two different kinds of sidewalk. Tenders were called for sidewalks without granite and the tenders were lower than for those with granite.

ALD. DENNE TESTIFIES.

Ald. Denne was next sworn, and was first examined by Mr. Edwards. Last year the Council had decided to have the best granolithic walks obtainable. Tenders were asked for granolithic walks and walks with a sand finish. There was a difference of about 3 cents a foot in the tenders received. Last year a fine granite sand was used with the granite and cement. The Council this year decided to follow the specifications drawn up last year, that is, two to one. Last year the Council supplied all the granite. Witness understood that the work was to be carried out strictly according to the specifications and not according to the way they had been worked last year. The first Ald. Denne knew of any change was when Mr. Ranney brought in a report. Mr. Ranney had stated that he had [illegible] supposed that 5 1-2 bags of cement would fill the box used by the contractors but at a test made on Stewart-st. it had found that 9 bags were required. As a result of the test they had come to the conclusion that the work done by the contractors could be laid 1 4-5 cents per foot cheaper than that made of 2 parts of granite to one of Star cement. He had never been improperly approached regarding these contracts.

Ald. Denne was next examined by R. F. McWilliams. He knew of no changes in the contract by the Council or the Board of Works. As to the engineer, Ald. Denne thought the engineer had power to make slight changes but no material ones. As chairman of a number of committees he thought important matters should be brought before the proper committees. He thought Ald. Langford should have reported the matter. He thought it very improper for Ald. Langford to sit in the Council, knowing what he knew, and allow a second contract to be entered upon. Ald. Denne thought the engineer should have reported to the Council and Ald. Langford to the Board of Works. He had examined a driveway on Water-st. which had been broken and considered it very poor work. It was like gravel and sand. Mr. Dumble in cross-examination questioned whether this had hardened and set. Mr. Denne also testified that he was the one who had opened the tenders for the contract let to Evans and Langford. They were all sealed.

MR. WOLSTENHOLME.

Judge Weller objected to sitting after five o'clock but J. H. Wolstenholme, finisher for Mr. Geo. Rose, was sworn. He stated that they used 1 part of granite, 1 of cement and 5 1-2 bags of cement. On Stewart-st. they used 2 of granite and 1 of cement. In appearance there was little difference. The granite and cement alone did not work up as easily or smoothly. Witness could not say which mixture would make the stronger pavement. He could not say that putting sand in with the cement would deteriorate the quality of the work. The base of the pavement opened on Water-st. did not appear to be quite as solid as the base opened on Hunter street.

The session adjourned till 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

SOLDIERS SAIL MONDAY

Steamship Sardinian to Leave in the Afternoon.

COL. HUGHES GOES TOO.

He Will Be Attached to One of the Imperial Regiments in Africa.

Dominion Government Places a Million Dollars Insurance on the Contingent, This Gives a Thousand Dollars Insurance to Relatives or Heirs.

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—Military orders issued last night contain further instructions regarding the Canadian contingent for the Transvaal. It is ordered that Colonel Otter will have all the white rifle helmets dyed a dark coffee color on board the Sardinian. A small black or dark green puggaree will also be worn on the helmets.

The Dean of Quebec will arrange for a military parade service for Anglican members of the regiment on Sunday. It is probable that all the Protestant members of the regiment will attend this service.

On Monday at 11.30 General Hutton will inspect the regiment, and at noon the Governor-General will review them. On the conclusion of the review Mayor Parent, of Quebec, will present an address to the troops. The troops will then march through the city to embark on board the steamer Sardinian. The route will be arranged by the district officer commanding in conjunction with the Mayor. Dinner will be served on board to all embarking. The steamship Sardinian will, if possible, sail at 2.30 p.m. In the event of this not being possible she will sail at 10.30 the following day, the 31st. The officer commanding the Royal Canadian Artillery, garrison division, will arrange for a salute to be fired from the Citadel as the vessel gets under way. Officers commanding units and heads of departments will make what arrangements may be possible for a display of flags, etc., with a view to suitably marking the occasion. The Rev. P. M. O'Leary, of Quebec, will accompany the regiment to Cape Town as Roman Catholic chaplain.

Hughes Will Go.

Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes of the 45th Battalion, will go to the Transvaal, not as an officer of the Canadian regiment, but as an officer attached to a regiment of the Imperial army, probably the Dublin Fusiliers.

Military orders further state that a grant of $30 towards defraying expenses of outfit will be allowed each nurse, and pay to the amount of $50 will be advanced.

Orders as regards pay for officers of the special service force will apply to Captain Osborne, of the Hamilton Field Battery. The pay of the nurses will be on the British scale from the date of disembarkation in South Africa.

Capt. F. J. Dixon, reserve of officers will accompany the Canadian contingent as historical recorder.

Lieut.-Col. Holmes, district officer commanding No. 1 Military district will act for the district officer commanding No. 2 Military district until further orders and correspondence should be addressed to him at London.

More Insurance.

Mr. G. H. Allen, of Kingston, inspector of agencies for the Standard Life Assurance Company, of Edinburgh, has been in the city for the past few days, and has completed an arrangement with the Dominion Government for placing one million dollars' life insurance on members of the Canadian contingent who are going to the Transvaal. This will give one thousand dollars' insurance to the relatives or heirs of any officer or man who may die during their absence. This insurance will take effect from the time the contingent starts from Quebec, and will be paid to all parties who die from any cause. The Government will pay the premiums. The secretary of the Standard Life, Mr. J. Hutton Balfour, arrived to-night to look over the arrangements which Mr. Allen has made and give his sanction to it. The insurance which Sir Charles Tupper negotiated was merely for accidents, and it is understood will only take effect from casualties after reaching South Africa.

THREE MEN INJURED.

Toronto, Oct. 28—Three men met with possibly fatal injuries at the Electric Light Works, 92-98 Terauley street, to-day.

About nine o'clock the men set to work thawing out a pipe, inside which was a quantity of tar. The pipe was closed at both ends. Hot irons were placed at the sides and the tar quickly commenced to melt. There was also water in the pipe and the intense heat converted it to steam. There was a sudden explosion, and the pipe was shattered and three men were covered with steam, boiling water, and molten tar. Their hands, arms necks and faces were fearfully scalded.

The police ambulance was at once summoned and made a record run from police headquarters tothe scene of the accident, and from there to the Emergency Hospital, with the three sufferers.

The victims of the accident were—Walter Spence, 44 Centre avenue, a moulder, 28 years of age; John Taylor, 248 1-2 Euclid avenue, an electrician, 32 years of age; and Charles Tetley, 52 Leonard ave., a moulder, 45 years of age. All three were very seriously injured, but Tetley perhaps fared worst of all. His face was so scalded in the explosion that the features were scarcely recognizable. Hopes are entertained for the recovery of all the men, but their condition is very serious.

At one o'clock this afternoon the Emergency Hospital authorities reported that the three men were doing as well as could be expected.

THE ARMORED TRAIN DOES MORE EXECUTION.

Eight Boers and Eleven Horse Killed in a Fight Near Maffking, No Casualties Among the Train's Crew.

FRANCE SENDS A FLEET TO SOUTH AFRICA.

Report That Boers Seized Some Dum-Dum Bullets at Dundee and in Revenge Massacred Civilians. Report That President Steyn May be Deposed in Favor of Fraser.

London, Oct. 28.—The veil appears again to have descended over the war in South Africa. So far as the Natal frontier is concerned, there is nothing to relieve the suspense, General White still rests upon his arms while the Boers make preparations for an attack on Ladysmith, which is hourly expected. On the railway line which runs close to the western border of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State another skirmish between the Boers and an armored train, a warship of the Veldt, has taken place resulting in the death of four Boers as against no casualties on the British side. The statement that dissensions are rife in the Orange Free State and that President Steyn may be deposed in favor of Mr. Fraser is an important one if true, seeing that it indicates that the Boers of the Free State are already falling into the disorganization which war frequently produces, a thing of good augury to the British cause.

ARMORED TRAIN IN ACTION.

London, Oct. 28.—A despatch from Buluwayo, Matebeland, reports an engagement on Oct. 17, when an armored train was sent from Buluwayo towards Mafeking and encountered a party of Boers. In the fighting which ensued the Boers lost eight killed, but there were no casualties among the train's crew.

Further details from Buluwayo, Rhodesia, show that the armored train from there, Oct. 17, sent towards Mafeking under the command of Lieut. Llewellyn, got within seven miles from Lobatsi, when the British found the railroad badly damaged. Boers were visible on hills in the vicinity Lobatsi had been looted. The train encountered the Boers three miles south of Crocodile pools, and the British opened fire with their Maxims and drove the Boers back to the hills, whence they had advanced. Besides eight men killed, the Boers lost eleven horses.

MORTALITY AMONG OFFICERS.

London, Oct. 28.—The large number of British officers killed in the battles which have already taken place in Natal has brought out strenuous protests from many quarters against the ancient custom of British officers in refusing to take cover when under fire. From figures at Glencoe, it is apparent that one out of every four men killed was an officer, whereas the organization exists upon the principle that to every twenty five men there is one officer. It is evident that if the same ratio of morality is kept up the British forces will soon become seriously under-officered. Among the enlisted men at Glencoe the proportion of killed to wunded was 30 to 136, while ten officers were killed to 22 officers wounded.

Fought Though Wounded.

The difference in the percentage leads to the conclusion that many of hte officers were hit more than once and kept on leading their men after the first wounds. Emperor Williams recent criticism of the British officers' refusal to take cover is now frequently quoted. The feeling in the army itself is that though the regulations do not say the officers must not lay down it is such an old established principle that it would take a brave man to inaugurate a change, and the adage of the British soldier has always been, "Follow wherever an officer leads," is still held to be intensely true, for though the officers believe the personnel of the army is as good as ever, it has been the history of Great Britain that they at the same time maintain that "Tommy Atkins" need more leading than any man in the world, so the spilling of Great Britain's best blood is likely to continue for the present.

Thrill of Horror.

The proportion of the casualties as a whole has caused a thrill of horror and sympathy throughout Great Britain for the people now begin to realize what a fight with a civilized enemy means. Old soldiers point out that at the Alma, one of the bloodiest battles in Great Britain's annals, the casualties totalled only six per cent., whereas in the recent Boer engagements they considerably exceed that figure.

Regarding European intervention, Great Britain's plans to meet such an emergency continues. The Journal de Geneve publishes a despatch from Constantinople saying that Russia intends handing the Porte at an early date a note demanding the opening of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles. Unless Great Britain is a party to such a demand Russia's action will undoubtedly stir up a hornet's nest, compared with which the Transvaal question will be quite insignificant.

Gen. White's Strategy.

General White's strategy and the execution of his movements are warmly praised, and it is said at the clubs that General Sir Redvers Buller will have to hurry up or General White will get a peerage first. General White represents the Indian element in the British army, and those who have served in India have always maintained that the commander there had a more important post than the commander-in-chief himself. As General Lord Roberts was considered too old for anther campaign, Generals White, Symons and Hunter were sent as a sop to the Indian faction, for General Buller has always been more or less antagonistic to General Roberts and his partisans.

European Intervention.

Such reports as the probable intervention by the powers in the Transvaal have a depressing effect on consols, and in spite of the boom in South African securities there is considerable uneasiness on the stock exchange regarding the future action of Russia and France. South African mine shares are no longer referred to as "Kaffirs." They are now called "British," while South Africa is optimistically described as a [illegible] Egypt.

DISSENSION AT BLOEMFONTEN.

London, Oct. 28.—According to a special despatch from Cape Town received here to-day, rumors of dissension at Bloemfontein, capital of the Orange Free State, have reached Cape Town. It is said that a movement is on foot to depose President Steyn, and install Mr. Fraser as President.

DISPOSAL OF THE PRISONERS.

Cape Town, Oct. 27.—A despatch from Simonstown says the prison ship Penelope is being fitted for the reception of Boer prisoners, and that the first class cruiser Powerful is expected to leave Durban shortly, presumably to convey the prisoners to Simonstown.

TREASON IN IRELAND.

Dublin, Oct. 28.—In the early morning Dublin was recently placardd with posters headed, "Enlisting in the English army is Treason to Ireland," and signed, "By Order, Irish Transvaal Committee." The posters, which expressed sympathy with the Boers, and called on Irishmen not to "dare to raise a hand against them," were pulled down by the police, who, it was said, are considering taking action against those who issued the document.

FRENCH CRUISERS FOR THE CAPE.

Paris, Oct. 28.—The Journal asserts that five cruisers of the French squadron now at the Piarous, the port of Athens, have been ordered to place themselves in readiness to go to the Cape.

NOW FACE EACH OTHER.

London, Oct. 28.—The lull in the news from Ladysmith, Natal, which was beginning to be regarded as ominous, has at length been broken by a Cape Town despatch, under this morning's date, saying—"Scouts from Modderspruitt having reported the Boers in force on the Helpmakaar Road, General White ordered out a strong force of artillery, mounted infantry and cavalry. A small patrol of mounted infantry was shelled by the Boers nine miles from Ladysmith and the Boer position was finally located three miles beyond Modderspruitt. The British force is now four miles from the Boers."

The despatch does not give the date of the above occurrence, but it must have been since Thursday, when the last news arrived from Ladysmith, so the Boers' advance from Dundee southward and from Bester's station eastward evidently proceeded steadily in the interim and the engagement foreshadowed by the above despatch may already have been fought.

Twenty Men Shot.

The news from the front does not enlighten the situation in Natal. Fragmentary details are arriving of the occupation of Dundee by the Boers. It is alleged that twentymen of the town guard occupied an outpost a couple of miles from the town, when a Boer shell dislodged them and the men fled to a neighboring hill, where three hundred Boers surrounded them and shot the majority. The Boers then entered Dundee, dragged several citizens out of their houses and pistolled them in the streets.

As a pendant to the above comes a story from Cape Town to the effect that several cases of Dum-dum bullets were found by the Boers at Dundee, which the British abandoned in their flight. Some of the Boers wanted to use the Dum-dums in the next battle, but President rKuger vetoed this, saying—"No, it must not be. Whatever the British are, we Boers are at least humane." The bullets were then destroyed.

BOERS MET HEAVY LOSS.

London, Oct. 27.—The magistrate at Vryburg is responsible for a report made to Premier Schreiner, at Cape Town, that 315 Boers were killed at Mafeking.

London, Oct. 27.—A special despatch from Cape Town says General Joubert, the Boer commander, has sent a message of sympathy to Lady Symonds, widow of General Symonds.

A special despatch from Cape Town today gives details of the defeat of seven hundred Boers by the British at Riverton, north of Kimberley, Wednesday, in which the enemy was completely routed with heavy loss, the British loss being three men killed and twenty men, including two officers, wounded. This is probably the same fight, though a different date is given, as referred to in the Cape Town despatch previously cabled to the Associated Press, in which items said that official reports from Kimberley Tuesday announced that Colonel Scott Turner, with 270 men, had an encounter with the Boers, during which a detachment of 50 men of the Lancashire regiment distinguished themselves and the armored trains did good service. The Boers were unable to withstand the splendid charge of the Lancashires, who cleared the hill occupied by the enemy, at the point of the bayonet. The Boer losses are described as very heavy. Colonel Scott Turner's force consisted of the local volunteers, who, with the Lancashires, completed the rout of the burghers, after Murray's artillery had driven them out of their entrenchments. Botha commanded the Boer force.

Four Hours' Fight.

The fight lasted four hours. Before the sortie Kimberley was apparently in high spirits, as a despatch from there dated Oct. 24, says everyone there was cheerful at the time, and that a wedding was celebrated there that day. The despatch adds—"Great enthusiasm has been aroused here by the news of the British successes in Natal. Several farmers in the neighborhood of Kimbereley have been noticed in the ranks of the Boers, while one hundred waggons were laagered at Taungs. All the whites have left except the women who sought refuge in the convent. The Boer commandant has promised to protect them."

The news from the northern border indicates that the Boers are actually trying to prevent Colonel Plummer from relieving Mafeking, hence the absence of news since Pretoria announced the bombardment of the place is creating considerable alarm.

The newspapers are making the most of what they claim to be "significant admissions" in the supposed Boer official telegrams.

NO FEAR OF INTERVENTION.

Paris, Oct. 27.—An authoritative statement was issued this afternoon formally denying the rumors of intended Franco-Russian intervention in the Transvaal war, and declaring that France has no ground and no desire for any such intervention at present, and that Russia is likely placed in the same position, adding that Germany has the only power directly concerned in the matter.

A SECRET CIRCULAR.

Cape Town, Oct. 28.—The following are extracts from a Dutch circular being secretly circulated in the Burghersdrop district—

"We call you in the hour of strife to stand shoulder to shoulder and man to man in the fight. You cannot, dare not, now that the hour of awakening has come, without blind stubborness, shut your eyes to the fact that the tyrant will to all eternity efface the fairest virtues from the soul and crush out the best feelings of humanity. Our fight is just. We trust in God, and the issue is not a doubtful one. We must triumph. The tyrant will be overcome, this tyrant who never keeps faith. God grant our call be not the voice of one crying in the wilderness, but that love of country and freedom may fill your soul with the noble virtues of a truly free man and spur you on to take your part in the strife."

FOR SOLDIERS' WIDOWS.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 28.—The English-born residents of Spokane at a meeting decided to raise $1,000 for the benefit of the widows, and orphans of the British soldiers killed in the South African war. Those present subscribed $400.

THEY SHOT A WENDICO.

Another Case of Indian Superstition Leads to a Trial for Murder.

Winnipeg, Oct. 28.—Messrs. R. G. Chamberlain, of the Dominion Police, Ottawa, and A. B. J. Bannatyne, Indian agent at Lac Seuel, reached here to-day with three Indians in their custody. Two of the Indians are charged with shooting their chief last winter at Cat Lake, about 350 miles northeast of Rat Portage. The story told by the two prisoners is essentially as follows—The chief of the Cat Lake Indians, called Ah-Wah-Sah-Keh-Mig, became a wendigo, or insane, and ordered the prisoners to shoot him. A council of the tribe was called, and they discussed the matter for two days, when they arrived at the conclusion that the chief's orders would have to be obeyed. The wendigo lay down in his wig-wam and indicated with his hand where they were to shoot him. After he was dead wood was heaped upon his body and the fire kept going for two days, thereby according to the belief of the Indians, thoroughly destroying the evil spirit of their chief. The matter was reported to Mr. Bannantyne, but as the Cat Lake tribe are non-treaty Indians special legislation was passed July 1st to cover the case. Constable Chamberlain went to Lac Seul, where Mr. Bannatyne and two guides joined him and they made the 700 mile journey in two days. The arrest of the two Indians was effected and they were brought here for trial.

BY THE SUEZ CANAL.

Sardinian Reaches Quebec—Avoid Cape of Good Hope.

Montreal, Oct. 28.—It is stated on good authority that it is the intention of the authorities that the transport Sardinian, with the Canadian contingent for South Africa, will cross the Atlantic and proceed, via the Suez Canal, to its destination. This step is taken in view of the fact that the weather around the Cape of Good Hope is very stormy, especially during next month, and it is thought to save time by taking the route through the Suez.

The Sardinian sailed for Quebec at noon.

Cruiser Talbot Sails.

Halifax, Oct. 28.—The cruiser Talbot left for England to-day. She proceeds direct to Portsmouth. It is said that she will stop there only twenty-four hours, and will proceed to Delagoa Bay. The flagship Crescent received 400 tons of coal yesterday. It is usual when departing from the East Indies to only half fill her bunkers, but in this case they have been filled to their full capacity, 1,800 tons.

After Bands of Bandits.

Manila, Oct. 28.—Detachments of the Sixth Infantry have recently been engaged in dispersing bands of bandits who have been operating in the Island of Negros. Captain Simons took a village of Talisanes, near San Carlos, and Captain Evans defeated another band

Uncle Sam Forbids Bull Fight in Cuba—German Government Will Double Size of the Navy Rosebery Elected Rector of Glasgow University.

London, Oct. 28.—The Parliamentary bye-election for the Bow and Bromley division of Tower Hamlets, London, held yesterday, to replace the Hon. Lionel Healey, Conservative, was fought on the Government's Transvaal policy and resulted in a victory for the Government, the Conservative candidate being elected by [illegible] votes against 2,134 votes for the Liberal and Radical opponents. The Conservative majority was practically twice that secured at the election of Mr. Healey.

Throughout the campaign Mr. Spender, the Liberal, opposed the war in South Africa. His opposition was so persistent that he was dubbed by the Conservatives throughout the canvass "Boer Spender." His election literature denounced Tory patriotism as "invoking the slaughter of British workmen for the German millionaires on the Rand," and declared that orders for clothing and blankets were given by the Government to German concerns, and not to British.

The constituency, which is mainly of the working class, nevertheless plumped for "Chamberlain and war."

MAY SPRING A SENSATION.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—A Constantinople telegram to the Tageblatt states that the son of the Midhat Pasha, who since his father's death has lived as a state prisoner in a Dervish monastery, at Smyrna, escaped a short time ago. It is reported that he went to England, where he succeeded in obtaining possession of certain papers which his father had deposited in a place of safety some years ago.

These are very important documents, and will throw a new light on the deposition and death of Abdul Aziz, the causes which led to the abrogation of the Turkish constitution, and the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish war.

DELLA FOX DYING.

New York, Oct. 28.—Miss Della Fox, the comic opera singer, is critically ill from a complication of diseases, the most serious of which is peritonitis, superinduced by a surgical operation. Her physicians are almost hopeless of her recovery and fear that she may not survive the day.

Later—Miss Fox has had a turn for the better this forenoon. The crisis, it is thought, is past, and it is hoped that she will continue to grow better.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—The Berliner Tageblatt declares that the Imperial Government intends to double the strength of the navy. The reason given is the great increase of the navy of the United States.

McKinley Wants Peace.

Washington, Oct. 28.—A New York delegation, headed by the president of the Holland Society, waited on President McKinley yesterday and urged him to offer the timely offices of the American Government in an endeavor to allay the conflict now in progress in South Africa.

President McKinley, in reply, stated that such sentiments had his sympathy, but in a case where so many interests are involved, moves must be made with great reserve, lest unwittingly injury be done some of the parties. The fact, moreover, should not be overlooked that America had interests at stake. The President reiterated that he was for peace, and assured the delegation that the petition would receive his most earnest consideration.

English Firm Wins.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Oct. 28.—The Anglo-Columbian Internat. Arbitration Court has given its award in the dispute between the Government of Colombia and Punchard, McTaggart, Lowther & Co., respecting the Medellin-Magdalena River Railway. The matter has been under consideration for two and a half years. Colombia's claim of 860,000 francs was dismissed, and the company, a London firm of engineers and contractors for public works was awarded over a million francs ($200,000).

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 30, 1899

PROPHECY FULFILLED

War in the Transvaal is the first real test of modern weapons in the hands of combatants of equal skill.

Contests between civilized and uncivilized peoples have little significance, and the conflict between Spain and the United States was almost in that class. The Boers have been advertised as the best marksmen in the world, and the appalling death rate among British officers at Glencoe fulfills the prophecies of the Russian author, Jean De Bloch.

The Czar's peace message is said to have been inspired by M. De Bloch's work on the "Future of War." M. De Bloch dealt with the problem in the light of modern development, and in an interview with W. T. Stead last year he thus foreshadowed officers in the next great war—

> "But in all armies many of the more intelligent officers realize the fact that for them a declaration of war will be equivalent to a sentence of death. Among German officers, especially, I have found of late years a remarkable disappearance of all desire for war. There is no war party among the German officers of to-day, for they know that war to them would mean death. Again and again they have said to me—'If war breaks out we shall of course go to the front. It is our duty. But none of us will come back.' And they are right. Sharpshooters with arms of precision of immense range will pick off the officers; nor will any tell-tale smoke betray the source of the sudden death."

GERMAN FEELING.

The Pan-German and Anti-Semite League in Berlin are being shown pretty plainly where they stand in relation to their professions of esteem for the Boers, and hatred of Britain. The league sent a despatch to the Emperor protesting against the Transvaal war. The Vossiche Zietung thus comments on the despatch—"Vigorous protests should be made against passionate and malevolent treatment of the war, which gives color to the idea that the Germans cannot do enough to show their enmity for Great Britain. The majority in this country have nothing in common with the Anglophobia in which the Hamburg meeting waded." Prince Bismarck's dictum is also quoted, that Great Britain's friendship is more useful to Germany than the whole valley of the Nil eand the Pyramids, adding—"Had Prince Bismarck been an English Minister, he would have acted towards the Boers as the English Government has done."

The German press pays high tribute to the gallantry of the British officers, pointing out that of the German loss in the battle of Spicheren only 4 1-2 per cent. were officers, while at Glencoe and Eland's Laagte, the English officers killed formed 14 1-2 per cent. of the total loss.

While the French Press in apparently hostile towards Great Britain in the Transvaal affair, there are evidences that the newspapers do not express the real feelings of France. A Paris correspondent writes that until the French which way the cat will jump, their opinion is not very frankly expressed, and it is therefore difficult to guess. All their newspapers are outwardly hostile to Great Britain, but the editors of the chief organs to whom I have talked admit that they are with the English at the bottom, although the traditions of the French press prevent them from saying so. The niews entertained by M. Delcasse, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, are precisely the same and it is nonsense to declare, as some of the Paris papers are doing, that France and Russia propose to intervene in Africa and help the Boer.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The newly-constructed Ontario Government should work overtime if necessary to catch up and pull the threshing machine operation.

It is quite possible that one, two or three continental powers may arise to ask a few explanations from Great Britain as to what she proposes to do with the Transvaal in the end. It is extremely likely that the British answer will be that other people had better mind their own business. And if the continent does not like it, Britain will be able to point to certain epoches in history when she was at war with pretty much the whole of Europe and America, yet did not get off the earth.

•• • ••

There's reason to believe the advances the Boers are now making are not quite as acceptable as some they made before the outbreak of hostilities.

•• • ••

If Kruger still believes that Providence is on his side, he must be relying upon the thought that whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.

•• • ••

North Waterloo Liberals will, it is said, appeal from the Judgement of the courts unseating Mr. Breithaupt. If they do they will be ill advised. They must know that there will be all sorts of crooked work in the bye election which gave Mr. Breithaupt the seat, and they ought therefore, to be the last men to want Mr. Breithaupt left in the possession of a seat unfairly won. If the North Waterloo Liberalserals think Mr. Breithaupt is entitled to sit for North Waterloo let them elect him fairly.

•• • ••

Those armoured trains seem to be loaded for Boer.

•• • ••

The Ontario Government must see to it that the enquiries into election iniquities are searching and complete.

•• • ••

Hon. Mr. Ross is certainly off with a good start.

•• • ••

Ladysmith never before had so much trouble with her outskirts.

Gen. Lord Wolseley ought to know better than monkey with reports from the front. He surely doesn't want to be dropped into the same class as Otis.

Hiram Walker's offer of his celebrated corn juice for the Canadian contingent was really superflous. If the boys feel dry out there there are a few laagers waiting for them.

Admirers of fine furs will be interested in knowing that the October fur auction, held in London last week, developed some sensational prices. No such advances have been recorded for many years, and the most experienced dealers were thoroughly surprised. Silver fox went 75 per cent. beyond the advance last March of 50 per cent.; cross fox 100 per cent., red fox 75 per cent., and blue fox 30 per cent. Beaver increased 10 per cent., and lynx made the remarkable jump of 75 per cent. According to one of the leading New York dealers, the new prices will affect the cost to the consumer, and "only the rich can touch the fine furs this season." Other dealers think that the prices are so high that customers will substitute something for furs this winter, while still others say that the fur-buying classes will buy the same as ever this year.

Backwoods Peterborough.

Port Hope Guide: While in Lindsay recently we noticed that a great amount of cement walk had been laid upon the principal streets, and the work was being actively pushed forward. Peterborough has also laid a considerable amount of cement walk and the work is being done by the corporation men. If these back towns, where lumber is supposed to be cheaper than at Port Hope, find it more profitable than wood walks, our town should also. Our street men surely understand the work sufficiently to do it without outside help and the sooner this permanent work replaces the wood, wherever possible, the better.

Peterborough's Lack of Enterprise.

The local correspondent of the Bobcaygeon Independent writes to that paper as follows: "What a town Peterborough is. The reduction of the number of Councillors has been a good move, what should be done now, is to reduce it to three, and pay them a sufficient salary to enable them to give their whole time to the work of managing the town. We never can get a municipal job done without trouble over it. There was the sewers, a nice muddle that was. Now the concrete pavement contracts are being officially investigated. We have a town here of wonderful possibilities. Nature has provided a source of power for us that should be productive of all the public revenue required. But oh no we haven't any men who can manage matters, and so the great powers of Nature are gobbled for the private benefit of a few individuals. The Waterworks, the Lighting, and the Street Railway should be in the hands of the Corporation. If we had public men capable of doing anything besides pulling wires for their own benefit, the street railway would be taken hold of by the town and made a public convenience, and a profitable concern. A park at one end of the town, a steamer wharf at the other, two great summer resorts at Lakefield and Chemong, a manager of ordinary business ability has all the material for a great success. The outside service should provide at profit sufficient to give a thorough service over town and Ashburnham, absolutely free of expense.

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses and a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors chacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $19.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery in Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

Smoking in the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wuz when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer er somethin will be spilled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeared uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven er eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves pertickeler on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough fer me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin fer the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen er more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 900 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heerd a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wuz.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once er twice with the whip, but Jim jist reared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there fer a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached fer the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right iff Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, fer before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of oil, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

Cocoanut oil thickens and darkens the eyebrows.

A raw egg swallowed will detach a fishbone in the throat.

A good cure for corns is to rub them night and morning with a piece of ordinary sandpaper. If this method is persevered in, great relief is at once obtained and the corns will gradually disappear.

"A good stout toothbrush, plenty of water and some antiseptic dentifrice applied morning and night," says one who has given much thought in the interests of antiseptic purity, "will afford a greater safeguard against many diseases than most people are aware."

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorising for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Elison's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye!
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras, or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Whispers of War

There are whispers in the canteen, there are whispers in the mess,
There are whispers wheresoever walked a lad in soldier dress,
Just another such a whisper as the one that grew and grew
Till it burst in cannon's thunder on the plains of Waterloo.

It was only just a murmur, but a murmur low and deep,
Like a lion's angry growling when you rouse it from its sleep;
But it's reached the golden Indies and the wild Canadian shore,
Bound to speak again in cannon, as the lion's bound to roar.

And the burden of them whispers ran like this, "It's bound to come;
Pull the lion's tail and wake him—and you'll find he isn't dumb;
And if you want to work him up to action rougher still,
Rouse his mem'ry too, and whisper in his ear, 'Majuba Hill!'

"We've been patient; don't get talking about foreign policy;
It is time our debt to settle, and what is to be will be.
We've had one bill receipted, just sent home from the Soudan,
And to settle up another we are ready to a man."

Ay, it's reached where'er our language makes the music of the breeze,
For I've just received a letter from a chum across the seas;
And he says, "We all are waiting with old England heart and hand
For to settle that account, boy, just received from Boerland."

There was whispers in the canteen, there was whispers in the mess,
Till they found a vent in poetry, or we'd had to burst, I guess.
And we wrote a little ballad, an' we all put in a word;
Here it is, "A British War Song," by the fighting Forty-Third.

There's a blot upon our story, say what-e'er you will,
'Tis that field of death and glory called Majuba Hill.
There our vaunted pride was smitten—unavenged as yet—
And the honest heart of Britain burns to pay the debt.

Dark Majuba, yet how glorious deeds that lit the fray!
What of him who held victorious shot and shell at bay?
Ay! we've heard the story often, and we'll hear it still,
How the flag of truce held Farmer* on Majuba Hill.

Should be heard the loud war-rattle, what have we to fear?
There is music in a battle unto Brittons dear.
Dread and danger make us calmer, strengthen heart and will,
Ay, there's many a lad like Farmer in our Army still.

Who is he that comes a-looking neither left nor right;
With the self-same mein he carried in the hottest fight?
Eyes of steel that match the fiery gleam of cross and star,
Stern and sturdy, stiff and wiry, Bobs of Candahar.

Who is he to fear a stranger, on, 'mid shell and shot,
With a smile for death and danger—who could daunt a Scot?
It is he whose sword made brightness in the dark Soudan;
Glorious and victorious Hector of Macdonald's clan.

Let the drums and trumpets rattle, need we shrink away?
With such men to guide the battle could we lose the day?
Nay, we would retrive our honor, fighting on until Brightest boast upon our banner, dark Majuba Hill.

Now, there ain't a Rudyard Kipling in the fighting Forty-Third;
But it just expressed our fellings and our very souls are stirred;
For there's something in the rumour of a war that seems to start
Into action the old Briton in the weakest English heart.

True, I know all men are brothers, or at least they ought to be,
But at bay we can't help fighting— we're a fighting family.
—Kate Bishop ("Kay Bee"), in Montreal Star.

A Ripans Tabule taken at night, before retiring, or just after dinner, has been known to drive away that weariness for months.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Trent Valley Canal.

Trenton Courier: The long expected has come at last. Mr Rogers and Mr Brophy, Civil Engineers, of Peterborough have taken up their residence in Trenton, having rented a brick residence at the G T Station and are employing men to stake the Canal, make borings to find the nature of the excavation, location of the locks, &c., between Trenton and Frankford. They expect a transit man and assistant from Ottawa immediately to assist in this preliminary work, which must be done before tenders can be called for. It will take from three to five weeks to complete this work, otherwise tenders would be out now for the work in two sections.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I know about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

The men-of-war of the ancient Romans had a crew of about 225 men, of which 174 were oarsmen working on three decks. The speed of these vessels was about

A tribute to its Editor by an admiring, but not over truthful subscriber, published by request with apologies to our readers.

Hail to the Morning Times! The monarch of the local world!
Whose flag is a mask of liberty, where'er
it is unfurled!
To it the people bow the knee and offer
homage due the rank,
And envy the editor's hefty pile of wealth within the Ontario bank.
His sparkling gems from Sanderson's are worth the ransom of a king.
Of costly fabrics in his dress — Rich.
Hall's finest imported things
Harry LeBrun's ties and gloves—of the choicest Parisian bore,
His shoes are patent leather dreams, the finest in Rob. Kidd's store.

The carriage which conveys him 'round from Joe Yelland's, knocks the socks,
A footman perched back in the rear, an Ethiop driver on the box;
The horses, steeds whose pedigrees goes back to Arab's desert sands,
Their trapping wrought by skilled men and passed thro' Ben Shortly's hands,
On cushions of the finest silks, made by Miss Rose, he calmly sits,
In pose 'twould throw Jim Stratton's grandeur into fits.
And puffs he at cigars, of brands the Prince of Wales, could not afford—
They cost him seven dollars at Sam Ray's, when bought wholesale by the cord.

He dwells within a mansion fit to house the proudest king on earth;
'Twould take an expert many days to
Pure marbles from Italian hills by sculptors carved with skill untold.
With doors of rare mahogany, all bearing knobs of solid gold.
The viands on his banquet board would tempt an epicurean god.
Rare treasures, raised by "Veritas" and "Old Subscriber" from the sod,
And wines——! But here our pencil fails, the muse her wings declines to flop—
Rare nectar from an ago long past, and worth a heritage a drop!

When togged out his his Sunday dress,
'twould make Tom Dunn bat he's eyes
And gaze upon his knightly air, with envy
he could not disguise!
His jewels flash as dazzling stars set in a firmament of clothes,
Of broad-cloth, beaver and Billy Leck's furs, and all such nobby things as those Any woman of noble birth, or gentle manners
she would be,
Would give her eye-teeth, sure, to own for lord, the proud emperor "We."
To help him blow the golden wealth that comes to him in ceaseless floods,
And see that needle-ladies keep the jeweled buttons on his duds.

His cash comes to his hand unsought, he never need present a bill,
Subscribers and the men of ads., rush up to pour it in his till.
And if the Editor should be out at lunch or at the corner store
They fold the green-hued bills in wads and shove them underneath his door.
All hail this might editor! his life is an elysian dream!
Upon the earth he proudly reigns, a monarch clothed with power supreme!
Lives such a life of heavenly ease that when he hears the trumpet blow He'll watch the great procession pass, but haughtily decline to go.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up
Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

Electoral District of the West Riding of the County of Peterborough, to wit:

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given to the Electors of the Electoral District of the West Riding of the County of Peterborough, that in obedience to Her Majesty's Writ to me directed, and bearing date the 25th day of the month of October, 1899, I require the presence of the said Electors at the Court House, in the Town of Peterborough

ON THE

7th DAY of the MONTH of NOVEMBER, 1899

at Twelve O'clock, noon, for the purpose of electing a person to represent them in the Legislative Assembly of this Province; and that in case a Poll be demanded and allowed in the manner by law prescribed, such Poll will be opened on the FOURTEENTH DAY OF THE MONTH OF NOVEMBER, in the year 1899, in each of the Townships, Wards, or Polling Subdivisions in which a polling place is to be opened and kept according to law, of which due notice will be given on the Day of Nomination, of all which every person is hereby required to take notice, and to govern himself accordingly.

Given under my hand at Peterborough, this 26th day of the month of October in the year 1899.

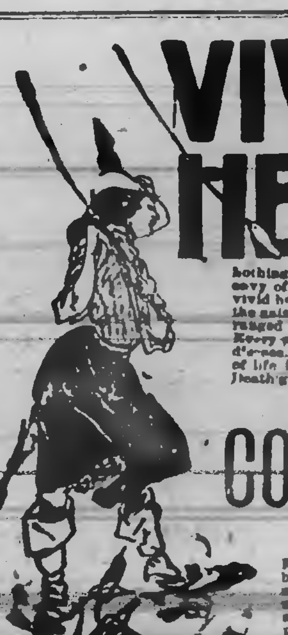
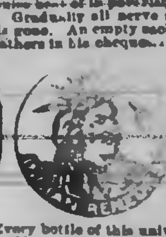
RETURNING OFFICER.



VIVID HEALTH

Nothing as rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the faltering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.



CO-BO

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but the GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will.

Every bottle of this universal blood maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evidence of a [illegible] tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach [illegible] undermines the [illegible] system. CO-BO, by its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of malnutrition, makes blood and carries food and strength to every tissue, and gives back health where once lurked death. THE TURF REVIEW.

Sirock, 2:14½, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Narion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¼ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:23, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:06¾.

A horse with the peculiar name of Esaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altiro, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:12¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27½.—

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

Ald. Sawers was the first witness called. He was questioned by Mayor Davis. He became a member of the Board of Works on Aug. 7th. Mr. Ranney's re- Works on Aug 7th. Mr. Ranney's report was the first he knew of any difficulty regarding the sidewalk contracts. No one had ever approached him improperly regarding any contracts. He did not know of any instructions being given for any changes in the specifications.

Ald. Sawers went on—"I saw these crossings taken up. They did not look very good, according to my idea. They were soft and sandy in the base. There seemed to be no bond in it. When the crossings were being taken up and we saw the work that had been done I was one of those that wanted a Council meeting called for the purpose of stopping the work that was yet going on. I was at the test made on Stewart street on 28th September. The mixture of two parts of granite and one of cement made a good pavement. In coming from the test with Mr. Hays, I advised him to make the contractors carry out the specifications. I saw Mr. Sheehy's men mix their material. I am certain they did not put in enough cement for the base. They put in four bags where 4 1-2 were required.

To R. F. McWilliams—"I understood always that the pavements were to be made of two parts of granite to one of cement. The Council or Board of Works never changed the specifications. I do not think that the engineer had power to make any but slight changes."

Q—Do you think it was Mr. Langford's duty to report what he knew to his committee? A—I do.

Q—Did you have any talk with Mr. Dawson regarding the Evans & Langford contract. A—No.

Q—Was Mr. Dawson looking after his work as an inspector? A—Not in my opinion as an alderman.

Q—In what way? A—He was away from his work. I saw that he was not at his work on two or three occasions. One time he was away half an hour.

Judge Weller here objected that Mr. Dawson was not present to answer these accusations against him.

Mr. Edwards also made a complaint here. Mr. McWilliams had given him certain information but afterwards when he, Mr Edwards was through his examination, Mr. McWilliams got up and asked questions concerning matters of which he, Mr. Edwards, had never heard before. He complained that it put him in a false position by implying that he had neglected to ask some pertinent question.

Judge Weller replied that he could not compel anyone to go to Mr. Edwards with information. He asked Mr. McWilliams to leave the questions regarding Mr. Dawson until that gentleman was present.

Mr. Dennistoun next questioned Ald. Sawers—

Q.—Don't you know that Star cement has been used on all the to dressing on these pavements ?

A.—It has, as far as I know.

Mr. Dennistoun read a clause from the specifications calling for "approved" cement in the base. This means approved by the engineer, he pointed out.

Q—You have no more animus in this matter against Mr. Sheehy than against Evans & Longford. A—No.

Q—And you went all over Mr. Sheehy's contract tapping for hollow places?

A—Yes, and over Evans & Langford's contract.

Q—Did you sound with Mr. Rose? A—Yes, at Dr. Halliday's and Mr. Hazlett's corner.

Q—Did you send Mr. Rose around to tap at other places? A—I did not.

Q—Did you tell Mr. Hay of the hollow sounding places? A—I did. He said if it sounded hollow it could not be good work. I also told him of taking up the slabs from the Water street pavement and he also said it could not be good work.

Q—Did you see in the specifications that sand or dust could be added to the approval of the engineer? A I saw something about sand or dust on the last page.

Q—You told Mr. Hay that he ought to make Sheehy go according to the specifications. What did he say? A—He said that he would not as Mr. Sheehy would charge extras.

Q—Then you knew that Mr. Hay was satisfied with Sheehy's work? A—I cannot answer that.

Q—What did Mr. Hay mean by extras? A—I cannot tell.

Q—Were the inspectors supposed to supervise the work? A—They were supposed to be on the work all the time.

Alderman Hall.

Alderman Hall was next sworn. Mr. Edwards questioned him first.

Q.—Do you know of any irregularity in the construction of the pavements ?

A.—Nothing except what was told in Mr. Ranney's report.

Q.—What do you know of the cement that was to be used ?

A.—In the committee room it was decided that Ensign cement could be used in the base. I do not think there was any resolution passed.

Q.—The matter of carrying out the specifications was left to the engineer ?

A.—Entirely.

Q.—Have you ever been improperly approached regarding these contracts ?

A.—I have never been approached in any way. I know of no aldermen being approached.

Q.—What can you say of the test made on Stewart street ?

A.—The granite used was not screened. It contained dust and sand.

The witness was then questioned by R. F. McWilliam. He imparted no new information and was unwilling to express any opinion as Mr. Hay's powers, or as to whether Ald. Langford had neglected his duty in not reporting what he knew to the Council. Mr. Hall went on to say that the engineer was supposed to be entirely independent, especially of the chairman. The chairman was no more bound by duty to report what he knew than was any other member.

Judge Weller pointed out if the chairman was of the opinion that the contractors were doing wrong it would be his duty to report. But as long as the chairman thought they were doing right he was not called on to interfere.

Ald. Hall expressed the view that if any alderman knew that the engineer had allowed any material change from what was contemplated it was the duty of that alderman to report to the Council.

Mr. Dennistoun cross-examined Mr. Hall, chiefly to bring out clearly the point that the granite used in the test was not cleaned.

ALDERMAN NEILL.

The first Ald. Neill heard of these changes was from Mr. Ranney's letter. He remembered that Mr. Hay was then asked to report. He heard charges of malfeasance but, looking around, he could not see who was the man who had his fingers greased. The witness had not been a party to anything of that sort. He heard a discussion in Council regarding cement and believed it was understood that Ensign cement could be used in the base.

Ald. Neill was questioned by R. F. McWilliams. The witness believed that if the chairman of the Board of Works knew of any material change in work going on he should report it to the engineer and in so doing would do his duty. Mr. McWilliams tried hard to get Ald. Neill to say that the chairman should have reported to his committee but Ald. Neill preferred to answer it the other way. He held that the engineer should have reported. Ald. Neill had he known of any very important change, would have asked the engineer to report. If he did not report he would ask him a second time, then a third time, then he might, if it was important, have brought the matter before the committee himself.

Ald. Langford asked Ald. Neill who it was that urged the taking up the driveway crossings. The witness did not remember. Ald. Langford went on to say that he, himself, was the one who had urged it. It was through his movements, that this work was done. Much had been said about these crossings and it might look as if he had been anxious to keep the sidewalks down. He wanted to dispel any such idea.

Mr. Dennistoun questioned the aldermen present regarding the cost of the work being done by day work. He first asked Ald. Sawers. Ald. Sawers did not know the cost. Mr. Dennistoun asked him if he was willing that one or two aldermen should do all the work they liked and at whatever cost they liked, without the Council knowing how much it was. Ald. Sawers replied that he put his trust in day work. Mr. Dennistoun asked Ald. McWilliams. Ald. McWilliams replied that it was being done cheaper by day work than by contract. Mr. Dennistoun told Ald. McWilliams that this enquiry may go a little farther than he anticipates. The latter replied that it made no difference to him how far it went. Mr. Dennistoun, therefore, insisted that reports be brought in showing the detailed cost of all paving done by day work.

Mr. McWilliams gave notice that he will ask Mr. Sheehy to produce his statement of the amount of granite, sand, etc., used by him and the list of men employed.

The investigation then adjourned till two o'clock.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored climes.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

A BURDEN LIFTED.

When a woman who has long suffered from female troubles, is again restored to health she feels that a tremendous burden has been lifted from her shoulders. Her figure rounds out again. Color comes to her cheeks, and sparkle to her eyes. She feels much the same as when a girl, and if the neighbors wouldn't talk, the chances are she would go out and have a good romp, as in childhood's days. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription lifts the burden of disease from women. It allays inflammation and stops drains in the feminine organs. It strengthens the fragile supports that hold the internal organs in place. It corrects irregularities. It drives away the "blues" and banishes nervousness. The ordeal of child-bearing is rendered an occasion of no danger and little pain. It is the best medicine that Dr. R. V. Pierce, the long experienced specialist in woman's diseases, ever made. The Doctor will give free, fatherly advice to all women who write him at Buffalo, N. Y. No fee whatever is charged.

"I was a great sufferer for four years from displacement and ulceration," writes Mrs. Mary Pickering, of Ollie, Keokuk County, Iowa. "At the time I began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I was not able to sit up in bed. I took eight bottles and got to be a stout woman. I also gave Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to my little daughter for quinsy and enlarged tonsils and it completely cured her. Any doubting this can write to me, enclosing a stamp, and I will answer."

Honest dealers will not urge substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines. There are no other medicines in the world "just as good," although avaricious druggists will sometimes say so for the sake of the greater profit to be made upon the inferior articles.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Britain's Just War.

Yesterday Rev Dr Torrance, of St. Paul's church, referred, in his discourse in the morning to the Boer war. He said that he had carefully followed the dispute, and was convinced that Great Britain was compelled to fight. She had done everything possible to avoid a conflict, but without success. Hence the war was a just one, and he prayed fervently that success would follow the British armies.

Pet Deer Slain.

Mr Dave Conroy owned a pet deer, which was a general favorite not only amongst the members of his own family, but was also petted by the youngsters of the neighborhood where Dave resides. A few days ago the deer wandered away and was killed—a natural result, as might be expected. Mr Conroy was tearing mad when he heard of it, and had Harry Bickle, summoned before County Police Magistrate Edmison, charged with the killing. It is said that the collar the pet animal used to wear was found in Bickle's possession. Bickle appeared before Magistrate Edmison on the charge Thursday evening and the matter was enlarged until Friday next.

Boys Punished.

Arthur Graham, Hector Glancy and Frank O'Connor, were fined $10 and $5, respectively, for assaulting Robert Redmond on Tuesday night last. The particulars of the assault have already been published in the Times. The boys got off lightly.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr. J Gordon Dalgety of 218-200 Washington street, Chicago, will for a few days exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

"What Happened to Jones."

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather a very large and enthusiastic audience greeted Broadhurst's production "What Happened to Jones" at Bradburn's Opera House Saturday night. The play is what it was represented to be a roaring farce comedy without a flaw, and undoubtedly the best thing that has been seen here this season. Mr Joseph Dailey as Jones, had a difficult role but fully upheld his high reputation as a comedian of the first rank. Miss Adeline Mann as Cissy Ebeneyers ward, delighted the audience by her quick wit and charming manner, the balance of the company were exceptionally strong and their return engagement with "Why Smith Left Home" will be looked forward to with delight by our theatre goers.

The Port Hope Knitting Works is acknowledged to have the largest and cheapest stock of knitted goods. As a leader on Saturday they will sell a heavy all wool double thread Stocking in sizes 6 to 9½ for 15c. nothing like this was ever been shown before for the money. Telephone 330.

Going to Belleville.

Mr. W. Cochrane and his staff of men and teams leave for Belleville today, where they will make a thorough house-to-house canvas of that district in the interests of the Wrought Iron Range Company, of Toronto. Mr. Cochrane has just completed a similar canvas of Peterborough district, where he has disposed of seven carloads of these magnificent ranges. His great success is largely due to the fact that the stoves are superior for domestic purposes, and are very cheap, coming direct from the manufacturer without any intermediate man's profit. They are specially adopted for farmers' use, and are built by the Wrought Range Company, limited, of Toronto, of which Mr. Cochrane is manager for Eastern Ontario.

PETERBOROUGH WINS.

The Rugby Team Defeats Ottawa—Now in the Finals for the Intermediate Championship of Ontario.

The Rugby Football players have been hard at work fort he last month though saying very little and on Saturday showed that they had a team of the championship class. The boys entered their team in the Ontario Rugby Union, and as they drew the bye got into the second round without playing a league match. They were then required to play a single game in Ottawa, in the second round and their prospects were none too bright for the Ottawa club are the holders of the Dominion championship, and were determined this year to capture the Intermediate also. The condition were not favorable to our team for an all-night journey is a great disadvantage and the wet weather materially aided their heavier opponents. The game was called for 1.30 o'clock as the Ottawa seniors were to play the Irishmen on the same grounds immediately after our game.

The Peterborough team was composed of:—

Back.—McLeod

Halves.—V. McWilliams, H. Burnham, G. Bell

Quarter.—Macdonald.

Scrimmage.—Bushell, Stethem, F. Burnham

Wings.—Crowley, Collier, Rickey Davidson, R. McWilliams, (capt.), McCellan, Hollingshead.

The Ottawa men won the toss and chose to play with the wind which gave them a great advantage in the first half but their inferiority in kicking prevented their making full use of it. The Peterborough men worked the ball into their opponents territory and kept it there for two-thirds of the half time and this agressive work from the outset told strongly in their favor. They succeeded in forcing the home team to rouge thus scoring one point and this was all the scoring done in the first half. The Ottawa men forced the play for a short time but Hal. Burnham's tackling broke up their combination. In the second half Vic. McWilliams' splendid punting kept the ball nearly all the time in Ottawa territory but by keeping possession of the ball the home team prevented a larger score being made against them. Early in the second half they made a desperate effort to win and for a while kept the ball in the visitors' quarter. A splendid pass by the quarter to the outside half enabled the latter to run round the end and score a touch down counting four points. The kick at the goal failed and on the kick out the Peterboroughs at once carried the ball into their opponents territory. After a short time they succeeded in scoring a touch down and again took the lead. The kick at goal was a difficult one but Hal Burnham negotiated it in a manner that won great applause from the spectators. With the score 7 to 4 against them the Ottawa men realized that their only chance of winning lay in a long run round the end and this they repeatedly tried. Their right half-back was a very fast runner but every attempt to get round was effectually stopped by Burnham's splendid tackling. Then they tried several combined runs on the other side but Garnie Bell and Rickey stopped them every time. Towards the close of the game Peterborough worked the ball right up to their opponents line but were not heavy enough to shove the ball over the line. But by fast following up they forced two more rouges and when the whistle blew for time the score stood 9 to 4 in Peterborough's favor. The large crowd that had gathered to see the Irish game applauded the boys most heartily as they came off the field. It would be difficult to particularize the players for all worked splendidly. The scrimmage was up against much heavier men who had a great advantage in the wet ground but our boys held their own throughout the game. It would be hard to find a better centre than the Rev. Mr. Bushell and the boys are very fortunate in having his assistance. Frank Burnham and Archie Stethem were up against much bigger and older men but stuck to their work in a very gritty manner. "Archie" checked a man weighing 218 pounds who takes his daily exercise with 50 pound dumb bells. Young Jack Macdonald put up a good game but had no chance to show what he could do. The team has a splendid half back line and in dry weather could have won by 20 points. Vic. McWilliams, at centre half did the bulk of the work behind the line and was the star of the team. His punting, catching and blocking were excellent, especially when playing in rain and mud. Burnham and Bell played most of the time on the defensive and their sureness prevented the Ottawa men scoring time after time. McLeod was seldom called upon but was equal to the occasion every time. On the wings Rolly McWilliams, McClellan and Crowley were the most effective their following up being first-class. Rickey and Hollingshead watched the right end and the men behind them had little to do. Collier and Roger Davidson are two big strong effective wings and the team will be much stronger when they get into shape.

The boys have every reason to feel satisfied with their showing and with good individual training and team practice they ought to make sure of the final games. The final game for the Intermediate championship will likely be played on Nov. 11th, and may take place in Peterborough. On Wednesday the boys play the touring Irish team, who have won all but one game so far. The game will be played under the English rules which places our boys at a great disadvantage but they intend to give the visitors a hard game and there will likely be an immense crowd to see the game.

Wednesday Half Holiday.

The Mayor has been waited on, we understand by two deputations, in regard to proclaiming a half holiday on Wednesday next—one in favor of the holiday, representing nearly all the leading business concerns in town, and one against the movement, headed by Mr Robert Fair. It is satisfactory to know that the Mayor decided in favor of granting a half holiday, and posters have been issued from the Times job rooms proclaiming the same. The half holiday is given in honor of the visit of the Irish football team.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Court of Revision meets to-night.

The article which recently appeared in the Times complaining of the damage done to vacant houses in town by boys, has had the desired effect. This morning boys from the Reid street neighborhood will be in police court on a charge of breaking windows by throwing stones.

Mr W B Banford's fine collie dog was stolen Friday by two tramps. They were traced as far as Cavanville but there they left the track and took to the country.

Rev J E Moore and Rev J A McCamus of Lakefield, exchanged pulpits yesterday.

Capt Hayes, of No. 6 Company, 57th Battalion, is very popular with his men. He has been obliged to refuse recruits, his company being full.

Mr Dan Simons is making a hit in his profession. At Scranton, Pa., where the company in which he attached to playing, the newspapers extended lengthy notices of Mr Simons' role in the "Prisoner of Algiers." Keep right on, Dan, Peterborough is proud of you!

And now Chemong Lake furnishes us with another fish story, of a new pattern. According to one of our boiler plate contemporaries a fish was caught in that lake of an unknown species. It is part snake or eel and part sucker, with a tail cast the wrong way.

Rev J A McCmus of Lakefield, addressed the Men's Meeting in the Y M C A Hall yesterday. His subject was, "A Great Fight' and was ably handled.

Our readers are invited to call and inspect the new goods just received at the Times Bookstore.

Messrs R A Dutton and J H Yelland returned from partridge hunting exedition to Apsley on Friday. They had with them 25 birds. Joe did'nt disclose to the Times how much was paid for them.

Mr James Hill, superintendent of erection for the Hamilton Bridge Company leaves for Belleville to look after the company's interest in regard to new hoisting engines. Mr Hill is an old Peterborough boy, and has been engaged in superintending the erection of a large steel bridge at Galt for the past year.

PERSONAL.

We are pleased to note that Miss Ada Cochrane, little daughter of Mr. Wm. Cochrane, who was stricken with typhoid fever on Sept. 15, and taken to Nicholls Hospital, is so far recovered as to be able to sit up. In this connection Mr. Cochrane told the Times that he had no language capable of expressing his gratitude for the kindly way his little one had been treated by the nurses at the hospital. He thinks the Nicholls hospital is the most capably managed concern of its kind in the country.

Mr. James Hill, bridge constructor for the Hamilton Bridge Company, was in town yesterday and spent the day with family.

Miss Ethel Watson, Lakefield, is visiting friends in town.

Mr. Barnett, of Renfrew, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. C. B. McAllister, Ashburnham.

Mr. Robert Walton is recovering a severe illness, which has confined him to his room for the past three weeks.

Dr. W. T. Harrison, of Keene, who is attending the Provincial Sunday School convention in Galt, has been appointed a member of the Normal committee.

Mr. Dickson Hall left on Saturday for a hunting trip in the north country, where he intends combining business with pleasure by visiting a number of the Dick Company's lumber camps. He will be joined by Mr. Dickson Davidson next week.

Comfortable Way to Rid of the Coffee Habit

"It was hard to give up coffee, but I was one of the poor unfortunates who who had known the horrors of indigestion, caused, in part, if not wholly, from the use of it, so when Dr. Clemens advised me to leave off coffee and take Postum Cereal Food Coffee in its place, I was quite ready to do so.

"That was something over three years ago.

"I have been using Postum Food Coffee ever since, and the benefit obtained has been remarkable. When I drink Postum, I had no trouble at all with indigestion. I am glad to send you a list of names of friends whom I know would be benefitted by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee." Mary C. Whitney, Dover, Ohio.

The Latest War News!

THE

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

NOW FOR THE BATTLE!

Eighteen Thousand Boers Are Outside Ladysmith.

BRITISH MULESCAPTURED.

Gen. White Has Now Fifteen Thousand Men in Command.

Rumored in London That Boer Forces Are Moving Into Zululand, But Foundation for It is Tlender—British Placing Artillery in Position.

London, Oct. 30.—The Boers are evidently preparing to attack Ladysmith in force, and it is said that President Kruger is with the Boer forces under General Joubert, now encamped [illegible] miles from the town. The burghers have succeeded in bringing up artillery and are reported to number fully 18,000 men, as against the 15,000 which General White has with him. The plan of the Transvaalers and Orange Free Staters is evidently to isolate the town by cutting the railway connecting it with Pietermaritzburg and then to attack from the east. Ladysmith cannot be invested, seeing that it lies at the foot of a crescent of hills, while a broad plain stretches to the west traversed by the Philip river, which easily can be forded. The Boers are massed in a semi-circle round the outside. The British are preparing positions for their artillery in order to command the approaches from the Dundee road. The defences were practically complete Saturday. The Free State Boers hold a fortified position on a ridge near Ladysmith, commanding the road from Elandsgaate. Ample provisions have been taken to prevent the Boers from seizing the ridges surrounding the town, which have been cleared of non-residents. The Boers attempted to reach Pieter's station, ten miles south of Ladysmith, but the British cavalry diverted them. The enemy succeeded, however, in capturing 1,500 mules, which will seriously inconvenience the transport service.

WHITE'S FORCE STRENGTHENED.

London, Oct. 30.—General White's force is now known to have been strengthened by regulars and local levies from Pietermaritzburg, until it includes fully 15,000 men, with additional battalions moving up from the coast. The censorship has been screwed up to the highest tension in the last three days, but the object of the British reconnaissance in force from Ladysmith is readily explained by military writers for to-day's London papers. It was an attempt to draw the Boer force, which had been twice attacked, into another engagement before it could be heavily reinforced from the main body under General Joubert. General White had not succeeded in his purpose on Saturday, and while the War Office was suspected of suppressing some important despatches, the situation in Natal was unchanged. By the scanty news received yesterday a great battle still seems imminent, since two large Boer forces are reported near Ladysmith, even if General White has not made a determined attack on the enemy's position.

Joubert's Plans.

General Joubert is credited by more than one military writer with using Fabian tactics at Ladysmith, where General White's force can be masked by an army of equal strength acting on the defensive, and also with the bold manoeuvre of overrunning Natal with the remainder of his troops and striking at Pietermaritzburg and Durban. It is not easy to believe he will cut off his own communication with Laing's Nek and march to the sea, as Sherman set out from Atlantic to the coast, and there is one sharp line of divergence between the two military situations. Sherman knew that he would have command of the sea when he reached Savannah, but Joubert at Durban would be exposed to an attack from the British fleet.

Threatening Zululand.

A rumor has reached London that a considerable Boer force is moving from Vryheid on Melmeth, in Zululand, when the distance to Durban would be something over a hundred miles, but this is a slender foundation for the theory that the Boers may repeat Sherman's strategy and make a bold dash for the sea. What they are more likely to do is to break off the communications with Ladysmith with the sea by sending a body of raiders from the Free State mountain passes to blow up the bridges over the streams which are now swollen with the rains. When this has been done and every wire to the coast cut Joubert's forces can be concentrated against General White's army and all supplies and reinforcements for Ladysmith intercepted. This is what some of the shrewdest military experts are expecting. But they are underrating General White's vigilance and intelligence, and are giving the Boer commanders more credit for strategical skill, mobility and manoeuvring power than have yet been displayed.

Eager For Battle.

While General White is compelled to defend Ladysmith and protect his lines of communication with the coast, Gen. Joubert can operate in any direction in Natal without being exposed to a flank attack, and without having his retreat to Dutch territory cut off. The best explanation of General White's second reconnoissance in force is that he suspects General Joubert's intention of throwing a large force between him and his coast base, and is eager to draw the Boers into a pitched battle near Ladysmith and inflict a crushing defeat.

Return of the Shamrock.

New York, Oct 30. With her sails bent and most of her stores on board, the yacht Shamrock lies in Erie basin ready to sail for the Clyde on Tuesday.

To be Stopped.

A couple of boys were up before P. M. Dumble yesterday, charged with throwing stones and breaking windows. A lad named Frank Scriver was fined $1 and will pay for the window. Another lad was let off with a warning. The police propose to put a stop to this sort of thing.

LADYSMITH ATTACKED WITH BOER ARTILLERY

But the British Speedily Silenced Their Guns, Then Joubert's Forces Advanced in Infantry Order on Gen. White's Flank.

A DECISIVE BATTLE IS NOW BEING WAGED THERE.

Boers Stake Their All on This Battle, and It May be the Important One of the War, Their Force of 18,000 Men Gathered for the Attack—A Yarn, Via Holland, That the British Force Surrendered to Boers.

London, Oct. 30.—After three battles and three defeats, the Boers, with a pertinacity inherited from their ancestors who fought against the Duke of Alva and the Spaniards in the Netherlands, are now engaged in a task of quite as great temerity. The undisciplined burghers of the Orange Free State and the Transvaal are to-day trying conclusions on the ground around Ladysmith, with a highly-trained army under the leadership of the most experienced generals which a constantly engaged service can produce. It is estimated that the Boer have 18,000 men in action, their army consisting of the many isolated commandos which have for some weeks past been operating against the British along the border. General White's command has now been raised to 15,000 or 16,000 men by reinforcements which have arrived from the coast.

It must be admitted that the Boers are proceeding with the proverbial caution of the Dutchmen. In the first place one cannot help noting the tenacity with which they cling to the cover afforded by the hills in the onslaught upon their enemies. Ladysmith is proving no exception to this rule. The attacking force is carefully eschewing the open ground to west of the town where they would become easy prey for cavalry, and are making their attack from the east, where a range of hills forms a semi-circle around General White's position. Upon these hills they have placed [illegible] guns, with which they opened [illegible] being, according to reports, compelled to cease firing after the seventh shot, whereupon they commenced an infantry attack upon the southern part of the British force, the conclusion of which is not yet known, though it is rumored that the British artillery would make short work of it.

It is now a race between the Boers and General Buller, with a second heat between General White and General Buller. The burghers on the one hand are anxious to crush Ladysmith before Buller's arrival, while General White is anxious to crush the Boers and gain victorious laurels before his commanding officer arrives to take up the conduct of the campaign together with the credit attaching to a defeat of the Boers. These conditions all tend towards a fierce and decisive engagement, and Dr. Leyds is evidently right when he makes the prediction that Ladysmith will be the Waterloo of the Natal campaign.

The position of the Boer forces at Ladysmith is a good one and one well calculated to give confidence to an attacking army. Perched upon the hills facing the eastern side of the town they are not easily assailed except by artillery, while in their rear are the Drakensberg mountains, with many difficult passes, to which in case of a reverse they might retreat and which they could hold against an overwhelming force. Moreover they have also to their rear the railway line from Harrismith to Ladysmith, passing through Van Reenan's Pass, which gives ample facilities to the rapid movement of large bodies of men. It is a good position to defend and a good one for an army which fears defeat. But in order to attack Ladysmith seriously the Boers must leave the hills and venture upon the open ground, when the opportunity of the British cavalry and Maxim gun squads would come. At present the Boers have not succeeded in cutting off General White from the south, so that his line of communication with the coast is still secure.

THE ATTACK ON LADYSMITH.

Ladysmith, Oct. 30.—Firing commenced at 5.30 this morning, the Boers shelling Ladysmith with forty-pounders. After seven shots the British guns succeeded in silencing the Boer fire.

A force of Boers is now advancing on the British left flank.

THE DECISIVE BATTLE.

Paris, Oct. 30.—The Echo de Paris publishes an interview with Dr. Leyds, the special representative of the South African Republic in Europe, who expressed the belief that the decisive battle of the war would occur at Ladysmith. He said that, although sympathizing with the Boers, Europe would not intervene if they were then defeated—at least not for the present. There was no question, he asserted, of mediation by Germany. In concluding the interview Dr. Leyds said the Transvaal had negotiations pending with France and Germany for laying a cable to the continent, which were about to terminate successfully when the war broke out.

ARE THE BOERS FEINTING?

London, Oct. 30.—The despatch to the Associated Press from Ladysmith this morning, which was sent at express rates, came through in the remarkable time of two hours. It shows the crisis which the present stage of the war operations has reached and that the expected attack on Ladysmith by the joint Boer forces has opened.

A despatch from Durban, timed 9.55, this morning, supplements the Associated Press despatch with the information that the Boer shells were chiefly directed at the station, and that no damage was done up to the time the message from Durban was forwarded.

Full of Confidence.

That the heavy guns of the Boers, from which so much was expected, should be silenced so speedily as indicated in the Associated Press despatch from Ladysmith, is a matter of great surprise, but the subsequent advance of the burgher force on the British left flank shows the attackers were in no way dismayed thereby, and were still full of the same self-confidence and daring they have already exhibited on various occasions.

A Supreme Effort.

Apparently, the Boers have concentrated for a supreme effort at Ladysmith. They have withdrawn their forces from other points which they consider, momentarily, to be of less importance. The ease with which they recognized the German corps which was almost annihilated at Elandsgaate, and General Lucas Mayer's column, shattered at Talana Hill, show how great are their recuperative powers and their fertility of resource. The perseverence the Boers have shown in transporting heavy ordnance and posting it in commanding positions has forced admiration even from their enemies.

May Decide the Issue.

Unless the present attack is merely a feint to occupy the British while the invaders are cutting off communication southward, the battle which opened this morning may decide the issue of the war, so far as fighting in the open is concerned, as, unless the 18,000 or 20,000 Boers about Ladysmith are able to destroy the 12,000 British there, they can hardly hope to cope with General Buller's army corps, so it may be expected the Boers will return to the attack of Ladysmith after they are beaten off, so long as they have a gun in position and men willing to face the British, for they must be fully cognizant that the news of their success will bring thousand of sympathizers and adventurers to their standard. The active operations of the last few days have shown cavalry under modern conditions, armed with long-range weapons, in an entirely new light, proving them able to work as infantry, both alone and in conjunction with foot soldiers. Those cavalrymen have shown themselves able to hold infantry positions against mounted infantry, which, under previous conditions, they would have been forced to relinquish, while the actual assault on Elandsgaate was led by dismounted cavalry.

BLACKBURN IS DEAD.

London, Oct. 30.—The latest news from the western border has apparently reassured the British authorities as to the ability of Mafeking and Kimberley to withstand assault. Colonel Baden-Powell's despatch from Mafeking "Dog killed" gives a vivid picture of his happy frame of mind.

A despatch from Fort Tuli, on the northern border of the Transvaal, forwarded during the evening of Oct. 24, announces that Blackburn's force, in the skirmish at Rhode's Drift, a ford of the Limpopo River, killed twelve Boers. A Kaffir spy reported that many Boers were lying in the Drift dying. Blackburn died of his wounds on returning to Fort Tuli. Scouts there report that the Boers are concentrating strongly on the Rhodesian border with Maxims.

DUTCHMEN ARE OPTIMISTIC.

Berlin, Oct. 30.—A report received here from Holland says that the whole British army at Ladysmith has surrendered and that the troops are now prisoners of war.

ARMORED TRAIN IN ACTION.

London, Oct. 30.—A War Office despatch from Cape Town, dated Oct. 26, says—"An armored train under Llewelyn got within [illegible] yards of the Boer laager, three miles south of Crocodile Poort. The Boers had driven in their horses on the approach of the train. Three Maxim belts were discharged into the Boers, who must have had considerable loss. They returned ten shots with no effect. Col. Plummer's outpost has had several skirmishes on the Crocodile River."

From further advices it was learned that the Llewelyn train returned to Mochudi, one hundred miles north of Mafeking. Llewelyn reports all quiet.

ENGLAND ON THE ALERT.

London, Oct. 30.—Another eminent civilian, Dr. Frederick Treves, surgeon in ordinary to the Duke of York and surgeon of the London Hospital, has been appointed consulting physician with the troops in South Africa. He starts immediately. The true inwardness of these appointments seems to be the recognition by the authorities that the senior military medical officers are behind the times, and as the latter would consider it infra dig to call in consultation junior officers more conversant with modern practices, the difficulty has been overcome by the appointment of civilians at an enormous [illegible].

THE HOSPITAL SHIP.

London, Oct. 30.—Lady Randolph presided this afternoon at a meeting of the committee of the American fund being raised to send a hospital ship for the use of the wounded soldiers in South Africa. It was announced that Mr. Frederick Gardener and Mr. John Hays Hammond, the American engineer, had contributed $5,000 each to the fund. The subscribers of large amounts include Mr. August Belmont, Mr. Wm. K. Vanderbilt and Mesdames Bradley-Martin and Berns.

AFTER HUTTON'S SCALP.

Col. Hughes Tells Laurier That Gen. Hutton Should Get the Sack.

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—The scene of activity in connection with the Canadian contingent, which prevailed to a certain extent all over the Dominion [illegible] centred in Quebec.

[illegible]

[illegible] Saturday, left for Quebec yesterday. The only Minister left in the city is Hon. R. W. Scott, who is running the department. Mr. Scott was among those who were present at the railway depot, Saturday evening to give a welcome to the British Columbia section of the contingent as they passed through the city for Quebec.

Before leaving for Quebec on Saturday Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes, M.P., said that he had written a letter to the Premier giving certain reasons why General Hutton ought to be removed from his position at the head of the Canadian militia.

HAS TROUBLES OF ITS OWN.

Difficulties of United States in the Philippines Growing Greater.

Manila, Oct. 30.—[illegible] the country, [illegible] with rivers and deep ravines, the bridges over which have been destroyed, the mud is deep, the forage are short, and the transportation of supplies has been delayed by low water, and the poor condition of the roads. The natives for a long time have lived on the country, impoverishing it.

The gunboat [illegible] dispersed a force of natives who were engaged in constructing trenches beyond [illegible]. The boat was fired upon by a party of Filipinos bearing a white flag, and she is now aground.

Numbers of Chinese are coming to Angeles from Tarlac, paying the natives for the privilege.

TARTE AND THE CONTINGENT.

He Argues That Canada Should Be Represented in Imperial Parliament.

Montreal, Oct. 30.—Hon. Joseph Israel Tarte, at a public meeting at St. Vincent de Paul on Saturday, declared that he would go to Ontario and deliver speeches using the same language as he had done in Quebec. He was speaking about the Transvaal contingent, and was quite emphatic in expressing the view that before Canadians should go to war for Great Britain, they should have a voice in imperial affairs. A British citizen must not pay taxes unless he has a right to vote, was one of the Minister's arguments. With regard to his alleged disloyal utterances at the [illegible] banquet, he claimed the proper version of the speech should be: "I would not be a loyal subject of the Queen unless I was permitted to be a Frenchman, and I say to you here to-day that if it is a crime to have a Frenchman at the head of your Government you will say so at the coming election." He would not say when the elections were to take place, because he did not know. When the Government was ready they would appeal to the country, for they would be fools to do so before. He claimed that the Laurier Government would have a majority of twenty from Ontario, and that the Opposition would not have six seats from Quebec.

WAR ON CANNIBALS.

Big Force of Natives Routed and Hundreds of Them Killed.

London, Oct. 30.—Advices from the Congo announces that Capt Mohun, who is commanding the Belgian Tanganyika-Congo telegraph expedition, has reached the Congo Free State, and was engaged at the end of July, in a fierce battle at Tanguli, where the force consisted of ten Europeans, with Capt Mohun commanding. Shortly after the attack commenced, Baron Dhanis, the Belgian commander, despatched three companies of soldiers to assist Mohun and the enemy, consisting of cannibals, who horribly torture their wounded, were finally routed.

It is estimated that the enemy numbered 1,500 men, and lost 300 killed and 600 wounded. The Belgian force lost 8 men killed and 47 wounded. The enemy fled to Tanganyika.

GREAT SCENE IN QUEBEC

Magnificent Send-off Given to Canadian Contingent.

IMMENSE CROWDS GATHER.

A Brilliant Assemblage of Military Men From All Canada.

Lord Minto Inspected the Men With a Critical Eye and Expressed Much Pleasure at Their Appearance—Vessel Sailed at Three O'Clock.

Quebec, Oct. 30.—The sun shone brightly this morning, the weather was mild and fine as could be desired and the city crowded, further accommodation at hotels being impossible.

There was a big crowd on hand to back up Sam Hughes' efforts to go to the front. Another deputation is endeavoring to obtain the appointment of a Church of England chaplain, which hardly seems probable at this hour to prove successful.

The Parade Begins.

At 10.30 a portion of the contingent quartered at the immigration buildings marched up, headed by the R.C.A. band, and took up their position on the esplanade, receiving hearty applause all along the line. A few minutes later a detachment from the Citadel marched down, headed by the R.C.A. band, while in the middle were a posse of the Royal Scots. They received an ovation that baffles description. Never before has such an ovation been given within the walls of this ancient city.

Officers from half the corps in Canada are here, and all declare they never saw a finer body of men. As the troops reached the esplanade, they presented an appearance that could not be surpassed as they filed across the field which was enclosed with ropes in the form of a large rectangle. The men were in heavy marching order, carrying their rifles and wearing their helmets, appearing as they will on the march in active service.

Local Corps Turn Out.

The local volunteers turned out in mass. Opposite the middle of the field was a grand stand, which accommodated a large number of the leading men of Canada, Lord Minto and staff, Lieut.-Gov. Jette, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Messrs. Fielding, Blair, Sutherland, Borden, Tarte and Fitzpatrick, the Mayors of many cities and a large number of members of Parliament, and representative clergymen, and a great number of ladies representing the best society throughout Canada.

Major-General Hutton, Q.M.G., Foster and staff at 11.30 began a personal inspection of the contingent, and as they passed various bands played suitable airs.

From the grand stand could be seen a seething sea of faces. The streets bordering the esplanade and the slopes of the glacis and the windows of neighborhood were simply crowded with a multitude of sight-seers.

Sharp upon the boom of the noonday gun Lord Minto arrived and was received with the customary salute amidst great applause. His Excellency then began the rounds of the contingent accompanied by a most brilliant staff, including all the leading military men of the Dominion. He inspected the men with a critical eye and expressed much pleasure at their appearance.

After the inspection and speeches the contingent marched to the docks where they boarded the transport Sardinian, which will weigh anchor and sail at three o'clock this afternoon.

SIR LOUIS AT NEW YORK.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries Returns From England.

New York, Oct. 30.—Sir Louis Davies, on his arrival here from London on Saturday, was interviewed, and stated that the modus vivendi did not foreshadow what the permanent solution of the Alaskan boundary dispute would be. "It was absolutely necessary for us to come to some understanding," he said, "for we had the miners there, and the situation was becoming intolerable. The Joint High Commission will arrange the conditions on which the question can be settled. Canada wants only what arbitration can give us. We are not grasping or seeking concession. What we want is our rights. We have three propositions to make, which are: Unconditional arbitration of the whole dispute, arbitration on similar terms to the Venezuelan arbitration, or arbitration on the basis that if the United States shall keep Dyea and Skagway it will concede Pyramid Harbor and adjacent territory to Canada, thus giving us a harbor on Lynn Canal. Lord Salisbury is ready to adopt either of these propositions."

Drowned in the Harbor.

Goderich, Oct. 30.—Saturday evening Wm Rhynas, of the firm of Buchanan & Rhynas, fell from a dock and was drowned. His body was recovered half an hour afterwards, by means of grappling irons. The deceased was an active member of the Masonic body, and was a highly respected citizen.

Yukon Navigation Closed.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 30.—Telegraphic advices received at Skagaway announce that since navigation of the Yukon has ceased, that floating ice, particularly in the head waters in the main stream, rendered it unsafe for steamers.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 28, 1899

CHANGED CONDITIONS.

There are two points in which the conditions of warfare between Briton and Boer have greatly changed in the eighteen years since they last fought. Then, the Boers were to a greater extent than now a hunting race, depending on the day's shooting to replenish the larder. Now, they have grown better off. The incoming of the miners and speculators has altered the circumstances of the people for the better. They no more practice shooting from the same necessity as formerly and for generations. They are not consequently as good marksmen as their forerunners were who fought at Majuba Hill.

The British have also changed their whole tactics. They do not stand up in solid phalanx, but fight under cover as much as possible. The officers by an unwritten, and many think mistaken, law of the service, stand to their work while their men lie low, and hence the great and lamentable mortality this is reported. Again the uniforms are less conspicuous. They have learned frontier methods from dear experience in India, their weapons are better, and they have learned the hunter's trick of measuring distances at long range. The mistakes of the last campaign in the Transvaal will not be repeated at this date.

MR. ROSS BEGINS WELL.

The new Ontario Government under Hon. G. W. Ross' has begun its career in a way that will appeal to the people. In answer to the oft repeated charge of the Conservatives that there was no audit of the public accounts of Ontario by which the public could be satisfied that the financial transactions of the Province for the last 25 or 30 years were accurately disclosed the Ministry has decided to appoint a commission of three, composed of bankers as well as accreditated financiers, to examine the books and accounts of the Treasury Department and to report, among other thing first, as to the methods of bookkeeping employed in the department; second, as to whether the statements made by the Treasury Department are as full and complete as statements usually made by large financial concerns; third, as to the correctness of of the annual balance sheet submitted to Parliament; fourth, as to the character of the investments of the Government; fifth, as to the assets and liabilities of the province.

Another decision is that a commission of three judges will be appointed to examine into the election frauds in West Elgin. The official announcement adds—"Proceedings will be taken against all persons reported for corrupt practices at other election trials as the statute provides."

Deer Plentiful up North.

Reports from the north received by the Game Warden in Toronto shows that deer are very plentiful this season. From the demand for licenses to shoot it looks as if there would be more huntsmen up in the wilds of Ontario this fall than any previous season. Many Toronto parties are being organized to start out early next week. The season opens on November 1st. Arrangements have been made by the Game Warden's Department for the express companies to keep tab on the number of deer shipped by sportsmen.

The Kirkfield Canal.

Mr Wm Kennedy, of Bobcaygeon, who has been superintending the final work on the Kirkfield section of the Trent Valley Canal, was in town to-day on business. He reports that good progress is being made, the principal work remaining being the construction of a dam, the timber for which is now being ordered. The site originally selected for the dam was about a mile and a half east of Kirkfield village, but the citizens have been making an effort to have the plan changed and dam constructed near the village so that boats might land passengers there. This will likely be done.

Vanderbilt's Will.

New York, Oct. 28.—The will of Cornelius Vanderbilt disposes of an estate $70,000,000 of which $50,000,000 goes to Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, who thus comes the head of the family. Cornelius, the eldest son, whose marriage with Grace Wilson created a breach between him and his father, gets only 500,000, while each of his sisters and remaining brothers, other than Alfred, are left $7,500,000. But Alfred gives his brother, Cornelius, $6,125,000 out of his own inheritance to make his brother's share equal to that of his younger brother and sister. Mrs. Vanderbilt is giving both the New York and Newport family residences, $2,000,000 cash and an income of $250,000 during her lifetime. There are a number of charitable bequests.

Romance of the Scotsman.

Hespeler, Ont., Oct. 28.—Romance has sprung from the wreck of the steamer Scotsman. Among the passengers were Henry Swarty, a German, bound for the United States, and Edith Davis, a young English lady, en route for Hespeler, Ont. During the terrible scenes which followed the wrecking of the boat Swartz saved Miss Davis' life twice at the risk of his own. Instead of going on to the States the gallant German accompanied Miss Davis to Hespeler, and to-day will marry her.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

A Pennsylvania editor has been charged with arson. Some men always insist on writing red hot stuff.—Paris Republican.

Another Italian cabinet has fallen. The Italians really seem to be able only to make a peanut stand.—Philadelphia North American.

There is one objection to having women remove their hats in church. It gives the minister a view of all the sleepers in the congregation.—Philadelphia Ledger.

There are some indications that the peace congress will simply arrange for the disarmament of those nations which it is proposed to gobble up. — Philadelphia Ledger.

A new Ohio police magistrate is determined to have a clean record. All prisoners brought before him must be previously soaped, scrubbed and washed.—Philadelphia Times.

The steamer Panama has started for Manila with 800 miles of cable, but this is only a slight preparation for the wire pulling that will go on there later.—Baltimore News.

Admiral Kautz reports that the Samoan king is a trifle shy on trousers. It is pretty hard to keep anything on with three or four great powers pulling and hauling in different directions.—Minneapolis Journal.

A New Jersey minister has begun a crusade against Sunday funerals. If he should succeed in abolishing the undesirable things entirely, Sundays and weekdays, none of us would rise to file a protest.—Denver Post.

If the fad for sending messenger boys on long journeys takes hold of this country, there will be a rush to secure places in the service only equaled by the strife for the privilege of carrying water to the circus elephant.—Omaha Bee.

Protect us, heaven! They have begun sending snakes to New York druggists through the mail. At least a druggist says he got one. Of course it is possible he may have been putting up rock and rye for medicinal purposes. — Indianapolis Sentinel.

The Rev. Winfield Hawkes, who has spent 11 years in Utah, says the Mormon girls favor polygamy and the young men are opposed to it. This is natural. The young men know what it is to have to foot their own bills when they go shopping, and the girls know what it isn't.—St. Louis Republic.

PERT PERSONALS.

Mayor Jones appears to be something of a Toledo blade.—Boston Herald.

Tom Reed's first jury will be strongly tempted to vote him down for the mere novelty of the thing.—Washington Post.

If General MacArthur is not already in the thrashing machine trust, he is certainly eligible to membership.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

It is plain from the lawsuits that he is bringing that Mr. Kipling has a due appreciation of the white man's boodle.—Pittsburg Times.

It was right and proper for Mary Anderson Navarro to come back to America on the Majestic. She is that kind of a woman.—Kansas City Star.

It is reported that Grover Cleveland has purchased a plover field. This will furnish amateur poets with another base of attack on Mr. Cleveland's first name—Chicago Democrat.

Ingersoll has been sued for $135 for breaking a statue of Charles Dickens in a house that he rented furnished. The owner has only himself to blame, for Colonel Ingersoll is a notorious iconoclast.—Boston Traveler.

Russell Sage gave a little flower girl whom he accidentally jostled a $5 bill, and Hetty Green has leased a cottage at Newport. Is the millennium in the offing, or have those New York reporters been stringing us about these worthy people?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

(INVESTIGATION CONTINUED.)

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The examination of Town Engineer Hay occupied all afternoon. Mr. Hay was sworn and was first examined by Mr. Edwards—

Q.—At the time you commenced as town engineer, were your duties defined specifically?

A.—Not specifically.

Q.—Were your duties defined by the Council in relation to chairmen of committees.

A.—Not specifically. I asked members of the Council to whom I was to report. Mr. Davidson told me I would have most dealing with the Board of Works and if I consulted him he would give me all information possible.

Q.—Was anything said to you as to you having a free hand.

A.—Not that I remember.

Q.—With reference to the contracts now in question tell me what you know of the specifications.

A.—I was instructed to use those prepared for last year.

Q.—Had you any specific instructions which affected thje contract either as to the sand used or cement used?

A.—Not at the beginning.

Q.—Had you any instructions as to Star cement or Ensign cement?

A.—Not till the work was pretty well on.

Q.—How did Ensign cement come to be used?

A.—Mr. Sheehy asked whether there was any objection to using Ensign cement as there was a shortage of Star. I made enquiries regarding it and Mr. Haddon, of the Trent canal office, assured me that Ensign cement had exceeded the requirements of Government specifications. I therefore allowed the contractor to use it in the base. In so doing I acted on the instructions given in the specifications.

Q.—Had you been influenced in any improper way to use Ensign cement?

A.—No.

Q.—Were you approached improperly in any way regarding your duties as town engineer?

A.—Never.

Q.—What have you say regarding proportions of granite and sand and cement?

A.—Owing to my being very busy I had to trust entirely to my inspectors regarding that. I explained to the inspectors that I could give very little time to oversee the work. The building of the bridges, the care of the streets, the assessment for sewers, etc., occupied almost my whole time. I made it a practice of inspecting every work that was going on at least twice a day. Onceor twice there were little differences between the inspectors and contractors about the depth of surface finish. These difficulties were got over. The inspectors insisted on their point in the matter.

Q.—Regarding quantities to be used in surface finish, what?

A.—The first contract was more than half done and the second was begun before my attention was called to the fact that specifications had not been carried out regarding amount of granite used. Mr. Ranney informed me they were using one measure of granite to 5 1-2 bags of cement and 9 feet of sand, although I believe that the 9 feet had not been carried out at the beginning. Mr. Ranney continued on Sheehy's contract until it was finished.

Q.—Had you known of any deviation before Mr. Ranney informed you?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you know Mr. Ranney had been experimenting?

A.—No. He told me the granite would not trowel properly without a certain amount of sand. He told me this when the first block was being done. I told him that the granite was rather coarse and it would be the better of having sand. Still I was under the impression that the full quantities were being used with the addition of a little sand.

Q.—Did you then, instruct him to add sand to make it trowel?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell him how much sand was to be added?

A.—No, it depended on the quality of gravel being turned out from the crusher.

Q.—At a latter stage what did you find out?

A.—Mr. Ranney told me that 9 feet of granite was being used with 5 1-2 bags cement and 9 feet sand. I concluded that 5 1-2 bags cement was about the right thing.

Q.—What charge did Mr. Ranney make. How did he account for it?

A.—He told me some story about bags being purloined.

Mr. Dennistoun objected. Let Mr. Ranney tell his own story.

Mr. Hay.—I consulted with Ald. Langford and we had quite a conversation and came to the conclusion that the amount of cement was not so far short if the amount of sand was absorbed, and I was assured that the same quantities had been used last year.

Mr. Hay.—I thought it was not necessary to go any farther than to use my own judgement in the matter, except the advice of the chairman of the Board of Works. I authorized the continued use of the quantities.

Q.—How far did you consider this a variation from the specifications?

A.—I could hardly answer that on account of the degree of coarseness of the granite. I afterwards made tests. (Mr. Hay's report was here read. It showed that there was a difference of 1 8-10 cents per sq. foot between the two classes of work. This referred to surface only.)

Mr. Dennistoun objected here that the engineer was really arbiter and should not be made to give up his judgement in advance as he is the man who will make the deduction that will be charged to the contractors, if any. He will have to give his judgement in making his award then and should not have to give it now.

Judge Weller over-ruled the objection.

Mr. Dennistoun insisted on knowing whether Mr. Hay's statement given now was to be his judgement as arbitrator. He objected to Mr. Hay as arbitrator, making a sworn statement as witness. The objections were noted.

Mr. Dumble entered the objection that Mr. Hay's giving evidence would disentitle him to act as sole arbiter in the final settlement.

Mr. Edwards.—Are the figures you have submitted correct?

Mr. Hay.—Yes.

Q.—Was you attention called to any other irregularities?

A.—Mr. Ranney called my attention to a guage having been interfered with. It had the appearance of having been cut with a knife.

THEY UPHELD THE WAR

Great Victory for Conservatives at Tower Hamlets

TELL-TALE PAPERS FOUND

The Son of a Famous Pasha Escapes, and May Cause Trouble.

Uncle Sam Forbids Bull Fights in Cuba—German Government Will Double Size of the Navy Rosebery Elected Rector of Glasgow University.

London, Oct. 28.—The Parliamentary bye-election for the Bow and Bromley division of Tower Hamlets, London, held yesterday, to replace the Hon. Lionel Healey, Conservative, was fought on the Government's Transvaal policy and resulted in a victory for the Government, the Conservative candidate being elected by 4,32[illegible] votes against 2,134 votes for the Liberal and Radical opponent. The Conservative majority was practically twice that secured at the election of Mr. Healey.

Throughout the campaign Mr. Spender, the Liberal, opposed the war in South Africa. His opposition was so persistent that he was dubbed by the Conservatives throughout the canvass "Boer Spender." His election literature denounced Tory patriotism as "invoking the slaughter of British workmen for the German millionaires on the Rand," and declared that orders for clothing and blankets were given by the Government to German concerns, and not to British.

The constituency, which is mainly of the working class, nevertheless plumped for "Chamberlain and war."

MAY SPRING A SENSATION.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—A Constantinople telegram to the Tageblatt states that the son of the Midhat Pasha, who since his father's death has lived as a state prisoner in a Dervish monastery, at Smyrna, escaped a short time ago. It is reported that he went to England, where he succeeded in obtaining possession of certain papers which his father had deposited in a place of safety some years ago.

These are very important documents, and will throw a new light on the deposition and death of Abdul Aziz, the causes which led to the abrogation of the Turkish constitution, and the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish war.

DELLA FOX DYING.

New York, Oct. 28.—Miss Della Fox, the comic opera singer, is critically ill from a complication of diseases, the most serious of which is peritonitis, superinduced by a surgical operation. Her physicians are almost hopeless of her recovery and fear that she may not survive the day.

Later—Miss Fox has had a turn for the better this forenoon. The crisis, it is thought, is past, and it is hoped that she will continue to grow better.

ROSEBERRY CHOSEN.

London, Oct. 28.—Lord Roseberry has been elected rector of Glasgow University by 329 votes to 515 votes cast for Lord Kelvin.

TO ENTERTAIN THE IRISH.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Governor Roosevelt on November 12th will entertain to dinner the Right Hon. Daniel Tallon, Lord Mayor of Dublin, and Hon. John E. Redmond, M. P. Owing to a previous engagement the Governor will be unable to preside at the Parnell meeting to be held in this city on that date.

BAN ON BULL FIGHTS.

Washington, Oct. 28.—General Brooke has prohibited bull fighting in Cuba under penalty of [illegible].

It would not be surprising to the officials if the order should create a considerable stir among the Spaniards and Cubans.

TO WATCH UNCLE SAM.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—The Berliner Tageblatt declares that the Imperial Government intends to double the strength of the navy. The reason given is the great increase of the navy of the United States.

McKinley Wants Peace.

Washington, Oct. 28.—A New York delegation, headed by the president of the Holland Society, waited on President McKinley yesterday and urged him to offer the timely offices of the American Government in an endeavor to allay the conflict now in progress in South Africa.

President McKinley, in reply, stated that such sentiments had his sympathy, but in a case where so many interests are involved, moves must be made with great reserve, lest unwittingly injury be done some of the parties. The fact, moreover, should not be overlooked that America had interests at stake. The President reiterated that he was for peace, and assured the delegation that the petition would receive his most earnest consideration.

English Firm Wins.

Lusanne, Switzerland, Oct. 28.—The Anglo-Colombian Inter- Arbitration Court has given its award in the dispute between the Government of Colombia and Pourhard, McTaggart, Lowther & Co., respecting the Medellin-Magdalene River Railway. The matter has been under consideration for two and a half years. Colombia's claim of 800,000 francs was dismissed, and the company, a London firm of engineers and contractors for public works was awarded over a million francs ($200,000).

Cruiser Talbot Sails.

Halifax, Oct. 28.—The cruiser Talbo left for England to-day. She proceeds direct to Portsmouth. It is [illegible] she will stop there only twenty-four hours, and will proceed to De[illegible] B[illegible] The flagship Crescent received [illegible]00 tons of coal yesterday. It is usual when departing from the East Indies to only half fill her bunkers, but in [illegible] they have been filled to their capacity, 1,200 tons.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, crêpe de chine, drap d'été, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phœbe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves!

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hempstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

BY THE SUEZ CANAL.

Sardinian Reaches Quebec—Avoid Cape of Good Hope.

Montreal, Oct. 28.—It is stated on good authority that it is the intention of the authorities that the transport Sardinian, with the Canadian contingent for South Africa, will cross the Atlantic and proceed, via the Suez Canal, to its destination. This step is taken in view of the fact that the weather around the Cape of Good Hope is very stormy, especially during next month, and it is thought to save time by taking the route through the Suez.

The Sardinian sailed for Quebec at noon.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heerd you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (I, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2, Henry VI.," I, [illegible]
—"Poet's Lore."

Arab chieftains and other high moguls of the race are eager to get any old bicycle they can lay their hands on. They learn to ride quickly and are proud and happy when mounted on what they call the 'horse of the devil.'"

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery in Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a bull through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the [illegible] had grown white and were all checked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the [illegible] was on. We were holding them [illegible] but that didn't suffice me. As I [illegible] of my gun and pulled the hand[illegible] jaw I yelled out for the [illegible] and we struck a whole brig[illegible] and whirled it around and sent it back [illegible] I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape, a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded, so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

THREE MEN INJURED.

Toronto, Oct. 28—Three men met with possibly fatal injuries at the Electric Light Works, 52-56 Terauley street, to-day.

About nine o'clock the men set to work thawing out a pipe, inside which was a quantity of tar. The pipe was closed at both ends. Hot irons were placed at the sides and the tar quickly commenced to melt. There was also water in the pipe and the intense heat converted it to steam. There was a sudden explosion, and the pipe was shattered and three men were covered with steam, boiling water, and molten tar. Their hands, arms, necks and faces were fearfully scalded.

The police ambulance was at once summoned and made a record run from police headquarters to the scene of the accident, and from there to the Emergency Hospital, with the three sufferers.

The victims of the accident were—Walter Spence, 44 Centre avenue, a moulder, 28 years of age; John Taylor, 24½ Euclid avenue, an electrician, 32 years of age; and Charles Tetley, 53 Leonard ave., a moulder, 45 years of age. All three were very seriously injured, but Tetley perhaps fared worst of all. His face was so scalded in the explosion that the features were scarcely recognizable. Hopes are entertained for the recovery of all the men, but their condition is very serious.

At one o'clock this afternoon the Emergency Hospital authorities reported that the three men were doing as well as could be expected.

THEY SHOT A WENDICO.

Another Case of Indian Superstition Leads to a Trial for Murder.

Winnipeg, Oct. 28.—Messrs. R. G. Chamberlain, of the Dominion Police, Ottawa, and A. B. J. Bannatyne, Indian agent at Lac Seuel, reached here to-day with three Indians in their custody. Two of the Indians are charged with shooting their chief last winter at Cat Lake, about 350 miles northeast of Rat Portage. The story told by the two prisoners is essentially as follows—The chief of the Cat Lake Indians, called Ah-Wah-Sah-Keh-Mig, became a wendigo, or insane, and ordered the prisoners to shoot him. A council of the tribe was called, and they discussed the matter for two days, when they arrived at the conclusion that the chief's orders would have to be obeyed. The wendigo lay down in his wig-wam and indicated with his hand where they were to shoot him. After he was dead wood was heaped upon his body and the fire kept going for two days, thereby according to the belief of the Indians, thoroughly destroying the evil spirit of their chief. The matter was reported to Mr. Bannantyne, but as the Cat Lake tribe are non-treaty Indians special legislation was passed July 1st to cover the case. Constable Chamberlain went to Lac Seul, where Mr. Bannatyne and two guides joined him and they made the 700 mile journey in two days. The arrest of the two Indians was effected and they were brought here for trial.

After Bands of Bandits.

Manila, Oct. 28.—Detachments of the Sixth Infantry have recently been engaged in dispersing bands of bandits who have been operating in the Island of Negroes. Captain Simons took a village of Tulisaces, near San Carlos, and Captain Evans defeated another band.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.
Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory. But the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.
Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

Q.—What would be the effect?

A.—It would reduce the depth of the surface finish. The guage or straight-edge was produced in court. Mr. Ranney identified it.

Q.—What about the base?

A.—I gave no instructions to vary it.

Q.—Have you heard anything about that.

A.—I have heard rumors lately. None of the inspectors ever reported anything to me about it. No deviations were reported by inspectors.

Q.—Who would be responsible for there being any hollow?

A.—That might be caused by different reasons, by not sufficient pounding of the concrete bed.

Q.—You observed to-day hollows pointed out by Mr. Sawers?

A.—Yes, one extended three or four feet in front and one goes completely across the walk. That is an occurence that might happen to the very best of work. I have not had an opportunity of investigation how it has occurred.

Q.—What about the pieces that have been taken up from the base of the driveways?

A.—There is no doubt whatever that what part is exposed in the driveways is not properly set or bonded. There is cement in it, however, though the bond is not good.

Q.—What about the surface?

A.—It appears to be generally good.

Q.—Have you the measure of the different contracts?

A.—I have Mr. Ranney's figures.

Q.—What quantities were used by Mr. Rose.

A.—The same as those used by the contractors until the test was ordered, when two measures of granite to one of cement was used.

Q.—What cement was used in the base of the Rose work?

A.—Ensign cement.

QUESTIONED BY MR. McWILLIAMS.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams next examined Mr. Hay—

Q.—It was understood that you would have chief dealing with the chairman of the Board of Works?

A.—In a general way.

Q.—That was your practice?

A.—Yes.

Q.—This contract gives you power to make alterations. What is your understanding of your power?

A.—I think it gives me full power to make changes.

Q.—You think you could make radical changes without consulting the chairman of the Board of Works?

A.—I would not take that responsibility. The first person I would approach would be the chairman of the Board of Works.

Q.—Were you aware of the proportions Mr. Sheehy was using?

A.—Not till it was brought to my attention. That was by Mr. Ranney near Murray street.

Q.—Two or three blocks were done before you were aware of the quantities? Was that not strange as Mr. Langford knew in the first block?

A.—Mr. Langford had more time than I had.

Q.—What steps did you take to oversee the work?

A.—I questioned the inspectors.

Q.—The specifications give you th[illegible] sand. The inspector had no such right, had he any business to do so?

A.—I suppose he had not, but as a matter of fact he did.

Q.—Your business was to see that the proper proportions were used, and you left that entirely to Mr. Ranney?

A.—Assuming that everything was going [illegible] right.

Q.—Did you see what quantity of sand was being put in. Did you take note of what proportions was used?

A.—I did not. I assumed that it was all right, Mr. Ranney being there.

Q.—You left the matter of the proportions which was your duty, to Mr. Ranney?

A.—I did. I did not have time. I told the inspectors I would have to trust them to see that everything was all right.

Mr. McWilliams.—Then you neglected to do the most [illegible] part of your work.

Q.—You were entirely ignorant what proportions were going in using the first couple of weeks?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have conversation with Ald. Langford?

A.—Yes, after it got about half way down Water street.

Q.—Mr. Ranney told you there were only using 5 1-2 bags of cement. The specifications called for 18 feet of granite and 3 of cement. Were not 3 feet of cement required?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you never noticed the most material thing, the use of the proper proportions?

A.—I cannot say that I did.

Q.—If the specifications had been carried out there would be much need of sand?

A.—Yes, there would. The work was the better of sand.

Q.—Would not the granite you were using trowel with cement?

A.—No, not at first. The granite was very coarse. The crusher was acting very badly.

Q.—But after you got the granite finer it would have trowled with a very little sand?

A.—Yes, but it was the better of sand.

Q.—Of 40 per cent. of sand?

A.—I do not know the per centage.

Q.—But after you got the granite finer very little sand would have been required?

A.—We never got our granite crusher working right.

Q.—Did not the granite used without sand by Mr. Bartlett on London-st. work well?

A.—Yes, but it does not make as smooth a surface.

A.—A little sand may have been desirable. Did you know that when the contracts were started?

A.—I was not familiar with the specifications. They were drawn up last year.

Q.—When you learned of Mr. Ranney what proportions were being used you knew that nearly 40 per cent. of the material was sand?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew that between 40 and 50 per cent of the material used was sand?

A.—Perhaps.

Q.—Did you think that satisfactory?

A.—It appeared to be.

Q.—You knew that varied greatly from the original contract?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you think your authority allowed you to go so far as to use between 40 and 50 per cent.?

A.—I allowed it instead of the granite dust, which is allowed by contract.

Q.—Do you think your power allowed you to use between 40 and 50 per cent. of sand?

A.—A large part of the sand we used was granite. It was a very coarse sand and contained a large amount of granite.

Q.—We are not considering whether it was good sand. Did you imagine that you had power to allow 40 per cent of sand? What steps did you take to see that it was satisfactory?

A.—It made a good surface.

Q.—What is the cost of sand?

A.—Between 50 and 55 cents a cu. yd.

Q.—What is the cost of granite?

A.—About $6 a cu. yard.

Q.—Did you take any steps to insure that the town would get the benefit of the reduction in price?

A.—Not yet. The final estimate has not been made. 20 per cent. is kept back.

Q.—You allowed the contractor to draw 80 per cent. of his contract money. Did you keep back anything for the difference in price between sand and granite?

A.—I thought the 20 per cent. would cover it.

Q.—But that 20 per cent. is a guarantee for another year. It is another matter. You would have kept back the 20 per cent. even if two parts of granite had been used with one of cement. You kept back nothing special because of sand being used?

A.—Nothing.

Q.—Why?

A.—I consulted with Ald. Langford and he drew my attention to a clause regarding reductions and additions.

Q.—Did you decide to keep anything extra back?

A.—No. That would come in the final estimate.

Q.—You allowed the contractors to go on using the same materials?

A.—Yes. I used my own judgement in so doing. Ald. Langford did not object.

Q.—You thought you fulfilled your duty when you acted with the consent of the chairman of the Board of Works?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You found out by test that the difference in the cost to the contractor by the work being done and the work according to the strict specifications was 1 8-10 cents per foot. Did you keep back enough for that.

A.—No. I had not supposed that the difference would be so great.

Q.—I think that Mr. Bartlett when the Evans & Langford contract was started, told you that 5 1-2 bags of cement was not enough?

A.—I said he would have to allow them to go on the same as the Sheehy contract.

Q.—Did you hear Mr. Langford say that there would be trouble if they were not allowed to go on the same as the others?

A.—No.

Q.—Did Mr. Bartlett in allowing the Evans & Langford contract to go on act under your instructions?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew that the Council supposed that Evans & Langford tendered on the specifications alone and yet you knew that they had started their contract in a manner very much cheaper than that according to the specifications?

A.—I did not think of it at the time. It was an oversight on my part.

Q.—And you let the second contract be awarded to Mr. Sheehy knowing that it was not to be carried out according to specifications?

A.—Yes. I did not think of it at the time. I know now that I made a mistake. I should have told the Council. I thought the work was equally good.

Q.—Did you notice that Mr. Sheehy was using only 4 bags in a batch of material for the base where 4 1-2 should have been used?

A.—No. I did not count the bags. I told the inspector to see that the proportions in the base were 6 to 1.

Q.—How many feet were there in the first Sheehy contract?

A.—About 41,000.

Q.—And the difference in cost you found to be 1 8-10 cents per foot?

A.—Yes.

Mr. McWilliams—Then the difference in the cost to the contractor is a saving of about $740.

Mr. Dennistoun, for Mr. Sheehy, then gave notice that Mr. Hay, having given his estimate on the contract now, they repudiate him as an arbitrator.

Mr. McWilliams—You consented to the contractor using Ensign cement instead of Star cement? What is the difference in cost?

A.—About 30 cents a barrel. I did not know there was a difference in price till some time after.

Q.—Did you give Mr. Rose any instructions as to what proportions he was to use in the day work?

A.—I told him he might get all information from the inspectors on the other work. I told him to get the size of the boxes from Mr. Ranney. I did not know at the time that the others were not following the strict specifications.

Q.—How many feet in Mr. Sheehy's second contract?

A.—About 40,000.

Q.—In the Evans & Langford contract?

A.—Somewhere about 37,000.

Mr. Dennistoun—I object to these figures. They are those of Mr. Ranney, and are, I am informed all wrong.

Mr. McWilliams—Then there is a saving in this surfact on the three contracts of about $2,100 or $2,200. There is also the saving in the use of only 4 bags per batch in the base, which you cannot estimate, and also the difference in the use of Ensign and Star cements.

Q.—There is not a proper bond in the base of the driveways?

A.—There was not.

Q.—The surface of the driveways was to be 2 1-2 inches thick. How did you find them?

A.—Some were the proper thickness; some were not.

MR. DUMBLE EXAMINES.

Mr. Dumble for Evans & Langford next examined the witness. Mr. Hay testified that the proportion of 6 to 1 of cement in the base made a rich concrete for the purpose intended. As a rule engineers do not use cement and stone alone. Sand is invariably used in allowing the use of sand he followed the general practice of engineers. Sand is really granite of fine grade. Mr. Hay judged it better than the granite dust. He believed that the proportions used made a strong surface. He could not give an opinion of its wearing qualities. Sand alone is frequently used with cement. He had never notified the contractors at the time of change that he would be charged for any change made. Witness believed that the contractors acted in good faith in constructing the specifications in the same method as was allowed by the town engineer last year. The examination was largely technical.

A FEW QUESTIONS.

Ald. Langford—Did I ever refuse to refer any matter to the committee?

Mr. Hay—No.

Ald. Langford—Did I ever improperly advise you regarding your duties?

Mr. Hay—No.

Ald. Langford—Was I a chairman of the Board of Works when the second Sheehy contract was let?

Mr. Hay—No.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Good board and rooms for three or four gentlemen at 20 Queen street. Two minutes walk from Ontario Bank.

Rich in Minerals.

Mr John Webber, a leading geologist of Toronto, told the Times the other day, while on his way from a prospecting trip into Burleigh township, that the region is rich in minerals. We understand that important mining enterprises will be started in the spring.

Money Lost.

On Saturday evening about 7.30 on Charlotte or George street between Rubidge and Neil's boot store a small leather purse containing one dollar and four cents. The finder will be rewarded by leaving same at this office.

Man Wanted.

We require at once an intelligent man to act as city circulation manager for the Times, to whom a steady situation will be given and a fair salary paid. Apply at once at the Times Bookstore.

Wood for Sale.

Having purchased the old "Red Mills" at Nassau, I am tearing them down, and will have in consequence a very large quantity of fine dry pine for sale, suitable for kindling. Geo. Stevens, Ashburnham.

The Port Hope Knitting Works is acknowledged to have the largest and cheapest stock of knitted goods. As a leader on Saturday they will sell a heavy all wool double thread Stocking in sizes 6 to 9½ for 15c. nothing like this has ever been shown before for the money. Telephone 330.

A Peterborough Merchant.

Lindsay Post: Mr Robt Fair, the well-known Peterborough dry goods merchant was in town last evening. Mr Fair is vice-president of the board of trade and a citizen of whom any town might be proud. And our contemporary might have added that our genial Bob is a story-teller of no mean degree, although he does not allow his loquacity to interfere with business, especially when arguing against half holidays.

AGAIN SUCCEEDED.

Mr. Culverwell, of Electric Power Fame, Again on Top.

Once again has Mr. J. Alex. Culverwell, promoter of the Burleigh Falls-Peterborough-Lindsay Electric Transmission Company been successful in consummating his enterprise. The last few occasions in which the work of organization was consummated was not as much a success as it is on this occasion. This last consummation is the best yet.

The Toronto World says—"Mr. J. Alex. Culverwell, of Toronto, managing owner of the Burleigh Falls water power, has just returned from New York, where he was successful in the financing of the Burleigh Falls-Peterborough-Lindsay electric transmission enterprise with a prominent New York banking house. Among the Canadians associated in this enterprise are Hon. R. Harcourt, Jas. Kendry, M. P., President Auburn Power Company, Peterborough; R. J. McLaughlin, F. W. Barratt, and Dr. Edward Adams, Toronto.

"It is proposed to at once transmit some 2,000 horse power to Peterborough, Lakefield and Lindsay for electric lighting and power purposes. Some $50,000 yearly revenue has already been secured in these towns, including the town lighting contract for 10 years in Lindsay."

In the meantime the Lindsay syndicate who recently purchased half of Fenelon Falls power, will, it is said, have their power in Lindsay in a few days. It is evident that either in one or the other of these enterprises (or perhaps both) wind is taking the place of electricity.

Five Dollars

Will go farther, much further, than you could expect when spent in Shoes at Kidd's.

Opposed to it.

As will be seen by an article published elsewhere, a number of our leading merchants are determined not to close their place of business on Wednesday afternoon, notwithstanding the proclamation of the Mayor asking them to do so. We very much regret this, for the Times is satisfied that there will be little business done by the shops that remain open. The football club deserves every possible encouragement to their efforts to provide entertainment for the visiting team, and it would, we think, have been a graceful thing for Mr Fair (who we understand circulated the petition against the holiday) and the other prominent merchants whose names appear on it, to have given way.

Hallowe'en.

To-night will be hallowe'en, and the Times is requested by Chief Roszel to state that boys must behave themselves. Every case of injury to property, that can be ferreted out, will be prosecuted. A number of special constables will be on duty to protect property and bring offenders to justice. Already a couple of gates have been carried off in the west end, and efforts are being made to discover and punish the thieves. The public are requested to assist, as far as possible, in putting a stop to the vandalism that has so long been indulged in on halallowe'en.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr. J Gordon Dalgety of 218-200 Washington street, Chicago, will for a few days exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

Blew Out the Gas.

Mr. Wm. Elmhurst, of Keene, on Sunday night returned from the north-west, where he has been for a couple of months, and put up at the Oriental.

About four o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Graham, wife of the proprietor, was awakened by hearing loud and continued groans. An immediate investigation resulted in the noise being located as proceeding from No. 57, and on the door being opened the rush of gas from the room was almost overpowering in its strength. The window was instantly thrown open and on it being ascertained that Mr. Elmhurst was unconscious, Dr. McCullough was summoned. He worked for over two hours on his patient before he showed signs of coming out of the state of coma into which he had fallen. By noon, however, Mr. Elmhurst had entirely recovered from the experience through which he had passed. He states that he is positive that he did not blow out the gas, but as the cock was found partly turned on, this may or may not have been the case.

New Goods.

We have just received the first instalment of our new fall stock, consisting of games of all kinds, and up-to-date stationery; also many novelties too numerous to mention. Give us a call. We give trading stamps. Times Bookstore, Peterborough.

A Patriotic Child.

The children of this city are nothing if not patriotic. One little child at the Central school, asked its teacher if the class might sing "God save the Queen" every afternoon at the close of school as long as the war lasted.

MAYOR'S PROC. DON'T GO.

Merchants Refuse to Close Up on Wednesday Afternoon.

The Times has been requested to publish the following which speaks for itself—

In view of Wednesday being proclaimed a half holiday by Mayor Davis, on a petition signed by a number of ratepayers, we the undersigned business men find it inexpedient to close our stores for the following reasons, and will be open for the transaction of business as usual.

Wednesday is an established market day, and we are in the midst of the busiest season of the year, therefore it would be manifestly unjust to those who in some cases drive into town ten or fifteen miles to do business on market days, to have all the places of business closed. The time is also too short to notify any but residents of the town.

Another important reason is the injustice it would be to a large portion of the help of four or five of the larger stores who, if the holiday was kept of necessity have to work. And in fact only a minor portion of the employees of those stores could take advantage of the holiday.

For these important reasons we think it unwise to close our respective places of business.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Mr Archie Anderson, formerly, of Peterborough, is a member of the Canadian contingent. He joined the London squad.

The 57th Band are making preparations for the concert in the Market Building, which will probably take place on Friday of next week.

Yesterday twenty new subscribers were addded to our lists. The Times' circulation is going up by jumps and bounds.

Mr W B Bamford, C P R station agent this morning received a telegram from Superintendent Grady, stating that they are short 1000 box cars for the division east of Toronto. The traffic over the C P R this fall is reported to have surpassed anything in the history of the road and is further evidence of the growing times.

Court of Revision met last night.

The brickwork of the electric power house is now completed.

The work of building the glance piers at Lock No, 7, Little lake, is in progress.

Mr J S Woodward, of Lockport N. Y., will address the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute in the County Council Chamber on December 4th and 5th.

Mr W B Bamford has at last got trace of his collie dog which was led away by some tramps a few days ago. The tramps left the C P R near Springville, and went over to the G T R at Fraserville. The dog is now in Millbrook. It was an item in the Times which led to the recovery of the canine.

PERSONAL.

Mr. F. W. Sutcliffe, of Lindsay, is in town.

Mr. J. W. T. Fairweather spent Sunday in town.

Mr. O. Weese, Kingston, is registered at the National.

Mr. W. Galbraith, of town, was in Port Hope on Saturday visiting with friends.

Mrs. George Paton left yesterday to attend the W. C. T. U. convention at Guelph.

Mr. James Hill, superintendent of construction for the Hamilton Bridge Co., was in town on Sunday and spent the day with his family.

Mrs. G. J. Stephens, of Cobourg, is spending a few days at the residence of Mayor Davis, before leaving for San Bernardino, California, where she will spend the winter.

Captain J. N. C. Kennedy, who was recently appointed superintendent of telegraphs under Col. Girouard, in Africa, is a son of the late Hon. W. N. Kennedy, and was born in Peterborough.

KIDNEY'S CLOGGED.

Many Victims of Bright's Disease—Diabetes, Dropsy and Distressing Urinary Troubles Have Been Saved by the Timely Use of South American Kidney Cure.

The kidneys are nature's filters in expelling from the body all impurities. If the kidneys are out of sorts the whole system becomes impaired and disease follows as sure as fate. Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy and distressing urinary troubles infest four-fifths of the race. It need not be so, for South American Kidney Cure is a power in dispelling all tendency to the seating of disease. It has cured cases that have been long and stubborn and that have baffled medical skill. Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

Great Preparations.

Great preparations are being made for the reception and entertainment of the Irish Football team on Wednesday. The rink is undergoing a complete overhauling and cleaning. Mr Crane will supply gentlemen who have been favored with invitations, with tickets of admission, which should be provided at once. A very fine orchestra, under Prof Doucet, will supply music. Lieut Col Bell has given his permission for the officers of the 57th Battalion to appear in uniform. The match which takes place on the Nicholls Park oval at three o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, should be well attended.

COLONEL SAM HUGHES.

A Gallant Soldier Rejected by Maj.-Gen. Hutton.

The action of General Hutton, in refusing to give Col. Sam Hughes a position on the staff of the Canadian contingent going to South Africa, is denounced on all sides. The Kingston News says that if it is true, as reported, that the Colonel will not be permitted to go to the Transvaal in any position, and that he will lose command of his regiment, a citizen said to-day that Canadians would not stand any such high-handed action. It is strange if a man is to be disciplined for taking the initiative in raising a company in assisting in defending Great Britain against the wolves of Boers which are waiting for an opportunity to pounce upon her. Such a thing would not be tolerated in a despotic country, let alone in a loyal British colony. Col. Sam. Hughes is a loyal subject, a good soldier, and one who has always taken a deep interest in the welfare of Canada, and his treatment at the present time by an official of the Dominion Government is disgraceful and will be resented by every loyal son of Britain. An indignation meeting here would not be out of place.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE RICHARD MORGAN.

Mr. Richard Morgan, aged 32 years, died at the residence of his mother, Mark street, Ashburnham, on Sunday evening. The deceased was a son of the late Richard Morgan of Otonabee, and a nephew of Mr. Morgan of town. He has been gradually giving away before the advances of consumption for the last two years. Previous to this he had been working at Toronto Junction for three years, having gone there after learning the flour and feed business with Mr. J. W. Brisbin. He was respected and beloved by all who knew him. His mother and family have the sympathy of the community.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the family residence to Zion Cemetery.

THE LATE JOHN LOUDEN.

The funeral will take place this afternoon from the family residence, No. 101 Lake street, of the late John Louden, whose death took place on Saturday last. The deceased was an employee with the Peter Hamilton Mfg. Co., and had been ailing for the last year, though only confined to the house for a couple of months. His wife preceded him two years ago. Five children survive, three boys and two girls, the youngest being about ten years of age.

REPUBLIC MINES.

Republic, Washington, is proving to be the most phenomenal camp in the world. In two years has produced the Great Republic and Mountain Lion Mines considered the equals of the celebrated Le Roi at Rossland, B.C.

The Green Cheese claim is situated in the centre of the Republican camp. Engineer's report shows that there are three ledges running through the claim. Assays have been obtained as high as $62 80.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

SIR WILFRID ADDRESSES THEM.

Premier Asks Canadian Contingent to Do Duty.

Quebec, Oct. 31.—The Sardinian, with the Canadian volunteers on board, began her voyage to the Cape at ten minutes past 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, within fourteen days after the order for the mobilization of the troops came to Ottawa. Just before the vessel sailed Lord Minto read the following cablegram just received from the Colonial Office:

"London, 30th Oct., 1899.—Her Majesty's Government offer hearty congratulations to Canadian Goverament and military authorities for rapid organization and embarkation of contingent. Enthusiasm displayed by people of Dominion a source of much gratification here. (Signed) Chamberlain."

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

When the time of the final leave-taking came the soldiers were on the upper deck and high in the riggings of the vessels. One of Capt Bark's men had climbed to the top of the first mast, and hanging there swung his cap to those on shore. Below him was a sea of white helmets and dark tunics, and as the first gun from the Citadel roared out the vast multitude took up the strain of "God Save the Queen," and the cannon of the Citadel marked the time.

ELECTION PROSECUTION.

Proceedings to be Taken in Connection with South Ontario.

Toronto, Oct. 31.—The wheels of justice have started to move in connection with the prosecution of all the persons reported for bribery by the judges who presided at the South Ontario election trials. The order for the prosecution was given to Mr Farewell, County Crown Attorney, at Whitby, last July, but owing to the ambiguity of the election law proceedings have been hanging fire until now. The law affecting the case has just been settled to the satisfaction of the judges, and yesterday Mr Farewell laid information against all persons reported for bribery in South Ontario, and applied before Mr Justice Osler for the issue of summonses against the accused.

The summonses asked that the alleged bribers should each be compelled to pay the fine of $200 required by law, or in default should be committed to jail, and should also be disqualified for eight years from sitting in the Legislature, or voting at an election, or holding any municipal office. Justice Osler will consult with his colleagues, Justice Ferguson and Justice Rose, in regard to to the matter, and if the summonses are issued the trial will take place at Whitby.

BRITISH SOLDIERS MEET A TERRIBLE DISASTER

When the Boers Surround and Capture Two Infantry Regiments and a Field Battery.

WHO LAY DOWN ARMS AND SURRENDER TO GREAT ODDS AFTER LOSING VERY HEAVILY.

Gen. White Acquits Them of all Blame and Admits the Sole Resbonsibility Upon Himself. British War Office Orders a Second Army Corps to be Prepared for Service.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The news received this morning from the seat of war in Natal is one which should fill all patriotic Britions with the deepest of sorrow. Despite the work of the military censor it is evident that General White has allowed himself to be drawn out from Ladysmith and defeated by the Boers upon their own ground. It has for some time been predicted that General White's martial and his desire to win laurels would induce him to abandon defensive tactics and endeavor to smash the Boers before the arrival of General Buller. This prediction has, alas! come true and Great Britain has suffered one of the most serious disasters in the annals of her colonial wars.

Partial parallels of the disaster of yesterday, in which the whole of General White's left wing, comprising two of the finest regiments in the British service and numbering towards 2,000 men, with a six-gun battery were surrounded and compelled to surrender, instantly spring to one's mind, but there is no parallel which exactly fits the present case. The capture of Lord Cornwallis and his 4,000 men by the colonial Americans at Yorktown, one hundred and eighteen years ago this very month, is a near analogy, though it is not likely that it will prove an omen. It is only twenty years ago that the gallant 24th Regiment was cut to pieces by the Zulus at Isandhlwana, only 50 miles from Ladysmith, the scene of the most recent reverse to British arms. Broukerspruit, where Colonel Anstruther and over two hundred men of the 94th were ambushed and massacred by the Boers in 1881, is also not far away.

But the memory of these disasters and that of a score of others has already become weakened, for the marvellous vitality of England has enabled her to rise superior to them. As Voltaire showed in his history of Charles VII., it is the nation that can sustain the most defeats which comes out victorious in the long run and in this case like others, England will win victory through defeat. She is not sitting down in sorrow because she has lost at Ladysmith, but with the alacrity of a resourceful nation has already ordered the despatch of two infantry battalions and a battery to make good the ones which were taken. The English regiments at Ladysmith will "come again," as did Kipling's soldiers in "The Drums of the Fore and Aft," and next time there will be fire work among the Boers.

But the truth must be told and the importance of the reverse at Ladysmith cannot be under-estimated. A mistake has been made somewhere. It is evident from a perusal of the despatches that General White allowed his centre and right wing to be drawn away, leaving the gallant Gloucesters and the Irish Fusiliers isolated and without support, whereupon the Boers having developed an attack in that direction, entangled them among the defiles, surrounded them and compelled a capitulation. This is the story of the fight in a nutshell. General White's "reconnaissance in force," like the "brilliant strategical movement" of General Yule, has resulted in gall and wormwood. And now the roar of battle is being heard from the direction of Umbulane, one of the small hills which surround the British position at Ladysmith into which shells are dropping, and there comes a report that General White meditates a retreat to Pietermaritzburg, though this is hardly regarded as probable.

BOERS AGAIN ATTACK.

Cape Town, Oct. 31.—12.10 p.m.—The South African News publishes the following despatch—"Ladysmith, Oct. 31.—A battle is proceeding at the foot of Umbanbane, a few miles from Ladysmith. Several shells have dropped into the town.

TWO REGIMENTS CAPTURED.

London, Oct. 31.—The War Office has received a despatch from General White, commanding the British forces at Ladysmith, reporting that the Royal Irish Fusiliers, No. 10 Mountain Battery and the Gloucestershire Regiment were surrounded in the hills by the Boers and, after losing heavily, obliged to capitulate. General White adds that the casualties have not yet been ascertained.

DISASTER TO THE BRITISH.

London, Oct. 31.—The following is the text of General White's despatch to the War Office—

"Ladysmith, Oct. 30.—10.30 p. m.—I have to report a disaster to the column sent by me to take a position on a hill to guard the left flank of the troops. In these operations to-day the Royal Irish Fusiliers, No. 10 Mountain Battery and the Gloucester Regiment were surrounded in the hills and, after losing heavily, had to capitulate. The casualties have not been ascertained.

"A man of the Fusiliers, employed as a hospital orderly, came in under a flag of truce with a letter from the survivors of the column, who asked for assistance, to bury the dead. I fear there is no doubt of the truth of the report.

"I formed a plan, in the carrying out of which the disaster occurred, and I am alone responsible for the plan. There is no blame whatever to the troops, as the position was untenable."

A SECOND ARMY CORPS.

London, Oct. 31.—It is learned by the Associated Press that the War Office has ordered a second army corps to be in readiness to be called out.

The military officials have not yet decided whether the consummation of the plan will be necessary, but they are determined to have everything in readiness for a demonstration in Europe of Great Britain's capabilities or for sending even a larger force to the scene of action. Until of the receipt of the news of the Ladysmith disaster, the latter course was considered out of the question. But now there is no knowing what steps will be decided upon.

LOSS TO THE BRITISH.

London, Oct. 31.—While minor reverses were not wholly unexpected, no English man ever dreamed that anything like the staggering blow General Joubert delivered to General White's forces yesterday threatened the British arms in South Africa, and, apparently, the full extent of the disaster is not yet acknowledged. Enquiry at the War Office seems to indicate that the military despatches contain other particulars which it is deemed expedient to publish immediately but the serious nature of which is not disguised. The story as already known, however, is sufficiently bad. The loss in effective men must be appaling to a general who is practically surrounded. Two of the finest British regiments and a mule battery deducted from the Ladysmith garrison weakens it about a fifth of its total strength and alters the whole situation very materially in favor of the Boers, who, once again, have shown themselves stiff fighters and military strategists of superior order. The disaster cost the British from fifteen hundred to two thousand men and six seven pound screw guns and, as the Boer artillery is already stronger than imagined, the capture of these guns will be a great help to the Boers.

BOERS SUFFERED GREATLY.

London, Oct. 31.—A special despatch from Ladysmith says the Boers suffered severely during the engagement, some persons estimating their loss at 800 to 1,000 killed and wounded.

MAKING GOOD THE LOSSES.

London, Oct. 31.—The War Office has sent the following despatch to General Buller—

"Three extra battalions of foot and one mountain battery with reserves will leave England during the course of ten days to make good the casualties."

WHITE MAY RETREAT.

London, Oct. 31.—Reports are current here that General White may retire to Pietermaritzburg while the railroad is intact. There is much divergence of opinion in military circles as to the advisability of such a step.

FORTS AROUND KIMBERLEY.

Cape Town, Oct. 31.—It is reported from Barkley West that the Boers are constructing forts around Kimberley for the purpose of shelling the town.

WILD EXCITEMENT IN ENGLAND.

London, Oct. 31.—Throughout the length and breadth of Great Britain the news travelled fast that about 2,000 men had been killed or captured, for such is the estimate of the best authorities, based on General White's despatch. As the day wore on the crowd around the War Office swelled to enormous proportions, and at Gloucester, the home of many of those engaged, the wildest excitement prevailed. The special editions of the local newspapers were speedily exhausted, and the same thing occurred at Bristol and other town in that country. The fighting at Rietfontein had made many a Gloucestershire wife a widow, and this second overwhelming loss, coming so soon after the previous engagement where the Gloucestershires suffered so heavily, brought dire dismay to the little country.

GLOOM IN LONDON.

London, Oct. 31.—Apart from the immediate loss in effectives which will seriously cripple General White's operations, the British defeat must have a depressing defect on the balance of the Ladysmith forces, while it may be expected to have much weight with the Boers who are wavering as to which side to suppoet, and it will immensely raise the morale of the Boer forces and bring crowds of recruits to their standard.

Further news must be awaited before it is attempted to attach the blame where it belongs. General White manfully accepts all the discredit attaching to the disaster, which, apparently, was at least partially due to the stampeding of the mules with the guns.

"Awful British disaster!" yelled newsboys to-day, and all London stayed its course and read the extras containing the official acknowledgement of the British reverse. The announcement appeared at the hour when shoppers crowded Regent and Oxford streets and Piccadilly. Women stopped their carriages in the streets and hailed the boys. Out of fashionable stores women ran for the papers. They stood stockstill in the crowded streets scanning the pages of the extras. Having read of the reverse, such as does not exist in the memory of living British subjects, the men set their teeth and walked on with hardened and troubled faces, while some women cried.

Gloom and Sorrow.

There was a rush to the War Office which by noon was surrounded by private carriages and hansoms, while many of the humbler class of people came on foot, all waiting for the possible posting among the list of dead of the names they held dear. By noon gloom and bitter sorrow prevailed throughout the British metropolis. At the Government office no effort was made to conceal the feeling of dismay prevailing. One official said to a representative of the Associated Press—"It is inexplicable, and I am sorry to say that its moral effect is inestimable. We have lost heavily in many wars and have had regiments almost wiped out, but to have regiments captured—and by Boers—it is terrible."

White is Manly.

The manliness of General White's avowal that it was his fault has awakened the deepest sympathy.

An official of the War Office said to a representative of the Associated Press.

"It is more than likely due to the craze of our younger officers to distinguish themselves, obtain mention in the despatches and earn the Victoria Cross than to the fault of that splendid Indian veteran General White, in spite of his pitiful avowal."

SOME EARLIER DESPATCHES.

General White Says the Boers Bombarded Ladysmith—Graphic Description of the Engagement Told by the Correspondent—Naval Brigade to the Rescue.

London, Oct. 31.—The War Office today received the following despatch from General White, dated 4.30 p.m., yesterday:

"I employed all the troops here, except the obligatory garrison before the works. I sent a mountain battery, the Irish Fusiliers, and the Gloucesters to take up a position on the hills, to clear my left flank. The force moved at 11 o'clock yesterday evening, and during some night firing the battery of mules stampeded with some of the guns, which however, I hope to recover. These two battalions have not yet returned, but are expected this evening.

"I detailed two brigade divisions of field artillery and five battalions of infantry, aided by cavalry, under Gen. French, to attack a position upon which the enemy yesterday mounted guns.

"We found this position evacuated but our force was attacked wiht considerable vigor by what I believe were General Joubert's troops. They had many guns and showed in great numbers.

"Our troops were all in action, and we pushed the enemy back several miles, but did not succeed in reaching his laager.

"Our losses are estimated at between eighty and a hundred, but those of the enemy must have been much greater, the fire of our guns appearing very effective.

"After being in action several hours I withdrew the troops, and they returned unmolested to their cantonments.

"The enemy are in great numbers and their guns range further than our field guns.

"I now have some naval guns, which have temporarily silenced, and I hope will permanently dominate, the enemy's best guns, with which he has been bombarding the town at a range of over six thousand yards."

STORY OF THE FIGHT.

Ladysmith, Oct. 30, 6 p.m.—Further details of the battle at Ladysmith yesterday show that the advance was made at dawn with the object of shelling the Boers from the position where they had mounted a number of guns. On reaching the spot, however, it was found that they had evacuated the position. The British continued to advance, and the movement developed into a reconnaissance in force. The enemy was posted on a range of hills having a frontage of about 16 miles.

The British force was disposed in the following order:

On the right—Three regiments of cavalry, four batteries of the Royal Field Artillery, and five battalions of infantry.

In the centre—Three batteries of the Royal Field Artillery, two regiments of cavalry, and four infantry battalions.

On the left—The Royal Irish Fusiliers, the Gloucestershire Regiment, and the Tenth Mountain battery.

This force has been detailed to guard our left flank at a late hour last night.

White's Plan.

Gen. White's plan of operations was that, as the movement developed, the force, constituting our centre, which was disposed under cover of a kopje about three miles from the town, should throw itself upon the enemy, while the left flank was being held by the Fusiliers and the Gloucesters. This scheme was well devised, but failed in execution owing to the fact that the Boers' position which formed our objective was evacuated.

Our artillery quickly reduced the volume of the enemy's fire, but the attack delivered on our right flank was the principal one, and the column was compelled to charge. The Boer attack has been silenced for a time, and our infantry advanced, covered by cavalry.

A Counter Attack.

The enemy now began to develop a heavy counter-attack, and as they were in great numerical superiority, General White gave orders for the infantry to be gradually withdrawn. The movement was carried on with great steadiness and deliberation under cover of our guns, which made excellent practice.

Some shells were thrown into the town from the enemy's 40-pounders at a range of over 6,000 yards, but no damage was done.

The Casualties.

The engagement lasted several horus and resulted on our side in casualties estimated at from 90 to 100. The Boer losses must have largely exceeded this total.

The attack was admirably delivered by our right, and the Boers were fairly driven out of one of their strongholds near Lombard's kop. It was not possible, however, to puch the success much further, as beyond that point lays a long broken ridge, affording every kind of natural cover. Of this the enemy took the fullest advantage.

Our shells failed to dislodge the Boers, and as our infantry moved forward in extended order they came under a heavy and well-directed rifle fire, the effects of which were soon apparent.

General White, who was with the centre, seeing that the troops on the right were somewhat pressed, sent to their assistance the whole centre column with the exception of the Devonshire Regiment.

The battle had then lasted four hours, during which the artillery fire on both sides had been almost incessant.

Naval Brigade.

The naval brigade which was landed at Durban had arrived on the scene toward the end of the fight, and brought their heavy guns into practice. At the fourth shot the enemy's forty-pounders had been knocked out of action. The town is now, therefore, freed from apprehension of bombardment. Throughout the engagement the Boers held their ground with courage and tenacity, and, considering the intensity of our artillery fire, they must have suffered severely.

During the opening stages of the fight I attached myself to the centre column. We marched out before dawn and after covering three miles, halted under a kopje to await developments. In the attack on the right the first shot was fired at 5.20 a.m. It came from Lombard's kop, a lofty eminence rising some five miles to the east of Ladysmith.

Long Tom's Shots.

Battery after battery went into action, and gradually the enemy's fire slackened. For nearly two hours not a shot of our was returned, save when Long Tom, the name our soldiers had given to the Boer 40-pounder, hurled a shell, which we followed with anxious eyes, towards the town of Ladysmith. Presently the enemy's horsemen were seen streaming on a hill to our left. Sheltered by a rising foreground they occupied a ridge on our left flank, and were hidden by the scrub and trees. They could watch the turn of events in safety, and await their chance. The Devonshires now advanced toward Kaffir kraal under a hillock and there they remained with orders not to fire a shot until they were called upon.

Only when volleys were heard on the [illegible] left flank, did they show the least sign of real concern. The sound of this firing, [illegible], it seemed, satisfied us that the Gloucesters and Irish Fusiliers were at work, and that there was no truth in the story of a disaster to these battalions after the stampede of the mountain battery mules.

Staff Officers Present.

Sir George White, Sir Archibald Hunter, and the staff officers watched the developments of the artillery attack, which gave the first promise of a realization of General White's plans. Soon after 9 o'clock messengers began to arrive with news that the right column needed support. The first battalion of the Gordon Highlanders, then the Manchester Regiment, and then the Rifle Brigade, who had left the train for the battlefield were sent to its assistance, until only the Devonshire Regiment, a squadron of mounted infantry, and the field hospital were left with the centre column.

Perceiving that a change in the operations was in progress, I went with the Manchester Regiment toward the right. Our artillery under Lombard's kop was engaged in repelling the enemy's attempt to turn our flank. The Manchesters were sent forward to support the cavalry, while the Dublin Fusiliers, two battalions of the Sixtieth Rifles, the Liverpool Regiment and the Leicestershires were beginning to feel the effects of the enemy's searching rifle fire.

Boers Were Hidden.

The enemy rarely showed themselves, although along the ridges that lay beyond the range of our guns they from time to time gave us an opportunity to judge of their numbers.

At the height of the engagement the noise was almost deafening. Above the rattle of the musketry could be heard the thud of the Maxims and the banging of the quick-fire guns, which considerably added to the difficulties our men had to encounter.

The purpose of the reconnaissance had, however, bee ngallantly achieved, and our infantry began to fall back. This movement was covered by cavalry. Some of the troops had to cross open ground towards the centre, and while doing so they were raked with a heavy fire. The retirement was, however, effected without disorder or serious loss. Our batteries were got into position to secure the withdrawal of other arms from molestation, but the fortunate destruction of the enemy's Long Tom rendered such service unnecessary.

Parting Words of Officers

Toronto, Oct. 30.—From Father Point Lieut.-Col. Otter wired to Mayor Shaw this morning as follows: "Off successfully in good form and spirits and full of gratitude to our kind friends." Capt. Barker supplemented the message of the commandant with his despatch addressed to Ald. Graham: "Thank merchants, citizens and press for countless gifts received by me for men of Toronto company. All are well."

Gift to the Contingent.

Quebec, Oct. 31.—Thomas C. Orndorff, of Worcester, Mass., presented to the contingent yesterday one thousand bandeliers, valued at over one thousand dollars. These carry each 1,000 rounds of ammunition. The gift is a most generous one, and deserves the hearty thanks of every Canadian.

Dewey Will Marry.

Washington Oct. 31.—Admiral Dewey announced to some of his more intimate friends last night the fact of his engagement to Mrs W B Hasen, of this city. Mrs Hasen is the widow of Gen Hasen, formerly chief officer of the army, who died about ten years, and is a sister of John S McLean, Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio. She is a woman of large means, about 40 years old, and popular in the best social circles in Washington.

Cast Away on an Island.

St John's, Nfld., Oct. 30.—It is reported here that a fishing crew of thirty people are on a desolate island off the northern section of the coast, where they have been virtually abandoned for some time owing to the fact that the instructions for a vessel to bring them down miscarried. A special steamer must be sent promptly to their assistance or they will perish from cold and hunger during the coming winter.

Misunderstood.

Here is a pathetic story that is going the rounds. It shows how a married couple may go through life entirely misunderstanding each other merely for the lack of a few honest words. An old woman lay very sick. The doctor said she had but a few more days to live. Her husband, an old man, heart broken, as he faced the impending loneliness, sat by her bedside. "Some bread, John," said she, feebly. John reached for the plate, and broke the bread, as he had done for many years, handing her the crust. "Ah, John, not now," she said. "Would you mind letting me have the inside now? It won't be for long, and I have let you have the inside of the piece so many years—just a little, John—but never mind." For the poor old man, handing her the bread she wished, blubbered as he said—"To think, Jean, that that I have been that foolish! I thought it was the crust you liked. I never really liked the inside myself, but have eaten it these many years that you might have the crust."

How complete are the preparations of the British government for the war in the Transvaal may be gathered from the fact that the troop of Irish Lancers which has been with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show for some time, has been recalled and is already on its way to Liverpool. These troopers are members of the reserve and a body of the finest riders in the world.

TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed tenders addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tenders for Works," will be received at this Department until noon of Wednesday, November 1st, for steam heating, plumbing and electric lighting of the Normal School Building now in course of erection in London, Ontario.

Plans and specifications may be seen at this Department, and at the above-named building.

An accepted bank cheque, payable to the undersigned, for 5 per cent. on the amount of each tender will be required, and the bona fide signatures in full, and business addresses, of two parties as sureties must also be furnished.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 2[illegible], 1899

THE BRITISH ARMY.

A despatch from London, dated 30th October gives the strength and disposition of the British army, all branches of the service, as follows —

In England and Wales...	65,244
Scotland...	4,9[illegible]
Ireland...	22,701
The Colonies and Egypt (exclusive of South Africa)...	41,000
South Africa...	24,500
India...	67,000
Total regular forces...	225,407
Reserves...	88,000
Militia...	122,000
Volunteers...	219,000
Grand total...	654,407

This is, of course, exclusive of the navy or of Colonial forces.

THE FUTURE OF THE TRANSVAAL.

The victories gained at the very inception of the campaign in South Africa, while the English troops were awaiting reinforcements, and of necessity, acting on the defensive, ensure the early termination of the conflict. The result was never doubtful, and as a consequence, the Continental powers are already speculating on the terms of peace that England will grant to the Boers. It is commonly asserted that she has a greedy eye fixed upon the Rand, on account of its gold mines, and that the desire to possess them is the cause of the war. As all of these mines are the private property of individuals and companies, British and foreign, it is not exactly apparent how England is to get possession of them in any gainful sense. The Klondike mines are situated in a British colony, but Great Britain derives no revenue from them. Her treasury receives nothing from the gold mines of Australia or the diamond mines of Kimberley. In fact the colonies are generally a source of outgo rather than of income.

As regards trade with the colonies, as the New York Post sensibly points out, England has no artificial advantage over other trading countries. Nor would she have any commercial advantage even if she should annex the whole of the Transvaal. She would have a new responsibility, a new expense, a new burden. The condition in which the Transvaal found itself with a hostile population in the Rand would be repeated in the wider territory of the republic. In order to insure peace it will probably be found expedient either to detach the Rand, where all the trouble lies from the Transvaal, or, better still, to erect a South African confederation, self-governing like that of Canada, in which all the colonies and the two Boer republics shall have equal rights. Mr. Chamberlain has indicated his preference for this kind of a settlement. If nothing worse is exacted, the Boers will not have much to complain of, seeing that they fired the first gun. Then, if it be true that the descendants of the Dutch settlers are a majority of the whole population of the Cape, all of their rights will be secured. They may even govern the confederation, subject to the principles of law which prevail in both England and Holland and which obtain in the civilized colonies of both. But in any event both the Transvaal and the Orange Free State will have to come under the sphere of British influence.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

There is no need of Ladysmith getting stuck on herself over the amount of attention she is receiving at present. The world is watching her guests, not herself, and after the scene shifts will proceed to forget that such a place as Ladysmith graces the map of South Africa.

It is not in vainglorious boasting nor in swaggering jingoism, but in calm confidence of well-prepared and well-tested strength, that the British Empire stands on review to-day, ready at every point, on land and sea, to keep alike her martial drumbeat sounding, and her peaceful commerce moving, and her vast realm intact all around the crimsoned circle of the globe.

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 96 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one-third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis.

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor-proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had [illegible] the [illegible], warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign. —Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics to be a professor of politics, she will not experiment with Grover Cleveland, but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt Quay.—

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

THE TURF REVIEW.

Streck, 2:14¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Narion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¼ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:18 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:28, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:06¼.

A horse with the peculiar name of Esaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:0[illegible], beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altivo, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:13¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27½.—

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

A YONGE STREET BARBER.

A barber of Toronto, whose chair in a fashionable hair-cutting studio on Yonge street is in constant demand, told an interesting story of the manner of his illness and subsequent recovery from it by means of Hutch. In effect, he said that he had been indulging—overly much—and his entire system, stimulated by the potency of "John Barleycorn," recked not of the morrow. But, alas, time is inexorable, and the after-effects follow surely, and when he awakened from a sound, if not refreshing, slumber, his sickness was—frightful. "I had such a headache that I was fairly blinded," he said. "My stomach seemed full of a sour, bitter, fermenting mass, that filled my mouth with its nastiness. My tongue clicked against the roof of my mouth as though it were metal, and my nausea was rendered more nauseating by not being able to get relief. I had to work, so came down looking like a corpse. When I entered the 'boss' said 'Hutch!' I thought I was discharged and turned to go, when he said 'Hutch' again and held out something towards me. I took a small tablet and he told me to swallow it. I did so. It was only about six minutes before I became relieved—the headache stopped, the saliva in my mouth produced a clean, sweet taste, and my whole stomach seemed to be relieving itself of the rotten stuff which caused my distress. When I went to my lunch at noon I was good and ready for it, and I don't do a thing now but carry a vial of Hutch Tablets with me."

AFTER HUTTON'S SCALP.

Col. Hughes Tells Laurier That Gen. Hutton Should Get the Sack.

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—The scene of activities in connection with the Canadian contingent, which prevailed to a certain extent all over the Dominion is now entirely centered in Quebec

The Department of Militia is almost deserted, as all the principal officers, both military and otherwise, are at the Ancient Capital.

The Ministers of the Crown who can possibly do so will all be in Quebec to-day. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. A. G. Blair, who finished their Ontario tour at Smith's Falls on Saturday, left for Quebec yesterday. The only Minister left in the city is Hon. R. W. Scott, who is running all the departments. Mr. Scott was among those who were present at the railway depot, Saturday evening to give a welcome to the British Columbia section of the contingent as they passed through the city for Quebec.

Before leaving for Quebec on Saturday Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes, M.P., said that he had written a letter to the Premier giving certain reasons why General Hutton ought to be removed from his position at the head of the Canadian militia.

HAS TROUBLES OF ITS OWN.

Difficulties of United States in the Philippines Growing Greater.

Manila, Oct. 30.—Gen. Young, with the infantry, is advancing upon Cabanatuan, under difficulties. The country is furrowed with rivers and deep ravines, the bridges over which have been destroyed; the mud is deep, the rations are short, and the transportation of supplies has been delayed by low water, and the poor condition of the roads. The natives for a long time have lived off the country, impoverishing it.

The gunboat Laguna de Bay dispersed a force of natives who are engaged in constructing trenches beyond Santa Rosa. The boat was fired upon by a party of Filipinos bearing a white flag, and she is now aground.

Numbers of Chinese are coming to Angeles from Tarlac, paying the natives for the privilege.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undiminished by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher takes the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or fried bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore!" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. 'He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!' '

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression 'crocodile tears' can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in 'Othello,' "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile." [illegible]

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

WAR ON CANNIBALS.

Big Force of Natives Routed and Hundreds of Them Killed.

London, Oct. 30.—Advices from the Congo announces that Capt Mohun, who is commanding the Belgian Tanganyika-Congo telegraph expedition, has reached the Congo Free State, and was engaged at the end of July, in a fierce battle at Tanguli. where the force consisted of ten Europeans, with Capt Mohun commanding. Shortly after the attack commenced, Baron Daamis, the Belgian commander, despatched three companies of soldiers to assist Mohun and the enemy, consisting of cannibals, who horribly torture their wounded, were finally routed.

It is estimated that the enemy numbered 1,500 men, and lost 300 killed and 600 wounded. The Belgian force lost 6 men killed and 47 wounded. The enemy fled to Tanganyika.

Drowned in the Harbour.

Goderich, Oct. 30.—Saturday evening Wm Rhynas, of the firm of Buchanan & Rhynas, fell from a dock and was drowned. His body was recovered half an hour afterwards, by means of grappling irons. The deceased was an active member of the Masonic body, and was a highly respected sitizen.

Yukon Navigation Closed.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 30.—Telegraphic advices received at Skagaway announce that river navigation of the Yukon has ceased, that floating ice, particularly in the head waters in the main stream, rendered it unsafe for steamers.

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny
The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

GREAT SCENE IN QUEBEC

Magnificent Send-off Given to Canadian Contingent.

IMMENSE CROWDS GATHER.

A Brilliant Assemblage of Military Men From All Canada.

Lord Minto Inspected the Men With a Critical Eye and Expressed Much Pleasure at Their Appearance—Vessel Sailed at Three O'Clock.

Quebec, Oct. 30.—The sun shone brightly this morning, the weather was mild and fine as could be desired and the city crowded, further accommodation at hotel being impossible.

There was a big crowd on hand to back up Sam Hughes' efforts to go to the front. Another deputation is endeavoring to obtain the appointment of a Church of England chaplain, which hardly seems probable at this hour to prove successful.

The Parade begins.

At 10.30 a portion of the contingent quartered at the immigration buildings marched up, headed by the R.C.A. band, and took up their position on the esplanade, receiving hearty applause all along the line. A few minutes later a detachment from the Citadel marched down, headed by the R.C.A. band, while in the middle were a posse of the Royal Scots. They received an ovation that baffles description. Never before has such an ovation been given within the walls of this ancient city.

Officers from half the corps in Canada are here, and all declare they never saw a finer body of men. As the troops reached the esplanade, they presented an appearance that could not be surpassed as they filed across the field which was enclosed with ropes in the form of a large rectangle. The men were in heavy marching order, carrying their rifles and wearing their helmets, appearing as they will on the march in active service.

Local Corps Turn Out.

The local volunteers turned out in mass. Opposite the middle of the field was a grand stand, which accommodated a large number of the leading men of Canada, Lord Minto and staff, Lieut-Gov. Jette, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Messrs. Fielding, Blair, Sutherland, Borden, Tarte and Fitzpatrick, the Mayors of many cities and a large number of members of Parliament, and representative clergymen, and a great number of ladies, representing the best society throughout Canada.

Major-General Hutton, Q.M.G., Foster and staff at 11.30 began a personal inspection of the contingent, and as they passed various bands played suitable airs.

From the grand stand could be seen a seething sea of faces. The streets bordering the esplanade and the slopes of the glacis and the windows of neighborhood were simply crowded with a multitude of sight-seers.

Sharp upon the boom of the noonday gun Lord Minto arrived and was received with the customary salute amidst great applause. His Excellency then began the rounds of the contingent accompanied by a most brilliant staff, including all the leading military men of the Dominion. He inspected the men with a critical eye and expressed much pleasure at their appearance.

After the inspection and speeches the contingent marched to the docks where they boarded the transport Sardinian, which will weigh anchor and sail at three o'clock this afternoon.

The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading.

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bringing Up the Average.

Old Rufus Gogblink, a slow, deliberate sort of man, dropped in one day in a casual sort of way to see his friend, Stephen Nobbler. It was the first time he had been in to see Stephen in 42 years.

"Um-m! You don't come in very often, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"No," said Mr. Gogblink.

But he went in to see his friend Mr. Nobbler again the very next day.

"Um-m! You're coming in pretty often now, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"Ye-es," said Mr. Gogblink. "I'm sort o' bringing up the average."—New

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the beastliest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no' St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he has finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially in the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

SIR LOUIS AT NEW YORK.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries Returns From England.

New York, Oct. 30.—Sir Louis Davies, on his arrival here from London on Saturday, was interviewed, and stated that the modus vivendi did not foreshadow what the permanent solution of the Alaskan boundary dispute would be. "It was absolutely necessary for us to come to some understanding," he said, "for we had the miners there, and the situation was becoming intolerable. The Joint High Commission will arrange the conditions on which the question can be settled. Canada wants only what arbitration can give us. We are not grasping or seeking concession. What we want is our rights. We have three propositions to make, which are:—Unconditional arbitration of the whole dispute, arbitration on similar terms to the Venezuelan arbitration, or arbitration on the basis that if the United States shall keep Dyea and Skaguay it will concede Pyramid Harbor and adjacent territory to Canada, thus giving us a harbor on Lynn Canal. Lord Salisbury is ready to adopt either of these propositions."

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be party hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush in this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of sorror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

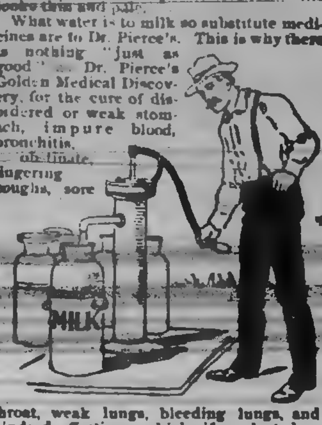
"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man, "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to [illegible] "and he likes [illegible]"



MILK AND WATER.

Milk is food. Water is not food. Nurse the baby on water and it will not live long. But many a mother who supposes she is buying real milk is getting half water, and she wonders why the baby frets and looks thin and pale.

What water is to milk so substitute medicines are to Dr. Pierce's. This is why there is nothing "just as good" as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for the cure of disordered or weak stomach, impure blood, bronchitis, obstinate, lingering coughs, sore throat, weak lungs, bleeding lungs, and kindred affections, which, if neglected or badly treated, lead up to consumption. If you ask for Dr. Pierce's remedies and the dealer won't supply you, go to another store. Your health is of greater importance than any extra profit he may make on the substitute. The imitation substitute can not imitate the cures. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is absolutely non-alcoholic and non-narcotic. It can be safely relied upon by temperance people. It is not only the safest, but also the surest remedy for the stomach, blood, throat and lungs.

"My wife had a severe attack of pleurisy and lung trouble," writes Abram Freer, Esq., of Rockbridge, Green Co., Ills. "The doctors gave her up to die. She commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and improved from the first dose. By the time she had taken eight or ten bottles she was cured, and it was the cause of a large amount being sold here. I think the 'Golden Medical Discovery' is the best medicine in the world for lung trouble."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Kidd, the Shoe Man,

is offering Ladies' Buttoned boots at Tremendous reductions.

Board.

Good board and rooms for three or four gentlemen at 20 Queen street. Two minutes walk from Ontario Bank.

Date of Banquet.

In reply to the request of the Committee appointed to take charge of the matter, Hon J R Stratton has written that Thursday, Nov. 16th, will be suitable to him for the banquet which the citizens propose tendering him on the occasion of his elevation to the Ontario Cabinet. This date will be accepted by the Committee and arrangements will be made accordingly.

Money Lost.

On Saturday evening about 7.30 on Charlotte or George street between Rubidge and Neil's boot store a small leather purse containing one dollar and four cents. The finder will be rewarded by leaving same at this office.

Man Wanted.

We require at once an intelligent man to act as city circulation manager for the Times, to whom a steady situation will be given and a fair salary paid. Apply at once at the Times Bookstore.

Wood for Sale.

Having purchased the old "Red Mills" at Nassau, I am tearing them down, and will have in consequence a very large quantity of fine dry pine for sale, suitable for kindling. Geo. Stevens. Ashburnham.

The Port Hope Knitting Works is acknowledged to have the largest and cheapest stock of knitted goods. As a leader on Saturday they will sell a heavy all wool double thread Stocking in sizes 6 to 9½ for 15c. nothing like this has ever been shown before for the money. Telephone 380.

Great Waste of Money.

We publish a letter in this issue regarding the fearful waste of money which has been going on for some time in connection with our streets. We would like to see a statement, as suggested by our correspondent. It would certainly be interesting reading. We hope some members of the Council will ask to have a statement prepared shewing the amount of money expended on Water street, in the district named, during, say, the past five years. The Times will publish it in black-faced type in the hope that a revolution may be inaugurated in the management of our thoroughfares.

VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

A Downeyville Farmer Succumbed to Heart Disease Yesterday Morning.

The people of Downeyville were thrown into a state of excitement Wednesday morning by the news that Mr. Theo. Ryan, who resided a short distance north of the village, had died very suddenly about seven o'clock.

Many discredited the report, as Mr. Ryan had been seen at church yesterday in his usual good health, but enquiry demonstrated the truth of the sad news. The deceased, who was about 70 years of age, had driven the cows to the pasture field about 6.30, and when near the house on his return he was seen to fall. When his wife reached the spot he was dead. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause.

Five Dollars

Will go farther, much further, than you could expect when spent in Shoes at Kidd's.

Some Interesting Figures.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It would be interesting to have a statement made out and published of the amount of money spent on Water street, say between Brock and London streets, during the past few years. It would serve as a sample of the way our streets have been mismanaged. Only a few years ago eight or ten inches of gravel taken from the foundation of the Y. M. C. A. building, was spread on the street, between Murray and Macdonald streets. This was no sooner done than teams were put on to draw it away again. It took a number of teams a number of days to do this.

The street was then put in good condition. Men were put to work and all large stones were picked out and removed, and many days were spent in rolling the street. This was no sooner accomplished than the sewer was put down, and the street left in a horrible condition. Again was it levelled up and fixed. Then pavements were put down and the grade altered, necessitating another upheaval. Once again was the road shaped off and rounded up, only to be partially destroyed by the digging up of the sewer to make way for surface water which should have been put down when the sewer was being constructed.

It is safe to say that thousands of dollars have been wasted on these two or three blocks, with the result that to-day Water street is in a disgraceful state. It is made—not of gravel—but of mud and stones—and will have to be re-built again next year.

This is the history of very many of the streets of the town. Is it any wonder, then, that the ratepayers are becoming wildly indignant?

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am,

DISGUSTED RATEPAYER.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr. J Gordon Dalgety of 218-200 Washington street, Chicago, will for a few days exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

From north to south, from west to east,
Bright business men all know
That advertising in the yeast
That's sure to raise the "dough."

At a public meeting of the Lindsay ratepayers it was decided to ask the council to submit a by-law to raise money to purchase the water works.

Wm LePage, a shingle packer in Carew's mill, Lindsay, lost a finger and thumb by coming in contact with a saw on Monday.

New Goods.

We have just received the first instalment of our new fall stock, consisting of games of all kinds, and up-to-date stationery; also many novelties too numerous to mention. Give us a call. We give trading stamps. Times Bookstore, Peterborough.

The Paving Contracts.

Yesterday the examination of Inspector Ranney took place in connection with the examination into the paving contracts. The evidence was decidedly startling. We are unable to give it to our readers until to-morrow, on account of the crowded state of our columns.

REPUBLIC MINES.

A GOLF STORY.

How a Prominent Local Sport Got Entangled.

One of the newer golfers in the Peterborough club is a gentleman whose weighty business cares have heretofore prevented him from indulging in the game of brassies and high balls. His wife had always insisted that too close attention to business was ruining his health. She had learned the game and expiated not only upon the enjoyment of the game itself, but the physical benefits to be derived therefrom. So rather late in the season he appeared on the golf grounds in appropriate costume and took his first lesson, his wife meanwhile looking on approvingly. He liked the game all right and she was well satisfied with the evident improvement in his health, but when she ventured to accompany him over the course once or twice she was astounded, yet in the shocked, at the wonderful development in his use of profane words. During their whole married life nothing had occured that would induce so much strong language as seemed now to accompany a single round of the course. Being a bright and inventive woman, after some study she evolved a plan which she thought would meet the exigencies of the case. At her suggestion he was to pick up a small pebble and put into the pocket of his coat each time he felt inclined to use a bad word the theory being that after a few pebbles had accumulated their weight would remind him that he was becoming too profane.

The next day he visited the golf grounds alone and she was greatly surprised to find him coming home late to dinner, for he was one of the most punctual of men. When he finally staggered up the steps he looked like a bowed and bent old man laboring under a stream of years and care. The pockets of his coat bulged out on each side until he looked like a newly inflated balloon.

"Well, dear, how did you get along to-day?"

"All right."

"How about your swearing? Did you use the pebbles as I advised?"

He slowly reached down into his side pockets and carefully took about two pecks of pebbles. "These," he said, "are all I could carry. I hired Alex. Reids, express wagon to bring the remainder."

IN MEMORIUM.

In loving memory of George H. Carton, who died October 6th, 1899.

I shine in the light of God;
His likeless stamps my brow;
Through the Valley of Death my feet have trod,
And I reign in glory now.

No breaking heart is here,
No keen and thrilling pain,
No wasted cheek where the frequent tear
Hath rolled and left its stain.

O friends of mortal years,
The trusted and the true,
Ye are watching still in the valley of tears,
But I wait to welcome you.

Do I forget; O no!
For memory's golden chain
Shall bind my heart to hearts below,
Till they meet to touch again.

Each link is strong and bright,
And loves electric flame
Flows freely down, like a river of light,
To the world from whence I came.

Do you mourn when another star,
Shines out from the glittering sky?
Do you weep when the raging voice of war
And the storms of conflict die?

Then why should your tears run down,
And your hearts be sorely riven,
For another gem in the Saviour's crown,
And another soul in heaven.

COMPANY INSPECTION.

A Very Creditable Showing Made Last Night.

Three companies of the 57th Battalion were inspected last evening by Lieut.-Col Montizambert, D O C and made a very good showing. The men were neat and soldier-like in appearance, and executed the movements required of them with coolness and precision which demonstrated that the Battalion is not in such a bad way. The companies inspected were C E with F. Capt Bennet's company made the best showing. The three remaining companies will be inspected this evening. Battalion inspection will take place at 1.30 to-morrow afternoon, and the regiment expect to pass creditably.

Unfortunate Murray Street.

Murray street is still engaging the attention of a large force of men under Town Engineer Hay. The announcement is now made that the work will not be completed until next season. The Times is willing to bet a new hat that next year there will be no such criminal waste of money permitted as has been going on this year and that Engineer Hay had better complete all work that has been commenced this season, for there certainly will be a new order of things next year. It is time for a change.

SHE QUIT COFFEE.

And Got Well in Common Sense Way.

"When I left off coffee, it seemed that was the thing hardest to drop. I had been put on a diet for stomach trouble, had a good appetite, but no food would stay on my stomach. I was compelled to leave off one thing after another, but never suspected coffee. When I decided to leave off the coffee, however, my stomach trouble ceased entirely, also my nervousness, and I can gain sleep well. But a new trouble then arose. How was I to get along without my coffee? It was a great temptation when I saw it on the table in the morning. One day a friend who knew of my case sent me a package of Postum Cereal Food Coffee. After it had been prepared, I had great misgivings about using it, for it looked so much like fine coffee that I feared it would have the same effect, but I soon found it to be free from all injurious properties and its use has been of great benefit to me.

"I have never had any use for coffee since using Postum Cereal Food Coffee. My children derive great benefit from using Postum. We all enjoy it very much, having discarded the old fashioned coffee entirely." Alice Lawrence, Bowen, Mont.

Postum Food Coffee is sold by all first class grocers at 25 cents per package.

Children are sometimes told, when they are bad, that ghosts and other dreadful things will get them. Grown-up people know better, but it would be a good thing if women could be made to understand that terrible results will follow neglect of any ailment that comes under the general head of "female troubles." A pain in the side, or back, a disagreeable drain, a bearing-down sensation, headache, nervousness, weakness in the distinctly feminine organs, bad complexion and loss of flesh are forerunners of final collapse. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for weak women. It cures. In a great majority of cases the patient can treat herself at home, and obnoxious local examinations can be avoided. In a few bad cases it is wise for the sufferers to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce himself, at Buffalo, N. Y., and he will give full advice by mail free. He is consulted daily by great numbers of women throughout the world, and his advice is founded upon wide-spread experience. All correspondence is treated by him as sacredly confidential. His "Favorite Prescription" is non-alcoholic, and does not create a craving for strong drink. It contains no opium or other narcotic. It is perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. No medicine is equal to it in any respect for diseases of women. Therefore, accept no substitute for this world-famed remedy, though it be urged upon you as being "just as good."

Mrs. Mary E. Jones, of 320 Madison Avenue, Ypsilanti, Mich., writes: "I was troubled with female weakness, and after taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I am free from pains. I had suffered for two years when I began taking your medicine. I could not walk across my room without suffering dreadful pains. Now I do all my housework and walk where I please."

Constipation and biliousness are radically cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They don't gripe; they never fail

A DOURO WEDDING.

Marriage of Mr. James Dalton and Miss Frances Leahy.

At 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning 24th, St. Joseph's church, Douro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Frances, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Leahy, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Dalton, Dwyer's Corners.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Keilty, and after nuptial high mass the wedding party returned home, where a sumptous dinner was awaiting them. The table was loaded with good things and beautifully decorated.

The bride was given away by her father, and was charmingly attired in a dress of ladies' brown cloth, trimmed with pearls, chiffon and cream satin, with hat and veil to match.

The bridesmaid, Miss Margaret Ann Leahy, sister of the bride, was similiarly attired, and the groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Frederick Dalton.

During the evening a large number of guests arrived and spent the night in dancing, games and all kinds of sports. The supper was elaborate and the music was ably furnished by Messrs. Mahoney and Doherty.

The presents were both numerous and costly, including a handsome bedroom suite of twelve pieces from the bride's father.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Inspector Ranney Gives Some Startling Evidence.

HIS STORY OF THE BAGS.

He Fought For a Square Deal, But Was Not Successful.

Evidence Taken Before Judge Weller at Tuesday's Sitting—The Conclusion is Not Yet in Sight.

Tuesday at 10 a. m. the pavement investigation before Judge Weller was resumed at the Court House. Mr. Ranney, inspector on the Sheehy contract for Water-st. was the first witness called by Mr. Edwards and was examined by the Town Solicitor.

Q.—You were inspector upon the first contract of Mr. Sheehy?

A.—I was. I commenced on July 6th. The work was finished about August 25th. I have used cement in bridges, etc., before this but had no previous experience in walks.

Q.—Did you inform yourself of the specifications?

A.—I did.

Q.—What instructions did you get?

A.—I had a copy of the specification and intended to follow it and thought I was following it. I got no instructions to vary it.

Q.—What did you first do on the work?

A.—There was a box supplied by Mr. Sheehy that contained a cubic yard. I had a box made a third of a cubic yard. 3 feet. The size of the larger box was 6 feet square and a little over 13 inches deep, about 13 1-2 inches. It had been used all last year. I concluded that it contained a cubic yard. I had the second box made 3 feet square and 13 inches deep.

Q.—How did you propose to use these?

A.—The large box was for measuring the material for the base. The cement came in barrels and Mr. Sheehy said that a barrel of cement to a box of gravel was what had been used and what was necessary to use. This was for the foundation. A barrel, I estimated, held not quite 3 1-2 cubic feet and the box held 27 cubic feet.

Q.—What proportion was that?

A.—3 1-2 as to 27.

Q.—Can't you figure it out?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever figure it out exactly?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you use that proportion?

A.—Yes as long as the barrels lasted.

Q.—It would be approximately 1 to 7 6-7 wasn't it?

A.—Yes.

Q.—But you never investigated as to whether it was according to the specifications?

A.—Mr. Sheehy built the walks last year and I supposed that the proportion was all right.

Q.—What next?

A.—The cement then came in bags. They used four bags. I supposed that each bag contained about a cubic foot. Mr. Sheehy stated that 4 bags was called a barrel. The agent for the Rathburn Co., also stated so. I therefore, used four bags of cement to one box of gravel.

Q.—Was the gravel all right?

A.—A lot of it was too coarse. I fought it all through.

Q.—And you [illegible] when you told him of course?

A.—No, he insisted—

Q.—Did you reject any of it?

A.—Yes. Some of the stone was 4 inches when 2 inches was the largest.

Q.—Did you have it removed as the specifications called for?

A.—No. I raked some of it out myself. But they allowed these large stones to go into concrete.

Q.—Did you stop it?

A.—I contended against it.

Q.—Did you report to Mr. Hay that gravel too large was going in?

A.—Yes. I also reported to Mr. Langford and told him that Mr. Sheehy contended that this would make the best concrete.

Q.—Did Mr. Hay instuct you to keep it out?

A.—No, he knew that I was protesting against it all the time.

Q.—Did he give you any instructions regarding your duty?

A.—No, not that I remember of.

Q.—But he agreed with you that the large stones must be kept out?

A.—Yes, that it should be kept out.

Q.—You considered that the large stones weakened the concrete base?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then the base as laid is now defective?

A.—The walk would be affected where there is a collection of these stones.

Q.—You understood that it was your duty to prevent this sort of thing?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And you didn't do it?

A.—I did it as far as I could.

Q.—But you couldn't do it?

A.—No. I contended daily, continually.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Hay after the first time that this was still going on, that you were contending unsuccessfully?

A.—Yes, he knew it. I told him on Simcoe-st., just a few days before I quit the work.

Q.—What further can you say?

A.—I considered that the base of gravel and 4 bags of cement would be a good concrete. I examined it and it bonded properly.

Q.—Is the base of the Sheehy contract a good base generally?

A.—Well, it is.

Q.—Did you always watch the mixing?

A.—Not always, I would sometimes be at other parts of the work.

Q.—Did you ever see any iregularities?

A.—Yes, they would fill the gravel box too full and when they saw me coming they would dump it off. I allowed some boxes rounded up to go like that and then make them add another bag of cement.

Q.—Did you ever ask them to re-measure, when you saw them putting in too much gravel?

A.—No.

Q.—How often did you see them trying to fill the gravel box too full?

A.—As often as I was not standing right by them it was a general occurrence.

Q.—Then it was a general occurence that you did not watch the gravel and cement mixed?

A.—No, I was generally present, but I would be on other parts of the work sometimes.

Q.—Did they often manage to mix a larger part of gravel than was right?

A.—Yes.

Mr. Dennistoun—But you say they did not do it when you were there. How do you know they did it?

Mr. Edwards—What about the proportions of gravel and cement in the base of this contract?

Mr. Ranney—Several times there was too large a proportion of gravel put in. Generally, however, the base was made sufficiently strong.

Q.—You have heard of the base being defective at crossings?

A.—There were several of these laid when I was not present. Work was going on at different prices.

Q.—Were you present at the mixing of the concrete for the base of the crossing at Dr. Halliday's.

A.—Yes.

Q.—What proportion was used?

A.—The usual one.

Q.—How do you account for the fact that it could be poked to pieces with an umbrella?

A.—I can't account for it.

Q.—What were the proportions called for for the surface finish?

A.—2 of granite and 1 of cement.

Q.—You got no instructions to vary these?

A.—No.

Q.—How did you start work on the surface?

A.—Mr. Sheehy proposed that we should fill the box with cement and count the number of bags. We proposed to fill the box with granite twice first and then with cement.

Q.—Did you do so?

A.—I was deceived in this.

Q.—Did you do so?

A.—We filled the box with granite twice. I cannot remember exactly whether we filled the box with cement or not. I did not see the bags of cements emptied into the box.

Q.—Where were you at this time?

A.—I do not know.

Q.—What stage were things in when you come back?

A.—The cement was on the boards.

Q.—What means did you take to see what quantity of cement was there?

A.—I supposed that the men would honestly measure the quantity the box would hold.

Q.—Did you try to ascertain how much cement was there?

A.—I counted the empty bags. There were five empty ones and one half full. I took these as representing the quantity that had filled the box.

Q.—Who put the bags there?

A.—One of the finishers, John Kerr.

Q.—Did anybody tell you that these 5 1-2 bags had filled this box?

A.—Yes, this John Kerr and Michael Lavery. Mr. Kerr was finisher and must have known that there was not——

Q.—What did Kerr say to you?

A.—He said "5 1-2 bags fill the box."

Q.—What did Lavery say?

DISASTER IN NATAL IS NOT SO BAD AS REPORTED

British Troops Fought Until the Last Cartridge Was Gone, They Then Surrendered to Overwhelming Numbers.

NOT NORE THAN 900 MEN WERE CAPTURED.

Colonel Carlton's Column, Deprived of Ammunition by a Stampede of Mules, Fought for Fifteen Hours Before Giving in to the Enemy.

HOW THEY WERE CAPTURED.

London, Nov. 1.—The British War Office to-day made public a despatch received from General White, describing the operations of Monday. It was as follows:

Ladysmith Oct. 31.—7.50 p.m.—I took out from Ladysmith a brigade of mounted troops, two brigade divisions of the Royal Artillery, the Natal Field Battery and two brigades of infantry, to reconnoitre in force the enemy's main position to the north, and if the opportunity should offer, to capture the hill behind Farquhar's Farm, which had on the previous day been seized in strength by the enemy.

A Night March

In connection with this advance a column consisting of the Tenth Mountain Artillery, four half companies of the Gloucesters and six companies of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, the whole under Lieut.-Col. Carlton and Major Adye, deputy assistant adjutant-general, was despatched at 11 p.m. on the twenty-ninth, to march by night up Bell's Spruit and seize the enemy's neck, or some position near Nicholson's Neck, thus turning the enemy's right flank.

The Main Advance.

The main advance was successfully carried out, the objective of the attack being found evacuated, and an artillery [illegible] between our field batteries and the enemy's guns at this position and Maxims is understood to have caused heavy loss to the enemy.

"The reconnaissance forced the enemy to fully develop his position and, after a strong counter attack on our right, the infantry brigade and cavalry, had been repulsed, the troops were slowly withdrawn to camp, pickets being left on observation.

"Later in the engagement the naval contingent, under Captain Lambton of H.M.S. Powerful, came into action and silenced with their extremely accurate fire the enemy's guns in position.

The Stampede.

The circumstances which attended the movements of Lieut.-Col. Carlton's column are not yet fully known, but from reports received the column appears to have carried out the night march unmolested, until within two miles of Nicholson's Nek. At this point two boulders rolled from the hill and a few rifle shots stampeded the infantry ammunition mules. The stampede spread itself to the battery mules, which broke loose from their leaders and got away with practically the whole of the gun equipment and the greater portion of the regimental small arm ammunition. The reserve was similarly lost.

Seized a Hill.

"The infantry battalions, however, fixed bayonets and, accompanied by the personnel of the artillery, seized a hill on the left of the road two miles from the nek with but little opposition. There they remained unmolested till dawn, the time being occupied in organizing the defence of the hill and constructing stone sangars and walls as cover from fire.

Attacked by Boers.

"At dawn a skirmishing attack on our position was commenced by the enemy, but made no way until 9.00 a.m., when strong reinforcements enabled them to push the attack with great energy. Their fire became very searching and two companies of the Gloucesters, in an advanced position, were ordered to fall back. The enemy then pressed to short range, the losses on our side becoming very numerous.

Ammunition Exhausted.

"At 3 p.m. our ammunition was practically exhausted, the position was captured and the survivors of the column fell into the enemy's hands. The enemy treated our wounded with humanity, General Joubert at once despatching a letter to me, offering a safe conduct to doctors and ambulances to remove the wounded. A medical officer and parties to render first aid to the wounded were despatched to the scene of action from Ladysmith last night and the ambulances at dawn this morning.

Cause of the Failure.

"The want of success of the column was due to the misfortune of the mules stampeding and the consequent loss of the guns and small arm ammunition and the reserve.

"The official list of casualties and prisoners will be reported shortly. The latter are understood to have been sent by rail to Pretoria.

"The security of Ladysmith is in no way affected."

THEIR LAST CARTRIDGES.

London, Nov. 1.—The gloom caused by the British disaster at Ladysmith was in a measure relieved by to-day's story giving an account of the heroic stand made by the decimated battalions until their last cartridge was gone.

GOOD ARTILLERY PRACTICE.

Cape Town, Oct. 31.—Evening—Delayed in transmission—Guns of the British naval brigade have knocked the Boer forty-pounder clean off its platform and have silenced the Boer guns on Hepworth hill overlooking Ladysmith. The Boers abandoned their positions.

AMERICAN MEDIATION.

Berlin, Nov. 1.—The Tageblatt says Count Bothmer, president of the German peace society, has telegraphed to Queen Victoria praying her to accept the mediation of the United States to end the war with the Transvaal.

ARTILLERY DUEL IN PROGRESS.

London Nov. 1.—It was announced to-day in a special despatch from Ladysmith that the Boers again closed around that place on Monday night, and are shelling the British camp. The two guns landed from the British cruiser Powerful opened fire on the Boers at dawn, Tuesday. The Boers brought up more guns, but some of them were silenced. It is asserted that the Boers' loss must have been heavy. The garrison of Ladysmith is described as being in good spirits and confident, and the troops are said to be anxious to fight. The artillery duel was still in progress Tuesday night.

DR. LEYDS IS ANNIOUUS.

Brussels, Nov. 1.—Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic agent of the Transvaal, has received the consent of the British secretary of State for War, the Marquis of Lansdowne, to allow a telegram to be sent to Pretoria to ask the number of killed and wounded on the side of the Boers.

UNCLE SAM'S REPRESENTATIVE.

Washington Nov. 1.—The recent order assigning Capt. Samuel G. Sumner, Sixth Cavalry, military attache to the United States Embassy at London, to duty with the British army in the Transvaal has been revoked. Captain Slocum, Sixth Cavalry, military attache at Madrid, has started for the Transvaal, and probably will be the only United States military representative at the seat of war.

THE CABINET MEETNIG.

London Nov. 1.—The cabinet meeting to-day was exceptionally brief, but afterward the defence committee of the cabinet, consisting of the Duke of Devonshire, Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Marquis of Lansdowne and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, met at the Foreign Office and held a conference with the commander-in-chief of the forces, Lord Wolseley.

REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVING.

London, Nov. 1.—Sir George White's heroic admission of full responsibility and the tone of his despatch are regarded in some circles as virtually placing his case in the hands of the Home authorities, and it was rumored this evening that the War Office has already decided to supersede him.

About six thousand fresh troops will arrive at Cape Town on Sunday next, and will be available to reinforce Sir George White. Transports will arrive there daily after Sunday until, by the end of next week, 28,000 troops will have been landed in South Africa. These men are intended to form Sir Redvers Buller's army, but they will undoubtedly be detached to Natal if the situation there should become perilous.

The British army will eventually reach the huge total of 89,630, of which 64,634 will be regulars and the other 20,000 militia, [illegible] but excellent colonial troops.

BOERS MOVE FORWARD.

London, Nov. 1.—Public anxiety has been increased by a special despatch from Ladysmith, published in the late editions of the London morning newspapers, to the effect that before darkness yesterday the Boers re-occupied the old position held by their heavy artillery, which General White had reported silenced by the guns of the naval brigade from the Powerful, and had opened fire again. The despatch further says:

"The enemy is again closing in, and the situation is one of grave anxiety. Beyond doubt the Boer retirement yesterday, Monday, was a ruse to draw General White into the hilly country and away from the British camp."

A Close Call.

Yesterday morning between 8 and 9 o'clock, Mrs. G. W. Hatton, was driving along Charlotte St., and in attempting to cross the Grand Trunk tracks the buggy was struck by some cars that were being shunted there. Mrs. Hatton and the driver were thrown out, but fortunately escaped without injury, the rig, however, was badly damaged. It is a standing disgrace that there is no light at this crossing, and the Times would suggest that one be placed there without any further delay.

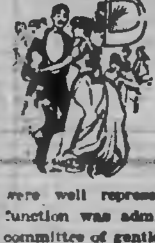
GREAT SOCIAL EVENT

Brilliant Affair Last Night in the Skating Rink.

AN IMMENSE SUCCESS.

The Large Building Beautifully Decorated for the Occasion.

The Most Eventful Function That Has Ever Taken Place in Peterborough—A Large Number of Guests Present.



DECIDEDLY the most brilliant social event of late years was the ball given last night in the rink to the Irish Football Team, at which the society circles of Peterborough and outside towns were well represented. The successful function was admirably managed by a committee of gentlemen who spared neither pains or expense to lend eclat to the affair.

The spacious building was decorated very tastily. The large gallery on the east side was used as a dining hall, a number of small tables being brought into requisition for the purpose. The floor of the dining hall was covered with canvas and the sides hung with bunting. The centre of the building presented a brilliant spectacle. The whole building was a thing of life and beauty, and when the melody of the well-trained orchestra issued forth, "There was a sound of revelry by night," at which Peterborough's fairest maidens and brave men were strongly in evidence.

The preparations for the ball were extensive and elaborate and the effect of careful attention to the smallest details was seen in the beautiful appearance of the building. The appointments were complete and artistic, and the comforts of the guests were well looked after by the courteous ushers.

WILL FRANCE AND RUSSIA HELP THE TRANSVAAL?

It remains to be see who much foundation there is for the assertion attributed to Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal's agent in Europe, that France and Russia will not permit England to annex the Transvaal or the Orange Free State. This may be a rumor invented to explain the fact that England's military and naval preparations seems out of proportion to the prospective exigencies of the campaign in South Africa. The Government has not only called out the reserves of the regular army, but also the militia, numbering over 130,000 men, while, on the other hand, the fleet normally stationed in the British Channel has been ordered to the Mediterranean, and its place will be filled by putting in commission all the cruisers that were mobilized for the last manoeuvres. The impressive demonstration of England's strength may be intended merely as a warning to other powers not to intervene; but would a warning be needed unless there were some grounds for apprehension?

Why should France and Russia interfere to preserve the independence of the Boer republics? Neither of these powers has, or expects to have, any territory in South Africa. On the other hand, neither of them has ever been known to enter into war from purely disinterested motives. Napoleon III. made Victor Emanuel pay for the assistance rendered in 1859 by the cession of Savoy and Nice. Alexander II., by the Russian Turkish War of 1877-78, counted upon gaining Bulgaria, and did gain Bessarabia. Undoubtedly the rescue of the Boer republics from political effacement would be put forward simply as a pretext for striking at vulnerable points in the British Empire. Among these are the Nile Valley and India. French troops could reach the upper waters of the Nile by an overland march from West Africa, and could doubtless reply upon the Khalifa's cooperation; then again, it is by no means certain that a French General in our day might not repeat the exploit of Bonaparte, who succeeded in evading Nelson and landing a large force in Egypt. As for India, if it can be attacked successfully at all by its Russian neighbors, the present would seem a favorable conjuncture, for the British army in India has just been depleted by at least ten thousand men, and there is no means of reinforcing it with trained white soldiers, inasmuch as Sir Redvers Buller is to use in South Africa, all the regulars than England can spare, including even the reserves.

While, however, the British Empire is vulnerable, notwithstanding its preponderance at sea, it by no means follows that Russia and France would not have more to lose than to gain by an intervention on behalf of the Boer republics. French commerce would, undoubtedly, be swept from the ocean, and such colonies as France possesses in the West Indies and in the Far East would be in jeopardy. Her warships might be destroyed in a series of battles, and thus the hundreds of millions of dollars expended on her navy during the last quarter of a century would go for naught. There is another argument in favor of the maintenance of peace, which would come home even more strongly to the inhabitants of Paris. A war with England would annihilate the opportunities of profit offered by the Exposition; in fact, no Exposition would be held. Under the circumstances, it is [illegible] probable that Paris public opinion would tolerate an interposition at this time on behalf of the Boers. Russia has no less powerful reasons for keeping the peace just now. She cannot defend her recently acquired possessions in the Far East until the Trans-Siberian railroad and its Manchurian branch are completed; for that work, several years may be required. Were a war to break out to-day, Russia would almost certainly lose Port Arthur and Talienwan, and, perhaps, Vladivostock itself, in view of the great superiority of England's fleet in Chinese waters. Against such almost inevitable injuries is to be set the bare chance of success in India.

Until we have counter evidence, more cogent than any yet brought forward, we must adhere to the opinion that Russia and France will not attempt to meddle with England's programme in South Africa.

TWO GOOD MOVES.

The new Ross cabinet in Ontario has made two moves, says the Toronto Telegram, which indicate that while the majority of the cabinet are men who were members of the Hardy government, there is a new and strong will in charge.

A commission of judges is named to investigate some of the election frauds.

A commission of bankers is named to report on the provincial finances and bookkeeping.

These are two things in which the government does well and pluckily. The province wants to see the inside of the "machine" which has been dishonoring the Liberal party. Also it wants to know whether the provincial treasury is really managed in a business-like way, and contains the surplus which former Liberal administrations have alleged.

The Ross government, of its own accord, offers a surety of straight answers to both questions. It begins well.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

In a way it manifests nature's sympathy with Indian summer when for the time being the leaves turn red.

Before he died General Symons gave the order for Yule's force to save itself and abandon him and the rest of the wounded rather than impede its retreat and impede the force. He was a brave man and ready to sacrifice himself for the sake of the safety of his brigade.

Cecil Rhodes positively knew that matters had come to a head in South Africa when the Boers put a price on his.

These later Boer reverses would indicate they are not getting a head even in the case of Cecil Rhodes.

Some of the hardships of war that the Boers at least won't directly encounter are the armored vessels of the British navy.

Five thousand pounds being offered for his head Cecil Rhodes' neck in the Transvaal is doubtless of more interest to him than even Laing's Neck

Still another reason for the autumn leaves on the trees getting crimson is the way their limbs are exposed.

While England's naval preparations may not show she's looking for trouble she's willing to go to see if there is any.

For a Chicago man to marry forty women would indicate they were of the ready maid kind.

While diamonds may be advancing even more in price the right sort of a lover will be satisfied if the girl only gets dearer and dearer.

Possibly the British at the Cape have an idea some of the evils there may trend to be cured by doctoring the messages.

WHO BADEN-POWELL IS.

The Hero of Mafeking on Whom Eyes are Turned At Present.

Col. Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powel, the hero of Mafeking, is a cavalry colonel of high reputation and a great deal of South African experience. About six months ago he went to South Africa to organize the force which he is leading so boldly, and previous to that he was, though a full colonel in the army, lieutenant-colonel, commanding the 5th Dragoon Guards. He is 42 years old, and is the son of a clergyman and Oxford professor, the late Rev. Mr. Baden-Powel of Oxford and Langton Manor. Educated at Charter house, he, when 19 years of age, entered a cavalry regiment, the 13th Hussars, and in time became its adjutant, serving with it in India, Afghanistan and South Africa. In 1887-89 he served on the staff as assistant military secretary in South Africa and participated in the Zulu war of 1888, being mentioned in despatches. From 1890 to 1893 he was assistant military secretary in Malta, and then, 1895, went to the Ashanti expedition, commanding the native levies. Out of that campaign he took a star and a brevet lieutenant-colonelcy.

His real claim to attention, however, came from his work in Matabeleland in the rebellion that followed the disastrous issue of the Jameson raid. He was chief staff officer in that affair, and earned great praise for his work. An excellent feature of his character which showed in these operations was his power of getting on well with his subordinates and getting the best results from them. He emerged from the campaign a brevet colonel while still a regimental major. In 1897 he was promoted from the 13th Hussars to be lieutenant-colonel commanding the 5th Dragoon Guards.

Col. Baden-Powel is a famous sportsman and a bit of an author. "Who's Who" makes a point of noting its subjects' recreations, and Colonel Baden-Powel's list shows what an eclectic fighting man he is. Here it is—Pigsticking (winner of the Kadir Cup); polo, big game shooting, boating, yachting, stage managing, acting and singing, painting and etching. He is the author of a sporting book, "Pig-sticking, or Hog-hunting," a standard manual of the exciting Indian sport of running down the fierce wild hog of India. He has published three military books, "Reconnaissance and Scouting," "Vedette," and "Cavalry Instruction," and a couple of histories of campaigns, "The Downfall of Prempeh," and "The Matabele Campaign." So it seems that he can ride, write, sing, paint, act, shoot, sail—and fight.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

A Tourist Car WHAT IT IS

A Canadian Pacific Tourist Car is similar in general appointment to this company's Palace Sleepers. It is large, airy, perfectly ventilated, handsomely finished in light wood and upholstered in leather or corduroy.

Portable section partitions, which firmly lock in place at night, make an open interior with no obstructing berth supports by day, and insure perfect seclusion to each berth by night.

Any Canadian Pacific Agent will gladly give you further particulars and secure you accommodation in one of these cars.

TACTICS OF REAL WAR.

An Interesting Description of What Happens When Armies Meet.

Most people have wondered at some time or other exactly how a battle is fought. When squads of scouting parties meet each other they either fight in an irregular fashion or run away. With a systematic battle it is different. Before a systematic battle one army selects some place at which to resist the advance of the other. The advancing army usually leave the other aside and go on by another route to the capital city, which it wants to reach, because if it did the army left aside would quickly destroy the advancing army's "communications," and cut off supplies of food and ammunition.

The army which takes the defensive selects some point that can be more easily defended—some point where a river or a creek, or a line of hills, serve to give it the advantage in a fight. The enemy must either attack that army here or drive it out of its position, or must "flank" it out if it itself to go forward.

When one army has planted itself in a position of its choice, and the other advances to attack it, the army that is standing still throws out lines of pickets to watch for the enemy's advance. The enemy, as he advances, also throws out a cloud of skirmishers to "feel" the positions and avoid traps and ambuscades.

In the same way the general who is awaiting attack tries to discover through his skirmishers what his enemy's plan of battle is, and what points he must needs to concentrate his own men.

While awaiting this information he posts his men where he thinks they will be most useful, and also stations men at points a little in rear of the line of battle, from which he can order them at any point where strength may be needed.

When the skirmishers of the advancing army meet the skirmishers of the resisting army there is apt to be hot fighting for a time, but this is a mere preliminary to the actual battle.

The army standing on the defensive holds its line in position—every battery placed where it will do the most good, and every infantryman lying down and taking the utmost advantage of every tree, stump, log or inequality of the ground, to protect himself as much as possible.

While the skirmishers are doing their work the heaviest strain of war falls on the nerves of the men in line of battle. They have nothing to do but wait. Then comes the uproar of battle—the dust, the blood, the advance, the retreat, the shock of arms, the murderous volleys of the infantry, the thunder storm of artillery; in short, the final desperate conflict of determined men for the mastery, all of them directed by cool-headed commanders, sitting on their horses at points of vantage for observation, and directing a reinforcement here, a withdrawl of men there, the hurrying of artillery to one point, an onset of cavalry at another, and at a critical moment an up-and-at-them charge with the bayonets.

Wherever there is advantage on either side the general commanding that side throws troops forward in as heavy masses as possible to make the most of it. If one line or the other be broken, every conceivable effort is made to convert the breach into victory. And if victory comes the cavalry thunder forward in pursuit and in an endeavor to convert the enemy's defeat into rout.—London Herald.

Dewey Will Marry.

Washington Oct. 31.—Admiral Dewey announced to some of his more intimate friends last night the fact of his engagement to Mrs W B Hazen, of this city. Mrs Hazen is the widow of Gen Hazen, formerly chief officer of the army, who died about ten years, and is a sister of John S McLean, Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio. She is a woman of large means, about 40 years old, and popular in the best social circles in Washington.

Parting Words of Officers.

Toronto, Oct. 30.—From Father Point Lieut.-Col. Otter wired to Mayor Shaw this morning as follows: "Off successfully in good form and spirits and full of gratitude to our kind friends." Capt. Barker supplimented the message of the Commandant with this despatch addressed to Ald. Graham: "Thank merchants, citizens and press for countless gifts received by me for men of Toronto company. All are well."

THE TURF REVIEW.

Direct, 2:14¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report

Narion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¼ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:26, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:26¼.

A horse with the peculiar name of Eauw, by Sauaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altire, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16¼; La Honda, 2:12¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 2-year-old bay filly Narion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:50 race at Norfolk, Va., May 22 in 2:27¼.—

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "Brought out to sea you as [illegible] As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinking he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a field where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign.—Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics to be a professor of politics, she will not experiment with Grover Cleveland but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt [illegible]

Snap Shots With a Graphophone.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the bananas should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

Cast Away on an Island.

St John's, Nfld., Oct. 30.—It is reported here that a fishing crew of thirty people are on a desolate island off the northern section of the coast, where they have been virtually abandoned for some time owing to the fact that the instructions for a vessel to bring them down miscarried. A special steamer must be sent promptly to their assistance or they will perish from cold and hunger during the coming winter.

Gift to the Contingent.

Quebec, Oct. 31.—Thomas C. Orndorff, of Worcester, Mass., presented to the contingent yesterday one thousand bandoliers, valued at over one thousand dollars. These carry each 1,000 rounds of ammunition. The gift is a most generous one, and deserves the hearty thanks of every Canadian.

A GOLF STORY.

How a Prominent Local Sport Got Entangled.

One of the newer golfers in the Peterborough club is a gentleman whose weighty business cares have heretofore prevented him from indulging in the game of brassies and high balls. His wife had always insisted that too close attention to business was ruining his health. She had learned the game and expiated not only upon the enjoyment of the game itself, but the physical benefits to be derived therefrom. So rather late in the season he appeared on the golf grounds in appropriate costume and took his first lesson, his wife meanwhile looking on approvingly. He liked the game all right and she was well satisfied with the evident improvement in his health, but when she ventured to accompany him over the course once or twice she was astounded, not to say shocked, at the wonderful development in his use of profane words. During their whole married life nothing had occured that would induce so much strong language as seemed now to accompany a single round of the course. Being a bright and inventive woman, after some study she evolved a plan which she thought would meet the exigencies of the case. At her suggestion he was to pick up a small pebble and put into the pocket of his coat each time he felt inclined to use a bad word the theory being that after a few pebbles had accumulated their weight would remind him that he was becoming too profane

The next day he visited the golf grounds alone and she was greatly surprised to find him coming home late for dinner, for he was one of the most punctual of men. When he finally staggered up the steps he looked like a bowed and bent old man laboring under a stream of years and care. The pockets of his coat bulged out on each side until he looked like a newly inflated balloon.

"Well, dear, how did you get along to-day?"

"All right."

"How about your swearing. Did you use the pebbles as I advised?"

He slowly reached down into his side pockets and carefully took about two pecks of pebbles "These," he said, "are all I could carry. I hired Alex. Reid's express wagon to bring the remainder."

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Kilson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a cloth will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave them there, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 98 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis.

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

When the time of the final leave taking came the soldiers were on the upper deck and high in the riggings of the vessels. One of Capt Burk's men had climbed to the top of the first mast, and hanging there swung his cap to those on shore. Below him was a sea of white helmets and dark tunics, and as the first gun from the Citadel roared out the vast multitude took up the strain of "God Save the Queen," and the cannon of the Citadel marked the time.

ELECTION PROSECUTION.

Proceedings to be Taken in Connection with South Ontario.

Toronto, Oct. 31.—The wheels of justice have started to move in connection with the prosecution of all the persons reported for bribery by the judges who presided at the South Ontario election trials. The order for the prosecution was given to Mr Farewell, County Crown Attorney, at Whitby, last July, but owing to the ambiguity of the election law proceedings have been hanging fire until now. The law affecting the case has just been settled to the satisfaction of the judges, and yesterday Mr Farewell laid information against all persons reported for bribery in South Ontario, and applied before Mr Justice Osler for the issue of summonses against the accused.

The summonses asked that the alleged bribers should each be compelled to pay the fine of $200 required by law, or in default should be committed to jail, and should also be disqualified for eight years from sitting in the Legislature, or voting at an election, or holding any municipal office. Justice Osler will consult with his colleagues, Justice Ferguson and Justice Rose, in regard to to the matter, and if the summonses are issued the trial will take place at Whitby.

A CONTINENT OF WAR.

Mars Appears to Hold His sway Now in Africa.

In seven distinct sections of the African continent war is at present being waged against savage tribes or settlers by civilized nations of Europe. England is concerned in three of the campaigns, France in three and Germany in one, while off in one corner of northwestern Africa the Moors are battling against the border tribesmen along the boundary of Algiers. Truly Africa is to-day the continent of war.

The bitterest struggle being waged is that between England and the Boers. How long the contest will last none can say. It will certainly last until England has materially increased her South African forces. Perhaps it will last longer if she mismanages her campaign, for the Boers are stubborn hardy and capable fighters and England can afford to take no chances with them. Of course she must win eventually by virtue of her superior numbers and enormous resources but when she wins her troubles will not be over. The seed of discontent has been sown and must bear fruit. It is certain that when the Transvaal submits it will do so sullenly. Whenever the conditions are ripe new insurrections will spring up, so that bloodshed will doubtless be the harvest garnered in South Africa for some time.

England's other troubles are in the Nile Valley and the Uganda region. In the former, Gen. Kitchener still has to deal with the Khalifa's forces, who have withdrawn to the fastnesses of the Soudan. They must be dislodged. Mahdism is an infection which grows too rapidly to be dismissed lightly after it has received one setback. It is a gangrenous growth that must be plucked out lest it spread and break out in more virulent form later. The Khalifa must not be defeated. He must be annihilated.

Maj. Macdonald is waging the third British campaign in the Uganda, where the victory is practically won, but where a lesson must be impressed upon the scattered bands of hill tribesmen.

The campaigns France has engaged upon are modest ones, all of them. The only unpleasant feature of them is that when over they will surely have to be fought again in a brief while. France has not enough men in West Africa to make her sovereignty sure without constant skirmishing of more or less importance.

The first is the Foreau-Lamy expedition. This was sent from Algiers more than a year ago to march to the southern border of the Soudan and there fight the way against the Tauregas to Lake Tchad as the vanguard of the march of civilization to the interior in the guise of a French railway.

The second expedition is a branch of the Foreau-Lamy expedition. This is in charge of Lieut. Pallier and was directed against the tribesmen near Lake Tchad, who had murdered Capt. Casemejoux.

France's third trouble is shared by Germany. The two had a disagreement over the boundary line between Ashantee and Togoland. A military commission was appointed to investigate it and settle upon a boundary. The commission proceeded to the field where it was set upon by the natives of the Kaffir's country. Three battles were fought, in all of which the French and German troops fought side by side. In the last one at Layma a decisive victory was won and the natives routed. Two or three more battles will likely be necessary, however, before the whole trouble can be finally settled.

The Moorish trouble is also a comparatively slight one. A force of Moors were set upon on the Algerian boundary by the Ascaris tribesmen, a wandering tribe from North Soudan, a battle was fought and the Moors routed. The survivors returned to Morocco and an expedition was organized to pursue the Ascaris and the particular band annihilated. The trouble was taken up, however, by other tribes of Ascaris and a miniature war is now being waged along the Moorish frontier by the two forces.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of to-day and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahmin monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to carry the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Versus Fiction.

The doctor looked wise and said it was "nervous indigestion."

But he didn't cure it.

So Mr. Thos. G. Lever, of Lever, S. C., wrote to Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y.

And now Mr. Lever is well.

Dr. R. V. Pierce is and for thirty years has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo. During this time he has probably treated more cases of chronic, or lingering diseases than any other physician in the world.

Invalids from all over the world write to him and receive advice free of charge. During the early years of his practice Dr. Pierce compounded his "Golden Medical Discovery" which he has used ever since in treating all affections of the lungs and bronchial tubes; for purifying the blood; for toning up the nerves and whenever an honest reliable non-alcoholic tonic was needed. In connection with it, he prescribes what other special medicine may be required in exceptional cases and gives directions as to diet and hygiene.

The result is health.

Mr. Lever writes:

"I was afflicted with what the doctors called nervous indigestion. Took medicine from my family physician to no avail. I thought myself incurable as I suffered so much with pain under my ribs and an empty feeling in my stomach. I was getting very nervous and suffered a great deal mentally, thinking that death would soon claim me. I was irritable and impatient and greatly reduced in flesh. I could scarcely eat anything that would not produce a bad feeling in my stomach. I wrote Dr. Pierce. He prescribed his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' and gave me some simple hygienic rules. I am well again. I believe the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' will cure any case of indigestion, torpid liver, or chronic cold."

Insist upon having "Golden Medical Discovery" for nothing else is "just as good."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about [illegible]0 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Memaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Bill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. B. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 69 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom. Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3¼cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Bill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3¼ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

WEDDING BELLS.

Marriage of Wm. E. Rogers and Miss Susie Whitcroft.

THE marriage of Mr. Wm. E. Rogers to Miss Susie Whitcroft, was solemnized last night at the residence of the bride's father, 382 Aylmer street. The nupital knot was tied by Rev. J. C. Davidson, and was witnessed by only the near relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Lottie Whitcroft, while little Miss Hazel, aged six, another sister, acted as maid of honor. Mr. Samuel Drury acted as groomsman.

The bride was handsomely attired in a dress of cream silk organdy, with insertion and lace trimmings, and carried a beautiful bouquet of flowers. The bridesmaid wore white silk organdy, trimmed with lace, and flowers, while the maid of honor looked charming in a dress of pink and flowers. The parlor was beautifully decorated with flowers and plants.

The large number of rich presents received indicate the popularity of the bride and the esteem in which she is held.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will take up their residence in Mr. Rogers' new house, 442 Charolette street. The Times joins in felicitous greetings.

THE RUGBY MATCH.

Irish Teams Wins From Peterborough by 16 Points to 3.

Yesterday was not the 17th of March nor the 12th of July either, but it was a great day for Ireland all the same. Fifteen of the very cream of the atheletes of the Green Isle are on the rampage through this broad Dominion looking up Canadian footballers and Canadian girls and Canucks in general. Their tour has been a great series of triumphs. Foot-ball hath her victories no less than war and the Irishmen have been looking after these so closely since they first struck Halifax that their onward progress had been a succession of triumphs that even the much worshipped Dewey might envy.

Ireland herself is nothing if she is not hospitable to strangers. An Irishman would as soon give you half his dinner as he would a crack with his shillalaigh. What more natural then that Caanada hospitable to everyone, should be especially so to the Irish visitors. Everywhere they have got the glad hand and Peterborough was no exception. Her citizens received the touring rugbyists with the warmest welcome and made the most of them while here. The crowd that gathered at the Nicholls Park yesterday afternoon was one of the largest that has attended a sporting event in town for years. Old and young were there. The ladies were out in great numbers to see the "bhoys." There were many carriages on the grounds. Every good play of both sides was applauded.

The game was played according to British rules, and the Peterborough stalwarts were at considerable of a disadvantage in this. But they put up a game that surprised the visitors and impressed the townspeople. They were defeated by a score of 16 points to 3, but this score is a most creditable one to them in view of the overwhelming victories the Irish team has had on its trip from Halifax here.

The Irishmen play a beautiful game. Their work shows scientific training and practice. In the first half they scored 11 points—3 on a penalty kick, 3 on a try that was not converted and 5 on a try and goal kick. Peterborough got nil. In the second half the locals played a splendid game. The Irishmen again scored 5, giving them 16 in all, and Peterborough made 3, Hal. Burnham making a great kick between the posts from a most difficult position. The Irishmen did not expect that he could make it and were much impressed with his skill.

All the Peterborough boys played well, Burnham, Vic. McWilliams, Rickey, the Bell brothers and Rolly McWilliams doing particularly good work.

The teams were—

Irish Gentlemen—R. R. Boyd, back; J. L. Davidson, R. B. Doran, B. W. Rowan, and H. A. Boyd, half-backs; J. F. Stokes and A. C. Rowan, quarter-backs; J. G. Franks (capt.), T. A. Harvey, H. E. Stevenson, J. Bryes, J. G. Grovenwhite, J. C. Lepper, H. P. McCredy and R. C. Nicholson, forwards.

Peterborough—McLeod, back; G. Bell, H. Burnham, Rickey and V. McWilliams half-backs; A. McClellan and N. Bell, quarters; Stethem, Bushell, F. Burnham, Collier, Brundrette, Hollingshead, R. Davidson and R. F. McWilliams (capt.) forwards.

Boyd—Referee.

Dancing was begun about ten o'clock and from then until intermission the sweet strains of the Peterborough orchestra gave forth inspiration to the dancers. The ballroom presented a magnificent scene, for beauty was well represented within its fascinating precincts, and nature's own beauty was enhanced and intensified by the magnificent costumes worn, which were many and beautiful. A partial list of the costumes is given below—

Mrs. Aylmer—Black silk with turquois blue velvet.

Miss Carnegie—White and green grenadine over red.

Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun—Green satin and sequins trimmings.

Miss K. Hall—Muslin dress.

Miss A. Hall—Muslin dress.

Miss Daisy Hamilton—Pink satin, steel trimmings and pearl ornaments.

Miss Hamilton—White organdie over green silk.

Miss Gertie Kendry—White muslin.

Mrs. H. LeBrun—White taffeta silk and black jetted net and velvet with jet ornaments.

Miss Beck, London—Black silk, with black lace with pink trimmings and diamond ornaments.

Mrs. R. B. Rogers—Black brocaded silk with mauve trimming.

Mrs. (Dr.) J. R. Stratton—Nile green brocaded silk, chiffon trimmings and diamond ornaments.

Miss Carnegie—White and green grenadine over red.

Miss Burton—Yellow silk with blue mouseline desoie.

Miss Boucher—Pink organdie over pink silk.

Mrs. P. Campbell—Pale blue Irish poplin and Irish ornaments.

Mrs. R. S. Davidson—Pink silk with black chiffon trimmings.

Mrs. K. G. Lech—Black velvet with jet trimmings.

Miss Allie Hall—Pink silk.

Mrs. A. H. Stratton—Black velvet with jet ornaments, pink and white ornaments.

Miss Vernon, Montreal—Pale blue satin covered with mouneline desoie, pearl ornaments, crynanth.

Mrs. Dr. Brown—Black satin with cream satin trimmings and chenille and cream roses.

Mrs. Houston—Green silk organdie over white taffeta, pearl ornaments.

Mrs. W. A. Sanderson—Yellow brocaded satin and satin with sequins trimmings.

Mrs. W. H. Hill—White organdie trimmed with pink chiffon on pink satin and point lace, diamond ornaments.

Mrs. A. Cox—Grey silk.

Miss Maggie Cox—Bluette silk poplin.

Mrs. Grassette—Black velvet princess, trimmed with white satin and white cut jet, brilliants.

Mrs. McAllister—Crimson silk, pearls and diamonds, chrysanthemums.

Miss Baynett—Crepe over pink silk, richly embroidered pink and white roses, pearl ornaments.

Miss Edmison—Blue silk with black net, jet trimmings, pink carnations.

Mrs. Dr. Moher—Yellow silk with white white chiffon and pearl trimmings.

At intermission the guests partook of a supper. The delacicies were supplied from McQuay's, and the discussion of turkey en aspic, and jellies a la macedoine, from prettily decorated tables, was a pleasant variation from the duties of the ballroom. Dancing was continued immediately after supper, and continued until an early hour.

The following were the patronesses—Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun, Mrs. C. B. McAllister, Mrs. Peter Campbell, Mrs. G. W. Hatton, Mrs. J. B. McWilliams, Mrs. R. S. Davidson, Mrs. R. B. Rogers and Mrs. J. R. Stratton.

The Stewards were—Messrs. R. B. Rogers, G. W. Hatton, R. F. McWilliams, A. J. Terrill, H. B. Burnham, A. W. Spence, R. M. Dennistoun, C. B. McAllister, J. Crane, F. D. Mackay and G. A. Stethem.

The ball was a very brilliant success, and those in whose hands the arrangements were left are to be congratulated.

A.—He agreed with the other. I think they both stated it.

Q.—Was this the only measurement made?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Could you have made the measurement of the box and the amount of cement required at any time?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Were the two boxes of granite used?

A.—Yes.

Q.—This was applied as a surface finish. What was the result?

A.—It would not trowel. It would not leave a smooth surface.

Mr. Dennistoun—Was not this batch 2 parts of granite to 1 of cement?

Mr. Ranney—I supposed it was.

Mr. Ranney—The finishers suggested the addition of sand. I thought it would work smoother. I did this of my own notion. I supposed that the complement of cement was in and I could not ask them to add more and I had to make the work go on. I did not add sand because the specifications give the engineer power to add sand or dust. I thought the proportions used were those called for by the specifications.

To Mr. Dennistoun witness stated that he never remembered seeing the box or measure filled with cement.

Resuming, to Mr. Edwards, witness said that he had not reported to Mr. Hay that the specifications must be wrong, because the mixture would not trowel. He had reported that he was using sand. He was not sure, but he thought he reported the matter to Mr. Hay that day. He was sure he reported the composition of the mixture in the first days. Both Mr. Hay and Ald. Langford knew at the commencement what materials were being used. Ald. Langford frequently spent an hour or an hour and a half watching the work. This was at the beginning, and not when the work was half done. He explained to Mr. Hay that two of granite and one of cement would not trowel. The matter of arranging the quantity of sand was between witness and the finishers. Mr. Sheehy did not interfere as to the Quantity of sand which was being used. Mr. Sheehy was present. A half a box of sand was first used, with two boxes of granite and five and a half bags of cement. In making concrete in other places witness had used the proportions of six to one and in stone masonary about three to one. He had heard that inspector Bartlett stated that 5 1-2 bags of cement would not fill a box. Mr. Bartlett was just commencing the Evans & Langford contract at this time. When he heard this he had the box measured again. The work he was looking after was at Westlake's livery stable then. He filled the box with cement. It took seven bags. He watched the filling and when Mr. Sheehy thought it was full, witness did not. He went to get a straight edge and when he came back there were seven empty bags on the platform. He was not out of sight of the box when he went to get the straight edge. He believed at the same time that seven bags filled the box but had counted the empty ones afterwards. He did not see anything done with the empty bags. He had made a report on the matter. He thought he had been deceived on the occasion of both measurings. The bags must have been purloined. He was led to believe in the first instance that 5 1-2 bags would fill the box and in the second case, seven bags. In reality it took nine bags. He would not answer that the empty bags had been purloined when he was measuring but it was his belief that such was the case.

Mr. Edwards—"Do you charge that the bags were purloined?"

Mr. Ranney—"I do."

Mr. Ranney—"Mr. Sheehy was there and and Mr. John Kerr and Mr. Lavery. Witness back was turned as he went to get the straight edge. He was away about three minutes. He would not say that Mr. Sheehy saw this done. He informed Mr. Hay the same day that it took seven bags instead of five and a half to fill it. He had since measured up the walk and found that in Mr. Sheehy's first contract there was 41,182 square feet of surface. The entire contents of the base amounted to 12,729 cubic feet and there was 3,992 feet in the curb.

The contractor was also half a bag of cement short in one cubic yard of the concrete for the base. Only four bags were used to a yard whereas the specifications called for four bags and a half. Alderman Langford knew from the first that the specifications were not being followed. Alderman Langford knew the very hour that witness discovered about the incorrect measurements of the cement. Witness was instructed to allow the work to proceed without any change. Witness had told the Mayor and Alderman Langford and Alderman McWilliams that Mr. Sheehy was slighting the work. He could not remember the date when he had told them. He had told the Mayor in his office one day about the matter. The men appeared to be schooled to slight the work. Witness had told Alderman McWilliams of the frequent contentions. Mr. Sheehy always contended that the guages were wrong.

The investigation was adjourned for luncheon at this juncture.

THE DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.

Further Particulars of the Terrible Accident Near Apsley.

At Cameron's mine on Saturday, Oct. 21st, one of the most deplorable accidents occurred that ever happened in the North Country, and which resulted in the sudden and horrible extinction of one life and the maiming for life and blinding of another. Just as the miners were getting ready to put in the last blast for the night, Peter Weese, one of the employees, was in the blacksmith shop warming some dynamite for the finishing up of their work, but it proved to be the finish of his life, for the dynamite exploded, killing him instantly. His body was horribly mutilated both hands were blown off, his eye blown out, his right leg torn in a horrible manner, and his body fearfully lacerated. Peter Weese had been married only about ten months, and his widow berfit of her husband in such a shocking and sudden manner has the sympathy of the whole community, and his afflicted parents and sisters and brothers share in the public sympathy.

The foreman of the mine Mr. Galbraith, had one eye blown out, and the other blinded. His hands were so badly injured that Dr. Kelly and Dr. Harding of Coe Hill, amputated one hand at the wirst and the other at the first joint. He has been removed from his boarding place at Mr. J. A. McCall's to Coe Hill, where he will be more convient to his medical attendants. He expects his wife and son from Massachusetts as soon as the journey can be made. The foreman had his senses all through his terrible experience. The shock of the explosion split the building in half, hurling one side one way, and the other, another. Finger bones and shreds of flesh lay in all directions. Weese's horse in the stable, a short distance from the shop was blown, stable and all, a distance of 15 feet, and lay till the men were taken care of. When the horse was helped to its feet it seemed crazy for a time, and it still deaf, but is able to do light work.

At the time of the explosion Mr. W. Daniels was going out of the front door, and was blown a distance of two rods without any serious injury. However, he was dazed for a time, and and Peter Weese's brother, David, was deaf all the evening. His brother were in the shaft. Both were terribly shocked.

Bryan Come to Grief

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 2.—In order to meet an engagement to speak last night at Ravenna, W. J. Bryan was driven across country from Louis City twenty-two miles, three relays of horses being employed. When about five miles from the start the carriage was upset over an embankment and Mr. Bryan and the other occupants were thrown out. All were more or less bruised, though not seriously. At Ravenna Mr. Bryan spoke in a lumber yard for an hour with the temperature at twelve degrees above zero and the water in a pitcher on the speaker's stand freezing.

PARTITION OF SAMOAN ISLANDS

One of the Three Powers Now in Possession Must Step Out.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The negotiations for the partition of the Samoan Islands are proceeding rapidly and officials here would not be surprised if a final agreement were reached in the near future. The discussion which is going on in London with the co-operation of the authorities here and in Berlin has brought out certain essentials on which all three powers, Great Britain, Germany and the United States, appear to be agreed.

It is stated that the determination was reached that the tripartite government of the group should come to an end, and that not more than two powers should govern the islands. It seems to be generally accepted by the negotiations that the United States would be one of the two powers to be represented, and that the island of Tutuila, on which the harbor of Pago-Pago is located, would naturally fall to the lot of the United States.

England Agreeable.

It is understood that the British authorities quite fully coincide with this view, and that while the Germans seemed to regard it favorably, it was left open for more mature approval by the Berlin authorities. In conceding this island and harbor to the United States account was taken of the fact that if an agreement were reached on this point it would still be for the United States to give its approval to the arrangement. One of the remaining islands, Upolu, is of much value, while the other, Savaii, is practically valueless.

It is suggested that Great Britain cede the Gilbert and Solomon Islands to Germany, the latter retiring from Samoa.

The Fiji Islands and some other points also have been considered during the discussion, but thus far Germany has not acted favorably on the suggestion and there have been evidences that she preferred to retain her interest and make compensation to Great Britain. This remains open and appears to be the chief point remaining in the way of a final adjustment.

Expedition to Abyssinia.

London, Nov. 2.—Another British expedition to Abyssinia has been arranged and left England on the 25th. The members are Mr. James J. Harrison, Mr. Powell Cotton, Mr. W. Fitzhugh Whitehouse, of Newport, Rhode Island, and Mr. A. E. Butter. Mr. Donald Clarke, who has done much work in the East and West African coasts, and with Colonel Lugard in Ngamiland, will go as surveyor and geographer, and a taxidermist will also accompany the party.

The objects of the expedition are scientific and sporting, and it is expected that the journey will occupy about nine months. Striking south from Adis Abeba the party will explore the country between that place and Lake Stefanie, and also the unexplored regions to the western border of Abyssinia.

The Statement Denied.

Washington, Nov. 2.—It is emphatically denied, as stated in the Spanish Senate, that islands in the Philippines were excluded from the treaty of peace. Reference to the terms of the Spanish-American treaty and to the map only is necessary to show that the islands of Batanes and Calayan are included in the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands, ceded to the United States. The treaty fixes the line as running from west to east along or near the twentieth latitude and through the middle of the navigable channel of Bachis, from the 118th to the 127th degree of longitude.

Both of the islands mentioned are well within the boundary line mentioned in the treaty, as the Bachis Channel runs between the Batanes Islands and Formosa, and Calayan is still further south than the Batanes.

Foundered at Sea.

New York, Nov. 2.—The Clyde Line steamer Comanche, Captain Pennington, which arrived this morning from Jacksonville via Charlestown, Oct. 28, had on board Captain Styles and seven men of the schooner Napoleon Boughton, which sprang a leak and foundered on Tuesday five miles southwest of Frying Pan shoals, in fourteen fathoms of water. The crew were taken off by the Comanche only five minutes before the schooner sank.

The War in Venezuela.

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 2.—General leader of the revolution in Venezuela, has formerly blocaded Porto Cabello, the only port not occupied by Castro's forces, with two cruisers. Commerce with that port has been stopped. Castro has won two victories over Hernandez, and the former's Government is becoming well established.

Back from Alaska.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—The McCullough, Admiral Dewey's despatch boat, now a revenue cutter, has arrived from Alaska, where she conveyed Senator Fairbanks, chairman of the Alaska boundary commission; Senator Foster, of Washington, and Governor Brady, of Alaska. The cutter also took Judge Johnston from St. Michael's to Cape Nome, where he settled numerous disputes. He also held court at Unga, Kruluk and Yakutat. The McCullough reports a very stormy passage.

For the War Fund.

London, Nov. 2.—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, Canadian High Commissioner to London, has contributed £1,000 to the Transvaal war fund. The sum of £[illegible] has been subscribed by Lord Mountstephen.

Freeman's Journal, in yesterday's issue, says the wild whoops of the English press regarding the support given by Canada to the British arms will probably prove to have been premature. No judicious reader, it says, can reflect on the messages from the Dominion and fail to note the unwillingness of Sir Wilfried Laurier to encourage the jingo movement. The thousand Canadian volunteers now on their way to Africa have not behind them the good-will of the Canadian nation.

BOERS ARE NOW SHELLING GEN. WHITE'S POSITION

Only Twenty British Killed and Eight Hundred and Seventy Captured in the Recent Defeat.

BURGHERS SAID TO BE NEARING GREYTOWN.

Further Details From Dundee Battle, Indicating That the Fusiliers Lost as Heavily as the Hussars—Naval Guns Trying to Keep Boers at Bay at Ladysmith.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Viewed in the perspective of time the disaster to British arms at Ladysmith is steadily increasing in magnitude. The news from Natal again intense relief throughout England this morning for it made clear that the capture of Carlton's column after its famous night march, spoiled by the fall of boulders, was not attended with the wholesale slaughter of officers and men which was feared in some quarters. It appears that only 20 men and officers were killed in Monday's fighting that one hundred were wounded, and that 870 are prisoners in the hands of the Boers.

General White's despatch of yesterday stated that doctors with ambulances had been sent out from the British camp to the scene of battle, which gives the impression that some of the wounded were to be brought back to Ladysmith for treatment, and as the Boer hospital service is notoriously inadequate it is not likely they would desire to take the more seriously surgical cases upon their hands, so that a good proportion of the wounded may not be in captivity. It is likely, therefore, that among the 870 prisoners are a good many soldiers who were slightly wounded.

Another theory is, of course, that the killed, wounded and prisoners are three distinct classes, and that they are all in the hands of the Boers, in which case the total British losses would amount to 990. As the former supposition is more probable, however, it does not appear that General White will be deprived of many more than about 900 men, as foretold in this despatch yesterday.

The shelling of Ladysmith by the Boers is still going on, as is evidenced by a despatch to-day that Lieut. Egerton of the Powerful, has been seriously wounded, and which further indicates that the Boers are getting the range of the naval guns which were brought up from Durban, so that if the men of the naval brigade do not have a care their own feat of dismounting a gun from its platform may be repeated against them.

News of a somewhat serious nature comes from Pietermaritzburg. It it is true that the Boers have reached Greytown, Natal, by way of Zululand, they are now fifty miles from Ladysmith, on the opposite side of Natal from the Free State and the bodies now operating against White, who thus has enemies in his rear. Moreover, through Greytown runs one of the telegraph lines from Ladysmith to Durban, and a road which would be of great importance to the British were the railway interrupted. It seems improbable, however, that the Boers would risk stirring up the Zulus by entering Natal through their country, for the Boers hav everything to lose by antagonizing their natural enemies, the blacks, who are only waiting for an opportunity to assist the British.

CASUALTIES AT NICKLOSON'S NEK.

London, Nov. 2.—A special despatch from Ladysmith says twenty British dead and one hundred wounded have been counted on the scene of Monday's disaster while 870 prisoners were sent to Pretoria.

HOLDING HIS GROUND.

London, Nov. 2.—The War Office has received a telegram despatched from Ladysmith at 9.25 this morning, saying that General White was wall an dholding his position.

FUSILIERS ARE MISSING.

London, Nov. 2.—Another list of casualties at Dundee was issued by the War Office this morning. It gives eighty-two no-commissioned officers and men of the Dublin Fusiliers missing, indicating that the Boers captured as many Fusiliers as they did Hussars.

LIEUT. EGERTON WOUNDED.

London, Nov. 2.—The War Office this afternoon issued the following despatch "Chief of Staff, Ladysmith, to War Secretary—

"Ladysmith, Nov. 2.—Lieut. Egerton, H. M. S. Powerful, dangerously wounded this morning by a shell, left knee and right foot. Life not in danger at present."

It was inferred from this despatch that the artillery duel between the Boers and British continues, as Lieut. Egerton was a gunnery lieutenant with the big naval guns.

BOERS RACH POMEROY.

Pietermartizburg, Natal, Nov. 2.—It is reported that the Boers are occupying parts of Zululand and that they have taken Pomeroy, fifty miles from Greytown, which is fifty miles from Ladysmith and between Ladysmith and the sea. One of the telegraph lines from Ladysmith to Durban passes via Greytown and is evidently threatened.

THE SEIGE OF KIMBERLEY.

Hope Town, Cape Colony, Nov. 2.—Magistrate Harmsworth has arrived from Klipdam and reports that there are six thousand Boers around Kimberley, and that all the roads are strictly patrolled. He says he passed close enough to Kimberley to see the search lights, and was informed that the defenders of Kimberley were satisfied that they could hold out, but wre wearied with the inactivity and hoped that a relieving force would soon arrive.

Stories of Boer victories have spread rapidly along the western border, and Magistrate Harmsworth estimates that over half the Dutch residents of Bechuland and Griqualand will join the Boers after the declaration of annexation.

SEIZED ANOTHER BRIDGE.

Cape Town, Oct. 31.—Delayed in transmission—It is asserted that three thousand Boers have collected at Bethulie Bridge, under Field Cornet Dutoit. The Orange river is now in full flood, and fording is reported to be impossible.

Bethulie bridge is a substantial structure, 1,400 feet in length, over the Orange river, the boundary between Cape Colony and the Free State. The main line from Port Elizabeth on the coast, and Blomfontein, Orange Free State, crosses the river by means of the bridge, 30 or 40 miles from the river, is the town of Burghersdorp, with a population of 1,279. The village of Bethulie, with 544 people, lies three miles on the Boer side of the stream.

BOERS LOST VERY HEAVILY.

London, Nov. 2.—The brevity of the news received from Ladysmith since Tuesday night has not relieved the anxiety prevailing regarding the position of the British army at Ladysmith. The War Office has no information of Major-General Buller, the British commander in South Africa, having left Cape Town.

Colenso, in the rear of General White's force, is believed to be well defended, by a composite naval and military corps, and it is understood that the two naval twelve-pounders mounted near the ridge over the Tugela, one of the most vulnerable points along the railroad from Ladysmith to Pietermaritzburg, ought to be able to defend it and prevent its destruction. If the Boers succeed in destroying this bridge it would mean the interruption of railroad communication with Ladysmith for an indefinite period.

The Boer Intention.

While the Boer attempts in this directoin are not confirmed, it is claimed that they may be expected momentarily, and the reported steady shelling of Ladysmith, it is added, points to the intention of the Boer commanders to keep General White occupied while their strategy is carried out.

The only information received this morning from the seat of war in addition to the brief despatch from General White saying he was well and holding his position, were the list of casualties.

An official telegram reporting the condition of the wounded at Kimberley, adds that Colonel Kedewitch, the British commander there, has learned from various sources that the Boer losses on the occasion of the late sortie of the British troops from Kimberley were very heavy. The newspapers here continue to express keen pleasure at the sympathy of the United States. The St. James' Gazette says—

A Graceful Act.

"Few more graceful examples could be imagined of the courteous spirit of American sympathy with this country, which has been so often evident of late, that the project of the American ladies' hospital ship, which will probably be fitted out with many of those American nurses whose services were so highly valued during the Cuban war. This is the first example of a hospital ship provided by a nation which is at peace for another during the stress of war and the widespread and generous responses to its appeals from both sides of the Atlantic show how warmly the merciful idea is accepted by the citizens in both countries."

WORK OF THE FAKIR.

London, Nov. 2.—Nothing is known here of the stock-ticker report circulated in New York of a great British victory at Ladysmith.

London, Nov. 2.—The War Office officially declares that it has no information of any further engagement at Ladysmith or of a British victory, as reported in New York.

ANXIOUS ABOUT THE PRISONERS.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The British Government has now asked that the Boer Government permit Mr. Macrum, the United States Consul at Pretoria, to transmit once each week a list of the British prisoners in Pretoria, with a statement of their condition.

"TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER."

The following is an interesting specimen of the "fake" news which comes via the commercial ticker after being manufactured in New York—

Cape Town—Big battle now raging at Ladysmith. Struggle close to town. been terrible slaughter of Boers and part of their forces retreating with British pursuers cutting them to pieces. Principal Boer position been stormed.

HUNTERS AS CHARGERS.

London, Nov. 2.—The Government Remount Department has given the necessary notice to a number of noblemen, masters of fox hounds, and others, to hold in readiness a proportion of the horses they had undertaken to supply in case of war.

Prominent among the large owners having horses fit for service as cavalry steeds, officers' chargers, and troopers' mounts, who have received this notification are Lord Longford, Lord Portman, Lord Willoughby de Broke, Earl Yarborough, Lord Zetland and Mr. Leopold de Rothschild.

It has been ascertained that probably only a portion of thr 1,000 horses which might be requisitioned from the various hunts will be called upon for service. Of the better class of horses thus requisitioned it is likely that some will go with the Army Corps, which begins embarking for South Africa to-morrow, while the remainder will be used to replace horses whichh ave been already sent away.

When the Government accepted the offer of certain horse owners to contribute some of their animals in case of war, it became necessary to register each owner's horses and stables, and to pay a sum of 10s a year for each horse in order that the Government might have the right to inspect the studs at their discretion and direct any changes they might deem desirable.

WHY THE OFFICERS ESCAPED.

Some surprise has been expressed at the small number of casualties to officers in the disaster to the Irish Fusiliers and Gloucestershire Regiment at Ladysmith on Monday last. The probable explanation is that the Boers, as we have been told, make a practice in ordinary actions of setting apart squads of marksmen whose sole duty is to pick off officers, the object being to demoralize their adversaries by depriving them of leaders. In the action referred to the Boers surrounded the British in overwhelming numbers, and knew quite well that the surrender of the whole force was only a matter of time; they would therefore in that instance undoubtedly endeavor to secure the officers unhurt as far as possible, partly on acount of the prestige which would attach to their having a number of officers as prisoners, and perhaps more particularly with the ultimate object of using them to advantage when ever there should be an exchange of prisoners.

WHAT THE TIMES SAYS.

London, Nov. 2.—Most of the great dailies express the opinion that there has been a blunder in Natal.

The Times finds it difficult to believe in the story of the mule stampede. It declares that trained battery mules were never known to stampede. They have repeatedly made night marches in India without mishap. It assumes that Colonel Carlton's mules were under native care. It recalls the recently reported mutiny of native muleteers, and suggests that the Boers or their sympathisers tampered with the drivers, and that the rolling of the boulders was the signal for them to desert.

It suggests alternatively that the natives became panic-stricken and and bolted with the animals.

"General White's whole movement, so far as it can be understood from present information, is open to criticism, especially in the complete absence of communication with the main body."

The strongest feature of the whole thing seems to have been a lack of sufficiently heavy firing in the direction of the position taken by the Fusiliers and the Gloucesters to attract help from the main British force.

This leads to the deduction that Joubert set a neat trap and the two battalions walked straight into it on Sunday night, and were surprised, killed, wounded, or captured before they were fully aware of what happened.

Uncle Sam Sorry.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The action of the New York Customs officials in failing to observe instructions to extend the usual courtesies and facilities to Sir Louis Davies, member of the Canadian Cabinet, on his recent arrival at New York, has been taken cognizance of by the authorities here.

There is sincere regret that any indignity should have been shown the Canadian Minister, and besides giving assurance of this, it is probable that the officer responsible for the discourtesy will be made aware of the Government's disapproval.

A Source of News.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The British Government has now asked that the Boer Government permit Mr. Macrum, the United States Consul at Pretoria, to transmit once a week a list of the British prisoners in Pretoria, with a statement of their condition.

The Stratton Banquet.

The banquet, which is to be extended to the Hon. J. R. Stratton, will be given in the Opera House. The committee to make arrangements met last evening and appointed sub-committees. An important feature of the banquet will be the presence of the ladies, the gallery having been reserved for their special use. Every effort is being put forth to make the banquet one most successful ever held in Peterborough.

Inspector Ranney's Evidence is Continued.

GETTING INTERESTING NOW

Mr. Sheehy Schooled His Men to Slight the Work.

Aldermen Corkery and Best Give Evidence—They Were Never Approached Improperly by the Contractor.

On resuming after dinner on Tuesday, Mr. Ranney stated that one of the guages had been tampered with. It had been plained off for him and someone had cut it down by half an inch, resulting in the quantity of the material used in the finish, being diminished. This had taken place when the work was about the corner of Murray street on Water. Witness had discovered the change as soon as he had taken the guage in his hand. He did not think he could have used it very much after it had been cut down. He had left it on the side of the street beside the work. The contractor had always contended against the use of the guage, stating that he was using more cement than last year and complaining that the witness was unreasonably exacting. In regard to the statement that some of the crossings were less than 2 1-2 inches thick, as concerning the top dressing, witness said that this might be the case in some instances. He could not be watching all the time. As concerning the hollow sound coming from the pavements, witness stated some of the base concrete was placed in position late in the afternoon and would be set and hard before morning when the top dressing was put on. Unless the concrete was well wet, the top dressing would not adhere to it. He knew of no other cause which would create a separation between the two surfaces. The quality of the concrete base was good enough. When it had hardened during the night he did not put on a flushing of cement in the morning to cause it to adhere. The concrete was simply dampened with water. It was his full intention to carry out the specifications. He knew that Mr. Hay depended upon him to carry out them. No one man could watch and see that the work was carried out correctly. If there was any inclination to stop the work it could be done.

Re-examined.

To Mr. R. F. McWilliams Mr. Ranney stated that Mr. Sheehy had on, generally, about twenty men. Some three or four were excavating, others were filling in with stones and some were packing and laying them, some were mixing the cement and others again were laying the cement. Behind them came the men who were mixing the top dressing and then there were the finishers. The gang of men were scattered around on half a dozen pieces of work over a block or more. He had to look after all these men and because he had so many different jobs to look after he could not watch all of them, especially when the men dropped back a block or two to finish up the crossings. When he was watching the excavations he could not be on the ground where the mixing was taking place. When he would come back to where the mixing was taking place, he found that attempts were being made to slight the work. He would find that there was too much stone being used, then there would be too much concrete and in mixing the concrete there there would be too much gravel used. The stones in the gravel were often too large. When he found fault with Mr. Sheehy's workmen they would look to Mr. Sheehy for orders. Mr. Sheehy was responsible for the orders. He found fault with Mr. Sheehy for insisting on using less material than required. He had told Alderman Langford that Mr. Sheehy was the most dishonest contractor he had ever had any dealings with. He said the same to Alderman McWillaims. Regarding the use of sand witness said that he had told Mr. Hay at the first, before he had seen one block completed, what proportions were being laid, one of sand, one of granite and one of cement. Mr. Hay did not dissent or assent. He told Alderman Langford at the same time. The latter didn't make any special remark. Alderman Langford asked several times what the proportions were which were used. He was frequently on the work. He had informed Mr. Hay when he found that the measuring box held seven bags of cement instead of five and ahalf. Alderman Langford was on the spot when it was being measured.

Alderman Langford—"Your Honour I wish to contradict that now. I was not there."

Witness said that if Alderman Langford wasn't there at the time, he was there immediately afterwards and learned of what had taken place. This had occurred on August 7th. Witness read from a dairy which stated that he had a conversation with Alderman Langford respecting what he had discovered and that Alderman Langford had advised that no charge be made. He had also advised witness not to say anything about it. He had told him to shut his mouth about it and to make his report to the Engineer. He had reported to the Engineer who had told him to continue as he had been doing. The Engineer seemed to be surprised that such was the fact. Shortly after this he was inspector on the Evans & Langford contract. They used the same proportions as Mr. Sheehy. He had no trouble with them. They appeared willing to carry out their work honestly and willingly. Once when the measuring box had been filled too full Mr. Evans had found fault with the men for so doing. When witness counted the bags at the first measurement Mr. Sheehy was around. This was when he was told that the box contained 5 1-2 bags. Even if two of granite to one of cement had been used, as originally intended, a little sand would have helped it. It would make the surface smoother if not as strong. There was very little fine stuff in the granite, which Mr. Sheehy got from the town. There were 5,[illegible] lineal feet in Mr. Sheehy's first contract.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER [illegible]

THE HOUR OF PERIL.

Britain is now at its worst in South Africa, and the Boers are at their best.

The republics have no reserve force. The British troops in South Africa are a mere handful. The Salisbury Government have been playing between two fires. Fear of offending the Cape Dutch by landing a sufficient force in South Africa has been supplemented by a dread that the Liberals in England would shriek if anything was done to effectually safeguard British interests in South Africa.

If the Boers had been dealing with Germany or Russia it would have been different. In the first place the Boers would have never been tolerated as a semi-independent power. And if Germany or Russia had been in troops would have been rushed in regardless of trouble with a border State regardless of public opinion.

The Salisbury Government was afraid to protect British interests in South Africa by landing a force big enough to give the Boers a chance to shout that their independence was threatened. The result was that Britain is temporarily weak, and the most that can be expected from the forces on the scene is a sternly defensive campaign until Sir Redvers Buller is ready to take the field.

IMPERIAL COPPER COMPANY.

An offer of $3,000,000 has been made by a syndicate of eastern United States capitalists for the famous McGowan mine near Parry Sound. The offer is understood to be a cash deposit. The prospective purchasers are said to be New York and and Philadelphia mining men, whose intention is to develop the mine for several years after securing it and then form a stock company. They will work the mine and manage its affairs in much the same way that the Gooderham-Blackstock syndicate has treated the War Eagle and Centre Star properties. Persons in the city who are intimately connected with the management of the Parry Sound Copper Company, which owns the McGowan mine, admit that such an offer has been made, but state that they are uninformed as to whether it has been accepted or not. They state that S. F. Pierce, Vice-President of the Parry Sound Copper Company, and Robert Forbes, Manager, were recently in Philadelphia and New York to hear a proposition made by a syndicate which had employed experts to examine the McGowan. A meeting of the Directors of the Parry Sound Copper Company was to have been held at St. Paul, Minn., on Thursday when it was thought the matter would be settled, but so far no word confirming the report of the sale has been received. The deal, if completed, will be one of the biggest mining transactions ever put through in Ontario considering that it is done on a cash basis. The McGowan mine was formerly owned by the McGowan Gold Mining Company, and that company disposed of it to the Parry Sound Copper Company for $70,000 cash and 40,000 shares of stock, making the total consideration $110,000. The company is now offered $3,000,000 cash.

Mr. J. F. McLaughlin, who is closely connected with the Parry Sound Copper Company, was seen by a Globe reporter last evening. He said that an offer of $3,000,000 had been made by an American syndicate, but he had not heard whether it had been accepted or not. He had strongly urged the representatives of the company to accept, as they were possessed of other extensive and rich copper deposits, and the money thus secured would enable them to develop these other properties without any further outlay of money.

Mr. Frank Johnson, of St. Paul, Minn., who, with certain eastern capitalists, now controls the McGowan mine, was wired to last night by the Globe, and replied—The report that the McGowan mine is sold is not true. At a meeting of the Board yesterday the three million dollar offer was declined. (Signed) Frank Johnson.

A GOOD BEGGER.

Rev. A. B. Simpson Has Collected Over $1,200,000 for Missions.

"I have begged about $1,200,000 in the past 11 years, and I don't see anything remarkable about it." This was one of the remarkable statements that Rev. A. B. Simpson, the great missionary collector, made at Carnegie Hall, in New York city, last week.

The occasion was one of the greatest and most successful meetings he has ever held on behalf of the Christian Alliance. He collected a total of $156,000 by the sheer force of his oratory and cunning ways of inducing people to contribute.

To be able to understand the influence which the great missionary orator wields over his audience one must be present and see for himself. He combines all the tricks of the most skillful orator with the natural fervor and spontaneous enthusiasm of one who believes every word he utters. The means by which he raised the $1,200,000 was the same by which he raised the $156,000 last week. The scene at Carnegie Music Hall was but a repetition of those which took place at his former meetings.

Dr. Simpson can account definitely where most of the million which he claims to have collected was raised. On August 13, 1894, at Old Orchard Camp, Mr., he raised $40,000. On October 15, 1895, at the American Theater, New York, $100,000 were collected. Again, on August 10, 1896, at the Old Orchard Camp, $110,000 were contributed. The meeting at Carnegie Hall, on October 13, 1896, netted $112,000. At the Old Orchard Camp, on August 15, 1897, $65,000 were again collected. The rest of the figures which he remembers are: September 13, 1897, Training Institute $18,000. October 18, 1897, American Theater, New York, $78,000. August 22, 1898, Old Orchard Camp, $50,000. October 16, 1898, Gospel Tabernacle and Carnegie Hall, $113,000. Annual report, 1899, $164,000. August, 1899, annual convention, Nyak, $10,000. October 15, Carnegie Hall, 156,000.

Begin With the Boys.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I think our police should try and put a stop to the gangs of fellows who congregate on the street corners nightly and cover the pavement with filth and tobacco spit. It is a disgrace to civilization, and in this connection I think the schools have a duty to perform.

Boys should early be taught the heinousness of the offence of spitting, both from the basis of decency and danger to public health. It is much easier to prevent the formation of a habit of this kind in a boy than to correct it in a man, and herein lies the mother's part in the warfare against spitting. No extension of woman's rights is necessary to make mothers a power in this neglected realm. All that is required is return to a duty once faithfully discharged—but in the rush of modern life neglected—the vigilant maternal supervision of boys during the years in which their habits are formed.

The boy who is taught that to spit on the hearth, the steps—anywhere about the house—is an infringment upon the rights of the family that will not be tolerated, is not likely as a man to infringe upon the rights of the public by spitting upon the sidewalks, on the floors or steps of public buildings or in the cars. In the meantime, however, there is a generation of full-grown, active spitters to be reckoned with in the interest of public health, and it is the opinion of those who have given careful attention to the matter that these can be reached more effectively by the dissemination of knowledge upon the subject than in any other way

PRESTON R. MANSFIELD, Treasurer Abbott M'f'g Co., Dedham, Mass.
HON. GEO. D. ALDEN, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors. The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean, then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

ulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or val-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Moving Strains.

Elderly Beau (who is making a long call, to fair singer rapturously)—Ah, that song takes me back to the home of my childhood!

Fair Singer's Irrepressible Younger Sister (in a loud whisper)—Can't you sing something that will take him back to the home of his old age?—Harper's Bazar.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer cashmere cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White vailing or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackay, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and bowings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, King of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot. when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of sorrow and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this building house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scrapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my darnedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one bolt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

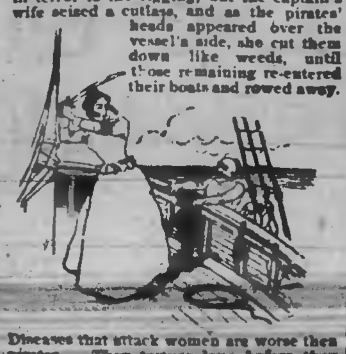
"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

The men-of-war of the ancient Romans had a crew of about 225 men, of which 174 were oarsmen working on three decks. The speed of these vessels was about

Not so very long ago pirates attacked a vessel in the Chinese sea. The crew fled in terror to the rigging, but the captain's wife seized a cutlass, and as the pirates' heads appeared over the vessel's side, she cut them down like weeds, until those remaining re-entered their boats and rowed away.



Diseases that attack women are worse than pirates. They torture long before they kill. But women can beat them off and cut them down with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a woman's remedy that has no alcohol, opium or other narcotic in it. It is the prescription of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., who has devoted a long and successful life to the study and treatment of diseases peculiar to women. It overcomes irregularities, stops disagreeable drains, bearing-down pains and backache; cures female weakness and headache. It helps the girl over the difficulties encountered when she enters womanhood; makes the period preceding maternity a time of comfort; and the newborn enters the world without unnecessary pain to the mother. At the "turn of life" it is priceless to womankind. Medicine dealers sell it, and you should never permit them to substitute other medicine which they may urge upon you as "just as good."

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness," writes Mrs. M. B. Wallace, of Munster, Cooke Co., Texas. "I tried four doctors and none did me any good. I suffered six years, but at last I found relief. I followed your advice, and took four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and eight of the 'Favorite Prescription.' I now feel like a new woman. I have gained eighteen pounds."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Mensaine Treas., after securing the Jim Hill claim adjoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 50 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,010 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 5 cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $3.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 5½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Kidd, the Shoe Man,

Is offering Ladies' Buttoned boots at Tremendous reductions.

Creditable to Mr. Turner.

In our report of the ball yesterday we omitted to mention that the work of decorating the rink was done by Messrs J J Turner & Son, and was most creditable to that enterprising firm. Everybody was delighted with the appearance of the building, and on every side was Mr Turner complimented.

Man Wanted.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr. J Gordon Dalgety of 218-200 Washington street, Chicago, will for a few days exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

Col. Montizambert Entertained.

Col Montizambert, who inspected the 57th Battalion yesterday, was entertained by the officers to a smoker in the evening. Refreshments were served, and a number of loyal and patriotic speeches were made during the evening.

The Port Hope Knitting Works is acknowledged to have the largest and cheapest stock of knitted goods. As a leader on Saturday they will sell a heavy all wool double thread Stocking in sizes 6 to 9½ for 15c. nothing like this has ever been shown before for the money. Telephone 330.

The Big Fight.

Bulletins of the big fight, between Jeffries and Sharkey, which takes place in New York to-night, will be given by rounds, at the City Hotel. Local sports will appreciate Martin Connor's enterprise.

Wood for Sale.

Having purchased the old "Red Mills" at Nassau, I am tearing them down, and will have in consequence a very large quantity of fine dry pine for sale, suitable for kindling. Geo. Stevens, Ashburnham.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Star says: A drove of small cattle and sheep numbering about two hundred and fifty head belonging to Mr Kennedy, of Peterborough, were driven throug Hastings on Monday afternoon. They were taken to Norwood from which point they were shipped to the Northwest.

M M Boyd & Co. have sent a gang of men to their old limits near Bark lake, in Glamorgan township, to cut roads and prepare for the winter's operations.

It is reported that the Rathbun Co. are negotiating for the purchase of the Bronson timber limit, in the Bancroft district.

Lindsay Post: A number of Lindsay citizens will attend the banquet to be tendered to Hon J.R Stratton, by Peterborough citizens on Thursday, November 16th.

Mr R S Davidson J. P., presided at police court yesterday morning, and remanded a person on charge of insanity. This was the only business.

Lt.-Col. Montizambert inspected the arms of C squadron of the 3rd Prince of Wales dragoons at the drill shed, Ashburnham, on Monday evening and complimented the officers and Sergt.-Major Goldie especially upon the splendid condition in which everything was kept.

Report of the fight will be received at the National Hotel to-night.

The store occupied by Messrs R R Phillip & Co., has been overhauled and greatly improved.

We always feared that if Britain became involved in war in Africa other complications would arise. That our fears were not groundless is evident from what has taken place within the past few days. Mr Bob Fair has, metaphorically speaking, knocked the chip of Mr Ham Burnham's shoulder, and a bloody conflict is likely to follow.

Complaints have reached the Times about the condition of Sherbrooke street, at the creek. This should be remedied at once.

Miss Eillan Fair was in Toronto a few days ago to try her first examination at the Metropolitan school of Music and was successful in passing with honors. Congratulations.

A report of the big fight will appear in to-morrow's Times.

Mr Chas Stevens, of Napanee, purchased from his son, Mr George Stevens, the hustling junk merchant of Ashburnham, sixty three tons of fertiliser, which is being shipped to Florida.

The Hastings Star says: Messrs H M Fowlds & Son last week shipped two car loads of soup pease direct to Liverpool. These are in great demand on account of the present war as the soup extract after being mixed with other articles of food are made into a wafer which is used by the British army. Messrs Fowlds & Son, are the largest dealers of pease in this district and among their many shipments this fall were several cars to Newfoundland.

Mr Wm Collins, the popular and efficient secretary of the Poultry Association is bound to make the forthcoming exhibition in Peterborough a huge success. He is working like a Trojan, and the show is gowing to be the best ever held in Canada.

Will go farther, much further, than you could expect when spent in Shoes at Kidd's.

The Central Exhibition.

President Fitzgerald has acted on the suggestion of the Times and has called a meeting of the prize winners to be held in the Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Saturday 11th instant, when a statement of the affairs of the society will be submitted. We hope there will be a large attendance, and that something will be done to place the society in a good financial shape. Although the prize winners are specially invited, all those having the interest of the society at heart are also cordially welcome.

Wedding Stationery.

We have just received direct from New York a large stock of Crane's wedding stationery. Invitations printed to order in the latest styles. Also, wedding cake boxes of latest designs. The Times job rooms make a specialty of printing at home cards—the very best and nobbiest patterns.

REPUBLIC MINES.

Republic, Washington, is proving to be the most phenomenal camp in the world. In two years has produced the Great Republic and Mountain Lion Mines considered the equals of the celebrated Le Roi at Rossland, B.C.

The Green Cheese claim is situated in the centre of the Republican camp. Engineer's report shows that there are three ledges running through the claim. Assays have been obtained as high as $62.20.

ANNUAL INSPECTION.

The Local Corps Presented a Fine Appearance Yesterday.

The annual inspection of the 57th Battalion took place yesterday afternoon, Col. Montizambert being the inspecting officer. The men assembled at the drill shed at two o'clock and marched to the field near the exhibition grounds, headed by the regimental and bugle bands, where they were put through a number of difficult evolutions.

At the conclusion of the battalion drill Col. Montizambert complimented the men on their fine, soldierly appearance. He also gave due credit to the officers.

The battalion was, we understand, full, each of the six companies of the corps having their regular quota of men. As they were passing the Times office Col. Bell, with pardonable pride, remarked to the Times that the battalion was not to be buried just yet. Indeed it looked as could give a good sound account of itself if called upon to do so on the battle field. There is no reason why Peterborough should not have the best battalion in the Dominion.

An Enjoyable at Home.

A very pleasing entertainment was given by the choir of the George street Methodist church last evening, in the basement of the building, which was prettily decorated for the occasion. Mr S R Armstrong efficiently filled the position of chairman. A very choice programme was rendered. In addition to selections by the choir, numbers were given by Messrs J Crane and Dawson of St. Paul's church choir, and a couple of pleasing recitations rendered by Miss McCollum. A pleasing feature of the entertainment was the presentation of a purse and address to Miss Clara Bellegham and Miss Pascoe, members of the choir, on behalf of the congregation. The address was read by Mrs Shortley, and the purse presented by Mrs F Mason. During the evening refreshments were served and a most enjoyable time was spent by all those present.

Men Wanted.

Three good men wanted. Steady employment. Apply to George Stevens, Ashburnham.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Richard Lewis, of Toronto, representing the Carter Ink Company, of Boston, Mass., is in town in the interests of his company.

Mr. Chris. Graham left yesterday for New York to witness the sparing contest between Jeffries and Sharkey to-night.

Miss Mercier, who has been engaged by Richard Hall & Son to take charge of their dress making department, began her duties yesterday.

The Misses Cullen, London, Ont., have been for several weeks with their mother Mrs. P. Cullen, Smith, who is very ill. Miss Lizzie Cullen returns to London today. Her sister will remain for some time yet.

OTONABEE.

The funeral of the late Miss Maud Rehaily, second daughter of Mr. John Rehaily, Otonabee, whose death took place on Monday, was held to-day, interment taking place at the Roman Catholic cemetery. The news of the young lady's death was received wit hmuch grief by many friends. She was but nineteen years of age and was a great favorite among her associates, being endowed with many loveable qualities. She contracted a cold last winter which settled heavily upon her system and she failed gradually till death came. The parents and family have the sympathy of all in their sad affliction. The funeral to-day was largely attended.

Board.

Good board and rooms for three or four gentlemen at 20 Queen street. Two minutes walk from Ontario Bank.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

To Mr. Dennistoun witness stated that he had never made concrete without sand. He contradicted the statement that one part of cement would not fill the crevices between two parts of granite. He would not dispute the statement that granite would absorb half its bulk in sand.

Mr. Dennistoun then addressed His Honour Judge Weller, stating that there had been no deviation from the specification unless it was to give more cement than was called for. Contractor Sheehy had used one box of granite with one box of sand and five and a half bags of cement. The box of granite had absorbed half the box of sand and five and a half bags of cement. The box of granite had absorbed half the box of sand and for this only four and a half box of sand which was used. A bag of cement was equal to one cubic foot. The contractor knew all along what he was doing and made no attempt to hide anything, and knew he was all right. Witness continuing stated that he had concluded that the item of sand had been omitted from the specifications. He did not know at the start that the cement measured one cubic foot per bag and was not aware that the proposition was how many bags at one cubic foot each, will fill a box nine cubic feet in size. If the original specifications had been followed, viz., two parts of granite to one of cement it would have worked well. There are several errors in his report. He had seen the letters in the papers making fun of his report and had not checked it over to see if they were right. He had checked their corrections however, and found they were wrong. In the construction of the pavements the hollows might be caused by a collection of large stones. It might also be caused by soft ground under the pavement. When witness ordered that the boxes be relieved of extra gravel his commands were obeyed. He was convinced that a good many boxes of granite went to the pavement which were over-loaded. He had seen so much dishonesty in slighting the work that he believed this to be the case. Personally he had not seen a box which had too much gravel in it going into the pavement. He had stopped all that he had seen. Mr. Sheehy had not told him in the first instance that 5 1-3 bags filled the box. The man had told him. The other contractors had come to him to ascertain the proportions to make the concrete and he told them what he was using. Mr. Sheehy had not said that he would spoil witness straight edge. He had never said that he had cut the straight edge with a knife. Mr. Sheehy had never acknowledged this to Mr. Hay.

Mr. Hay—"No, he did not."

Mr. Ranney continuing, stated that Mr. Sheehy and he had never quarreled about the levels until that straight edge was altered. When he had a new straight edge made, he allowed in it for the bevel on the outside of the walk.

Mr. Dennistoun—"We take the full responsibility for whittling down that guage in order to gain our point about allowance being made for the bevel.

Mr. Ranney acknowledged that he had stated that Mr. Sheehy was one of the most dishonest contractors he had ever met. He had schooled his men to slight the work. They had kept heaping up the boxes with gravel and stone all the time and kept him busy watching them to prevent the wrong proportions being used. Witness did not connect Mr. Sheehy with purloining the bags.

Mr. Dennistoun—"The gist of your charge then against Mr. Sheehy is that you suspect he told the men to slight the work?"

Mr. Ranney—"Yes."

Witness had not urged Mr. Sheehy to tender in the second contract. He had asked him if he was going to tender.

To Ald. Sawers the witness explained that in connection with the cutting of the straight edge, that it was after the cutting that he and Mr. Sheehy had disagreed about the allowance for the bevel. Mr. Sheehy has positively denied cutting the straight edge.

To the Mayor, Mr. Ranney explained that when complaining to His Worship about Mr. Sheehy slighting the work, he did not intend to state that the work was being improperly done, but merely that efforts were being made to do so, but of course were checked by him as inspector.

To Ald. Langford witness stated that he did not mean to convey the information that he (Ald. Langford) was present on the first day the Sheehy contract began. He had not tried to interfere with witness' work as an inspector. He did not advise witness to favour Mr. Sheehy. Ald. Langford had told him to watch and see that the work was properly done. Mr Evans and Mr. Rose had asked many questions about the quantities used, as well as Ald. Langford.

To Mr. Edwards the witness stated that he had received a copy of the resolution calling for the inspectors to report any failure on the part of the contractors to live up to the specifications to the Engineer in writing.

To Mr. Dennistoun witness stated that Ald. McWilliams, he thought, had asked him to send in his report to the council.

Ald. Corkery was the next witness. He stated to Mr. Edwards that he had never been improperly approached. He knew of no wrong doing on the part of any contractor, inspector or alderman.

To Mr. McWilliams he stated that he knew of no charge being authorized in the specifications. He still believed that the specifications were being carried out. He had objected to a meeting of the Council for the purpose of examining the work on the pavements because he knew the investigation was just about to be held, and if there was anything wrong it would then be brought out.

Ald. Best was next examined by Mr. Edwards. Witness had never been approached improperly in regard to any of the contracts. He knew of no improper influence being brought to bear on any official. He knew of no wrong doing on the part of any contractor or inspector. He had been present at a test when it was ascertained that in the quality of granite which was supplied the contractors there was sufficient fine stuff to make a bond if cement was used in the proportion of one to two. His attention had been drawn to the material in the crossing on Water street. It appeared to him that there was plenty of cement in the material in the base but it had not been properly mixed.

To Mr. McWilliams witness stated that it was the intention of the council that the best cement be used. He rembered the discussion about the matter, and that it was left in the hands of the Engineer to use the Star brand or its equal. No special brand was mentioned, as it might create a rise in the price.

To Mr. Dennistoun witness stated that the crushing machine did not crush the granite well. There was always enough fine matter left in it to make a bond. Mr. Belcher who drew the specifications, had thought that sand would make a better bond than granite dust. He thought that the granite sand would be screened out, but it was not.

To His Honour Judge Weller the witness stated that he had been told by Mr. Belcher that it was intended to use sand. The specifications should have mentioned the sand.

To Ald. Langford witness said that Mr. Belcher stated that he did not order one part of sand to be used to one of granite. Just a small percentage of sand was to be used—about ten per cent.

Mr. William Langford, jr., of the firm of Evans & Langford, contractors, stated that he had obtained the second contract this year. He had not seen the specifications. Most of his information had been derived from his father. He based his figures on the quantities used in Mr. Sheehy's contract, i. e., one of sand, one of granite, and 5 1-2 bags of cement. He had used that proportion. He received no other instructions. He had approached no one and no one had approached him improperly in regard to the contract.

To R. F. McWilliams' witness stated that personally he had nothing to do with the making up of the figures in his contract. The figures had been made out for his tender by his father and Mr. Evans together. His father had not assisted him since the work began, except giving advice at times. Mr. Evans had erected the abutements for two town bridges. His father had nothing to do with the contract financially. He did not have trouble with the inspectors. Mr. Bartlett had not said anything to him about wrong proportions being used. When he started the contract he thought that the specifications were being carried out.

When the witness in answer to a question began to give evidence in regard to the amount of work done, Mr. Dennistoun objected, stating that this was a question which would be decided later. He disputed the jurisdiction of the Judge, and did not think he had the power to make an award or take evidence on which an award could be made. He would decline to bring any witnesses if this was done. The investigation was instituted for the purpose of the discovery of fraud. If there was any and not for the purpose of taking evidence for the purpose of an award.

His Honour held that he would take the evidence, and asked the contractors to be prepared to furnish all figures.

The investigation then adjourned.

JEFFRIES STILL CHAMPION.

Full Account of the Big Fight in New York Last Night—Jeffries Gets Decision After 25th Round.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The great heavy weight contest for the world's championship between Jim Jeffries and Tom. Sharkey will be decided to-night. It was raining hard at six o'clock when the doors of the club house were opened and the crowd was tardy in arriving. At 7.30 p. m. the attendance was about two thousand. Some rumors which circulated this afternoon regarding Jeffries' condition were set by a positive statement from Billy Delaney that Jeffries was in excellent condition and would be the winner of to-night's battle. The betting waivers, Jeffries at odds of 100 to 80. Both men spent a quiet day and are now in the immediate vicinity of the club house. Pictures of the contest will be taken by a biograph company over the ring. 400 lights are suspended and will furnish a dazzling glare.

8 p m—Attendance about 4,000. Police Capt. Kenny has a force of 300 men

8.35 p m—Large delegations from out of town are arriving at the club. Jeffries the favorite at 100 to 80.

8.40 p m—The curtain raiser is a ten round affair at 122 pounds, and presented Tommy Moran, of Brooklyn, and Kid Goulette, of Rochester.

The officials of the evening are—Referee, George Siler; Timekeeper, W. H. Robertson; Master of Ceremonies, Johnny Dunn.

Referee Siler started Moran and Goulette on their journey at 8.45.

The opening bout was a slugging affair pure and simple. Swing followed swing on head. Moran having advantage of exchanges. Goulette was floored in second and again in third, but came up strong in fourth and staggered Moran with hard rap on the jaws and kidneys. The fifth was fairly evenly contested. Moran came up strong in the ninth and put some stiff lefts on face and hooked right to jaw. The tenth was a fast one, with Moran having the best of it. At the conclusion of the bout the referee awarded the decision to Moran.

9.27 p m—The betting has become livelier and $100 to $70 are now offered on Jeffries. Sharkey has arrived and is preparing to enter the ring. Jeffries has arrived.

9.55 p m—100 to 70 freely offered on Jeffries, but Sharkey money scarce.

10 p m—A yell from the bleachers announced Sharkey's appearance. The sailor was accompanied by Tom O'Rouke and Tim McGrath. Sharkey was enveloped in a long bath robe. He takes the corner that was occupied by Fitzsimmons in his battle with Jeffries.

10.20 p m—Jeffries climbs into the ring. He crosses the ring and shakes hands with Sharkey.

10.06 p m—Martin Julian challenges the winner on behalf of Bob Fitzsimmons. Jom Corbett also challenges the winner. Kid McCoy is sitting near Sharkey's corner and Jim Corbett occupies a seat near Jeffries' corner.

The gloves were tossed into the ring. The club time keeper is Billy Madden. Jeffries strips. He looks in good condition, but his color is sallow.

10.14—Referee calls men to centre. Jeffries is covered with a slight rash.

10.15—The fight starts.

THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS.

16.—A swap of lefts on face. Sharkey [illegible] Jim [illegible] on jaw. Tom lands a double swing on head.

LADYSMITH IS NOW COMPLETELY CUT OFF

No Information of Fresh Movements on Part of the Boers at Calenso Have Been Received at War Office.

THE BOERS LOST 95 KILLED AND 200 WOUNDED.

Fight on Farquahar's Farm Cost the Burghers More Than It Cost the British—Gen. Buller Reported to Have Left Cape Town—War News Scarce.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The position of affairs in South Africa is becoming more and more exciting. Matters have now resolved themselves into a race between the Boers and General Buller. The question is, Which of the two will enter Ladysmith first? Present indications are that Ladysmith will, with Mafeking and Kimberley, form a trio of towns cut off from the world by cordons of Boers and compelled to stand seiges of varying length before being relieved even if they should not be temporarily in possession of the burghers. No news has come from the western border of the Boer States for several days, while Ladysmith has been isolated since noon on Thursday. Even appears from the silence of the War office, that not only the telegraph line between Ladysmith and Colenso has been broken but that railway communication may also have been interrupted.

But it is quite a different thing to besiege a town and to capture it, and there is every probability that all three places will be able to hold out. In any event General White, with over 10,000 men and powerful guns of exceedingly long range, should find no difficulty in repelling any attack the Boers can make until the arrival of reinforcements. The fact which stands out above all others is the success of the Boer campaign. This success has however, only been because they have been enabled to mass almost their whole force in one position, and that an exceedingly strong one to defend and difficult to attack. So soon as another British force is in the field their strength will diminish rapidly, for it will then be necessary to detach troops to other portions of their border than Natal, whereupon the British will immediately recover the lost ground. It should be borne in mind, also, that the inevitable story of England's colonial campaigns is early reverses with late victories, and the Boer campaign will doubtless follow the analogy of history.

BOERS ARE LOSING ALSO.

London, Nov. 3.—Belated despatches from the British camp at Ladysmith, Natal, add little information regarding Monday's fight, except the estimates of the Boer losses, which are now said to be 95 killed and 200 wounded, mostly victims of the artillery shells, which have brought such great havoc that it is said that General Joubert, the Boer commander in chief, had written a letter to General White, the British commander, protesting against the use of lyddite. According to all accounts, the presence at Ladysmith of the long range naval guns and the splendid shooting of the blue jackets, have materially improved the position of the British. A temporary armistice was declared on Monday evening, to allow the collection of the dead and wounded.

A despatch from Kimberley, dated Oct. 29, says all the wounded are doing very well. Small bodies of Boers, about 400 strong, were then frquently seen. They apparently came from Mafeking, for the purpose either of assisting in the attack on Komberley or to resist the advance of reinforcements. The absence of water outside the place causes the Boers to continually move their camp.

WAR OFFICE IN THE DARK.

London, Nov. 3.—The War Office this afternoon, replying to inquiries, said no further information had been received of fresh Boer movements at Colenso or else where and, it was added, the officials were not aware of the railroad to Ladysmith was intact or not.

RAILROAD IS STILL OPEN.

London, Nov. 3.—While the wires to Ladysmith are cut, the optimism of the War Office officials yesterday evening in refusing to believe that Ladysmith was completely invested or Colenso captured appear to be justified, as this morning it was asserted that the railroad is still open, though traffic has been conducted with the greatest caution. What, however, was only a rumor yesterday evening may, it is claimed, be reality at any moment, as General Joubert, with a large and wonderfully mobile force, is expected to detach several thousand and make a dash at the railroad. Rumors of all kinds are springing up here. It is even asserted that General White has been compelled to fall back on Pietermaritzburg, leaving his wounded behind. Probably such rumors have their origin in the recollection of the ominous silence which preceded the evacuation of Dundee. But it is asserted conditions are altered and the British guns now seem more than equal to the artillery of the Boers, thus enhancing the difficulty of any assault on the British lines. A Cape Town despatch reports a repulse of the Boers by the British yesterday.

While there is a habit here to assume that news of Boer victories emanating from the continent cannot be true, because of the censorship, the fact is forgotten that foreign Governments are fully privileged to send and receive cipher messages to and from their representatives in South Africa.

BULLER STARTS FOR DURBAN.

London, Nov. 3.—The Daily Telegraph publishes the following despatch from its special correspondent:—

Sir Redvers Buller, the British commander-in-chief, with a portion of his staff has left here for Durban via East London.

AN INTERESTING COMPARISON.

In the twenty days of hostilities in South Africa the British army has lost more men in killed, wounded and captured than the American army lost in the entire war with Spain. While the bulk of the British losses is due to the capture of General White's left wing at Ladysmith the totals of dead and wounded have already reached high figures. Two more British officers have been killed than were lost by the American forces in the recent conflict with Spain. The number of British soldiers killed is already more than half of that of the United States troops.

Estimating at 900 the number in the captured colum at Ladysmith, and quoting official figures for the other losses in the American and British armies, the comparison stands to-day as follows—

Americans (entire war) —Officers killed, 23; men, 253; officers wounded, 113, men, 1,456; officers and men captured, none; total, 1,847. British (thus far)—Officers killed, 25; men, 191; Officers wounded, 63; men, 658; officers and men captured, 1,107; total, 2,044.

WHAT THE JOUURNAL SAYS.

The following special cable to The New York Journal is given for what it is worth—

London, Nov. 3.—Despite the strict censorship concerning the movements of the troops in Africa, it is evident that a strong colum is forming at De Aar Junction for the relief of Kimberley. The First Munster Fusiliers, the Second Berkshires, and half of the 2nd Yorkshire Light Infantry are known to be there, numbering nearly 2,000 in all. The Munsters have been converted into mounted infantry. It was originally intended to send an entire army corps this way, but the critical position of the British in Natal necessitates diverting the reinforcements as soon as they arrive at the Cape. The Government hoped that General White would be able to hold the Boers in check in Natal long enough for the army corps to arrive and make a dashing invasion of the Orange Free State and thence into the Transvaal, but all of these plans are upset now.

Until the conditions in Natal can be bettered some of the troops must be spared to help Kimberley. Lord Salisbury is anxious, too, about his son in Mafeking, and every effort will be made to help the two beleaguered towns as soon as possible.

MARCHING ON COLENSO.

London, Nov. 3.—A despatch received yesterday by the Central News from Ladysmith, dated Tuesday, 11.40 p.m., says:

"The Boers are marching south and south-east. Their objective point is Colenso, to cut British communication between that point and Pietermaritzburg and Durban. This movement has been foreseen, and arrangements made for the defence of our line."

The correspondence adds:

"All honors to-day were with our gunners. The artillery practice of the bluejackets produced admiration throughout the camp. The Boers stuck doggedly to their guns, but every gun was silenced early in the morning. Later they reopened fire, and were again silenced. The firing was renewed in the evening and kept up in desultory fashion."

CONCENTRATION OF THE ARMY.

London, Nov. 3.—All was quiet at Bulawayo, in Rhodesia, according to despatches received here this morning, up to October 27. There has been some skirmishing on the border.

Apparently extensive preparations are in progress at De Aar, Cape Colony, for the concentration of Lieut.-Gen. Buller's army. Thousands of mules are corraled in that neighborhood, and transport material is being hurried up from the south.

According to another despatch, the naval brigade at Ladysmith has mounted four more guns from Durban.

The report current from Lisbon that Portugal will permit the landing of British troops at Lorenzo Marquez. This coincides with the view strongly prevalent in some quarters here that the British invasion of the Transvaal will be made from that point.

SHOULD INTERFERE.

London, Nov. 3.—The Times, commenting editorially upon the fact that the news appears to arrive in Belgium from South Africa from some channel uncontrolled by British censorship, reminds the Government that information valuable to the enemy can similarly leak from Europe to the Transvaal. It suggests that the Government should fully exercise their right under existing conditions, if any such channel has been for special reasons left open, and it appears to think that there may be something in yesterday's Berlin and Paris stories.

The Daily News suggests that these rumors are more likely intended for propagation at the Cape and to influence the Afrikanders.

The Naval Brigade.

Captain the Hon. Hedworth Lambton of H.M.S. Powerful, and now in charge of the naval brigade at Ladysmith was present at the bombardment of Alexandria, and later, with the naval brigade of Lord Wolseley's force, took part in the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. For his services he received the medal and two clasps, the Khedive's bronze star and the second and third class Medjidie. From 1894 to 1897, in which year he was appointed to the Powerful, he was Secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty. He was at one time Lieutenant on the royal yacht.

Commander Alfred Peel Ethelston of H.M.S. Powerful, who is in charge of the naval brigade operating along the Orange River, served with the naval brigade throughout the Soudan campaign of 1884-5 receiving the medal and the Khedive's bronze star.

CANADA'S SECOND CONTINGENT.

London, Nov. 3.—Canada's reported desire to send a further contingent to South Africa provokes grateful references. It is understood, however that General Sir Redvers Buller has no present desire for further troops, beyond home filling up gaps

YACHT AND CREW ARE LOST.

The Chiquita Found Ashore With Her Dead Owner Lashed to the Rigging.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—The north-east gale, which has been raging for over 48 hours and brought the first snow of the season to the this locality still sticks. Life-savers at various lake points have been kept busy watching for and aiding vessels in distress. The following vessels were reported as being in trouble at various points—

Schooner William H. Dunham, two-master, ashore near St. Joseph, Mich.; steamer, name unknown, ashore on Tin Shoals, near Bois Blanc Island; schooner Kate Lyons, from Cheboygan, Mich., to Chicago, laden with lumber, stranded near Cat Head, Schooner Elgin, bound for Chicago, put in at Milwaukee, leaking badly.

The fleet of sheltered vessels in Chicago harbour last night were reported as greatly increased. Over two hundred and forty boats have been reported in shelter during the last two days, which makes an unusually large number.

The schooner-rigged yacht Chiyuita with a dead man, supposed to be D. S. Way, the owner and captain, lashed to the rigging, went ashore in the gale three miles east of Miller Station, Ind. It is believed that all the crew and passengers have perished. Garments found in the cabin indicated that at least one woman was among the unfortunate party on the yacht. Where the vessel belonged was not ascertained last night, but it was thought it was from some Michigan port. The dead man lashed to the rigging was apparently 30 years old. On his left temple was a cut, caused probably by a falling spar.

ALIBI FOR ANDERSON.

What the Defence will Endeavor to Prove in the Winnipeg Bank Robbery Case.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 3.—The court room was crowded to the doors at the Anderson trial this morning, and intense interest was manifested in the proceedings. When the proceedings began to-day Davis was again placed in the box and confronted by the witnesses summoned from Chicago to prove that his character is not what it might be. The situation would seem to be uncomfortable for Davis, but he never winced, even when jerked up by Judge Bain for too apparent lapse of memory. Hagel to-day took up Davis' record as a detective, to show that he had never earned a living from detective work. The cross-examination from appearances will continue all day and then the Crown will likely re-examine Davis, and after two or three minor witnesses the case for the Crown will be closed. For the defence evidence will be to damage the character of Davis, prove an alibi for Anderson on the night he is said to hav hidden the money and shows his good character. Hagel will also emphasize the point that the vault might have been left unlocked.

Socialists Buy 4,000 Acres.

Cumberland, Wis., Nov 3.—A colony of one hundred Germans who call themselves "Christian Socialists," has purchased 4,000 acres of land northeast of this city on the Chippewa Falls and northern branch of the Omaha Railroad. They are [illegible] large houses and barns, and will work their land on the co-operative plan. They are a religious sect who came from the North of Germany.

Gold Hidden in Wood.

New York, Nov. 3.—George Birchers, a colored porter employed by the Adams Express Company, was arraigned in the police court to-day and held for trial on a charge of stealing a money bag containing $6,000 in gold from the company's office on Saturday last. Birchers confessed that he had hidden the gold in a bundle of [illegible] in the company's office so that it would not be noticed.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

Continuation of the Evidence Given Before Judge Weller—Several Witnesses Were Examined.

No session of the pavement investigation was held on Wednesday nor on Thursday afternoon. Wm. Langford, jr., of Evans & Langford, was in the box at the hearing Thursday morning and was examined by Mr. R. F. McWilliams. Witness stated that in their contract there were about 40,000 sq. feet. The depth of the base concrete was 4 inches. This would make over 14,000 cubic feet, without the curb. In answer to question, witness stated that they had used 746 barrels Ensign cement and 519 barrels Star cement. Mr. McWilliams questioned with a view to finding out the difference created by using Ensign cement but Mr. Dennistoun objected to anything being brought out except the market price of the two cements. Witness told Mr. McWilliams that the difference in price per barrel between the two kinds is 30 cents. The difference in cost between using these 746 barrels Ensign cement and the same quantity of Star cement would amount to $223.80. They used 4 bags of cement to a yard of gravel.

Q.—But the specifications called for 1 of cement to 6 of gravel?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you should have used 4 1-2 bags of cement to a yard of gravel?

Mr. Dennistoun objected that the engineer was the man who should have fixed how much cement would be used if a cubic yard of gravel was used and the proportion was 1 to 6. The examination, therefore, on this point was dropped.

Q.—Was there a stone foundation below the 4 inch concrete base?

A.—Yes, where it was necessary.

Q.—Do not the specifications call for this stone foundation all the way??

A.—I dod not know.

Q.—But did you put this stone foundation?

A.—Yes, generally we put in some stones.

Q.—But were there places where you put in no stones?

A.—In places where there was a good bottom the inspector considered that this was better than to excavate and filled in with stones. The inspector decided this matter.

Q.—I understood the specifications called for stone foundation under all the work. In some cases you did not do that?

A.—We did all that the inspector wanted. He watched all our excavation. In all our contract there was a good natural bottom.

MR. DENNISTOUN QUESTIONS.

Witness stated to Mr. Dennistoun that the inspector watched their work closely. They tried to please him and went according to his instructions. Mr. Bartlett was inspector on the George-st contract most of the time.

MR. McFADDEN.

T. M. McFadden, inspector on Sheehy's second contract, was next called and was examined by Mr. Edwards. They started work on the contract on Aug. 29th, and finished on Oct. 23. Witness was instructed by Mr. Hay that the contract was to be carried on the same as the other one. "I knew of the other contract."

Q.—How did you know?

A.—I heard it talked over, that is, as to quantities of material used.

Q.—Did he instruct you specially?

A.—No, the number of bags, etc., was not mentioned but he told me it was to be the same as the other Sheehy contract.

Mr. McFadden—For the concrete base there were used a cubic yard of gravel and 4 bags of cement. This was more cement than was used in the work on the bridges on which I was inspector. There we used 3 1-2 cubic feet of cement to 40 cubic feet of gravel and broken stone.

Q.—Was the base of the sidewalk good?

A.—Yes, it seemed to be good and solid. I tried it in many instances.

Q.—Were there any places such as are complained of on Water-st?

A.—None that I know of.

Q.—Were you able to watch each batch as it was made to see that the proper quantities were used?

A.—I saw almost every batch. I know of no case where too much gravel went in.

Q.—Had you any trouble about the quantities?

A.—I had trouble with one man, Lavery. He wanted to put in too much sand in the surface finish. I had to push the wheelbarrow away once. He was really defying me.

Q.—What was Mr. Sheehy' course regarding this matter?

A.—He spoke to Lavery about it.

Q.—What proportions were used in the surface finish?

A.—9 cubic ft. of granite, 9 of sand and 6 1-2 bags of cement.

Q.—Had you any difficulty other than that you mentioned with Mr. Sheehy or his men?

A.—Oh, no.

Q.—Were you ever improperly approached regarding your duties?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you see any of these crossings on Water-st broken?

A.—Yes. One I saw appeared to be rather soft. It may have been shook in the breaking. A man could not take the concrete apart with an umbrella unless it was disturbed previously. The crossings opened on the second contract seemed to be good and hard. The base is composed of exactly the same material as the curb and the curb can be seen on any part of the work. I have tested it in a dozen places or more and always found it hard.

Q.—Was there any wilful wrongdoing that you know of?

A.—In mixing the first batch Patrick Lavery was going to put in more sand than there was of granite. he was putting sand in the box that was used for granite, I stopped him. My idea was that he was endeavoring to make a shortage of granite.

Q.—Did you find anything of a similar sort on any other occasion?

A.—Well, I had to watch him (Lavery). Near the Oriental I was away for a minute and when I returned he was taking sand off the barrow. Another time he was putting more sand on after he had been filled but he denied this. He always tried to put in too good measure on him. The other men were all amenable. I had no difficulty with Mr. Sheehy. He always had his men lower the level of the base if I thought it too high.

Q.—You had no difficulty with Mr. Sheehy regarding guages or levels?

A.—None.

BOER PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

Military experts are commending in a tone of mingled surprise and admiration the tactics of the Boers. They plainly know a thing or two more than how to dodge from kopje to kopje and pick off the officers of an advancing column. Their tactics at Glencoe were admirable, and would have, British critics tell us, secured victory had the plan been as well executed as conceived. The weak spot in the Boer brigade appears to be its intelligence department. The columns converging upon Glencoe lost touch of each other, and, consequently, did not arrive simultaneously. Then they permitted the garrison to make an exposed retreat across a bad country to Ladysmith without being seriously harrassed, seemingly because they did not understand what was going on. But when the Boer knows where the enemy is, he fights him with skill and stubborn courage. Britons have never been in any doubt as to the effectiveness of the Boer in certain kinds of fighting; and now they are learning that he can wage a good war of aggression under the most modern conditions.

It is quite possible that the Boer leaders have conceived the idea of simply keeping a British force hemmed up in Ladysmith until the advance of the main British army corps begins, with a view to dictating the line of that advance. The British are credited with a purpose to march up through the Orange Free State to Bloemfontein, thus drawing the Boer armies to that point for a crucial struggle, and depriving them of the advantage of defending the well-nigh impregnable passes in the Majuba Hill region. But if there be a sorely distressed British force at Ladysmith, likely to fall into the hands of the enemy at any moment and suffering daily from siege fire, the British can hardly avoid going to the rescue. This would lead them up into the northern angle of Natal, where they must fight their way through the passes to get into either the Orange Free State or the Transvaal. This may or may not be the Boer plan of campaign; but it will be as well to expect a plan as good as the best military expert can devise. This plan would make the immediate capture of Ladysmith not so very desirable to the Boers, and would be indicated possibly by a severe, but long-winded siege. On the other hand, the Boers may wish to dominate Natal for its morall effect on the Dutch population, and may do their level best to reduce Ladysmith before the arrival of reinforcements. And they may fail through the pluck and determination of the British garrison, all of which would look at this distance very like the development of the policy first outlined. Certainly there is no reason to despair of General White's force in any case. The Boer trouble so far has been to keep it inside of its entrenchments, but no serious damage has been done it when there.

CANADA'S DUTY.

The duty of Canada in the present emergency is to supply a second contingent for duty in Africa without delay. In fact we would like to see our government offer the mother country 5,000 men.

The terrible reverse met by the British forces on Monday—happily unparalleled in the history of our arms for very many years—is calculated to afford matter for most serious consideration throughout the Empire. That the safety of the Empire is immediately jeopardized by this awful misfortune nobody will imagine. That British prestige has suffered a serious blow; that a new situation has been created involving the possibility at least of dangerous complications, is obvious; and it would be criminal for those in authority in any part of the Empire to ignore the facts. The first impulse, all the world over, when a disaster occurs is to find somebody to blame. In the present case, General Stewart White has played the man in assuming all the responsibility. Whether or not he was seriously to blame in this case, his country-men know him too well to be disposed to form a harsh judgement upon his actions, and they will not forget that his whole record is that of a brave man and a capable officer.

SORROWS OF NOBILITY.

What Would Have Happened if Princess Louise Had Had Children.

The recently announced engagement of Miss Aimee Lawrence, a well-known young girl of New York society, to a grandson of the Duke of Argyll, and a nephew of the Marquis of Lorne, makes one think of certain peculiar developments which might have occurred, but did not, from the marriage of the Princess Louise. Her wedding took place nearly twenty-nine years ago, and no children have sprung from it. That the union would be one without issue, nobody supposed. That the old Duke of Argyll would live on to his present age of almost 80, was held improbable. Both events, however, have happened. But, provided children had been born to Lord Lorne, their positions (all excepting that of an elder son) would have proved rather drolly anomalous. An eldest son would probably have received the courtesy title of Earl Campbell, but all other children, though belonging to the royal family, would have had to content themselves with plain "Mr." and "Miss." They could not take the titles accorded to children of a marquis, for their father would be (as he now is) a simple commoner before the law, and hence his offspring would have been the same.

It is all very well to say that the Queen "might have done something for them," but she neither could nor would. It was widely asked when the Princess Louise of Wales married the Duke of Fife and became the mother of a daughter, what rank that daughter would assume. Everybody who knows English history, knew. It was that of Lady Alexandra Duff. Precisely for the same general reason, a daughter of the Marchioness of Lorne, though she herself is a "royal highness," would have been "Miss" Campbell. Worshippers of the "blood royal" (and they are not a few, even in this notably civilized country) may claim that the "finger of proidence" has concerned itself in the matter of Lord Lorne and the Princess Louise's childlessness. But then bigots are found everywhere, and deaf-and-dumb snobbery may be lighted on in villages of the Andean slopes. — Edgar Fawcett in Collier's Weekly.

Miss Annie Patterson, of Sackville, N. B., writes—"Indigestion and weak nerves were the bugbears of my life for years. I tried doctors and proprietary medicines till I completely lost heart. Being induced by a friend to try South American Nervine, after taking one bottle I was greatly relieved. Three bottles effected a complete cure. I can recommend it as a valuable remedy and believe it to be the best nerve and stomach tonic in the world." Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproar of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

An Unpredictable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore!" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Yes, sir," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotancy, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 3011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Uncle Sam Sorry.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The action of the New York Customs officials in failing to observe instructions to extend the usual courtesies and facilities to Sir Louis Davies, member of the Canadian Cabinet, on his recent arrival at New York, has been taken cognizance of by the authorities here.

There is sincere regret that any indignity should have been shown the Canadian Minister, and besides giving assurance of this, it is probable that the officer responsible for the discourtesy will be made aware of the Government's disapproval.

PARTITION OF SAMOAN ISLANDS

One of the Three Powers Now in Possession Must Step out.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The negotiations for the partition of the Samoan islands are proceeding rapidly and officials here would not be surprised if a final agreement were reached in the near future. The discussion which is going on in London with the co-operation of the authorities here and in Berlin has brought out certain essentials on which all three powers, Great Britain, Germany and the United States, appear to be agreed.

It is stated that the determination was reached that the tripartite government of the group should come to an end, and that not more than two powers should govern the islands. It seems to be generally accepted by the negotiations that the United States would be one of the two powers to be represented, and that the island of Tutuila, on which the harbor of Pago-Pago is located, would naturally fall to the lot of the United States.

England Agreeable.

It is understood that the British authorities quite fully coincide with this view, and that while the Germans seemed to regard it favorably, it was left open for more mature approval by the Berlin authorities. In conceding this island and harbor to the United States account was taken of the fact that if an agreement were reached on this point it would still be for the United States to give its approval to the arrangement. One of the remaining islands, Upolu, is of much value, while the other, Savaii, is practically valueless.

It is suggested that Great Britain cede the Gilbert and Solomon Islands to Germany, the latter retiring from Samoa.

The Fiji Islands and some other points also have been considered during the discussion, but thus far Germany has not acted favorably on the suggestion and there have been evidences that she preferred to retain her interest and make compensation to Great Britain. This remains open and appears to be the chief point remaining in the way of a final adjustment.

Expedition to Abyssinia.

London, Nov. 2.—Another British expedition to Abyssinia has been arranged and left England on the 25th. The members are Mr. James J. Harrison, Mr. Powell Cotton, Mr. W. Fitzhugh Whitehouse, of Newport, Rhode Island, and Mr. A. E. Butter. Mr. Donald Clarke, who has done much work in the East and West African coasts, and with Colonel Lugard in Ngamiland, will go as surveyor and geographer, and a taxidermist will also accompany the party.

The objects of the expedition are scientific and sporting, and it is expected that the journey will occupy about nine months. Striking south from Adis Abeba the party will explore the country between that place and Lake Stefanie, and also the unexplored regions to the western border of Abyssinia.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

Smoking in the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Foundered at Sea.

New York, Nov. 2.—The Clyde Line steamer Comanche, Captain Pennington, which arrived this morning from Jacksonville via Charlestown, Oct. 31, had on board Captain Styles and seven men of the schooner Napoleon Boughton, which sprang a leak and foundered on Tuesday five miles southwest of Frying Pan shoals, in fourteen fathoms of water. The crew were taken off by the Comanche only five minutes before the schooner sank.

The War in Venezuela.

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 2.—General [illegible] leader of the revolution in Venezuela, has formerly blocaded Porto Cabello, the only port not occupied by Castro's forces, with two cruisers. Commerce with that port has been stopped. Castro has won two victories over Hernandez, and the former's Government is becoming well established.

A Source of News.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The British Government has now asked that the Boer Government permit Mr Macrum, the United States Consul at Pretoria, to transmit once a week a list of the British prisoners in Pretoria, with a statement of their condition.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Pete. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

The Statement Denied.

Washinton, Nov. 2.—It is emphatically denied, as stated in the Spanish Senate, that islands in the Philippines were excluded from the treaty of peace. Reference to the terms of the Spanish-American treaty and to the map only is necessary to show that the islands of Batanes and Calayan are included in the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands, ceded to the United States. The treaty fixes the line as running from west to east along or near the twentieth latitude and through the middle of the navigable channel of Bachia, from the 118th to the 127th degree of longitude.

Both of the islands mentioned are well within the boundary line mentioned in the treaty, as the Bachia Channel runs between the Batanes Islands and Formosa, and Calayan is still further south than the Batanes.

Back from Alaska.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—The McCullough, Admiral Dewey's despatch boat, now a revenue cutter, has arrived from Alaska, where she conveyed Senator Fairbanks, chairman of the Alaska boundary commission; Senator Foster, of Washington, and Governor Brady, of Alaska. The cutter also took Judge Johnston from St. Michael's to Cape Nome, where he settled numerous disputes. He also held court at Unga, Kruiak and Yakutat. The McCullough reports a very stormy passage.

VIVID HEALTH
Nothing as rare as charity, easily mastered and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of riches to the gain of wealth. A ruined purse comes, alone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the joy of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so death gathers in his cheques.
Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will.
CO[illegible]BO
Every bottle of this universal blood-maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evident signs tell of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—tapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my darnedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

THE DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.

Further Particulars of the Terrible Accident Near Apsley.

At Cameron's mine on Saturday, Oct. 21st, one of the most deplorable accidents occurred that ever happened in the North Country, and which resulted in the sudden and horrible extinction of one life and the maiming for life and blinding of another. Just as the miners were getting ready to put in the last blast for the night, Peter Weare, one of the employees, was in the blacksmith shop warming some dynamite for the finishing up of that work, but it proved to be the finish of his life, for the dynamite exploded, killing him instantly. His body was horribly mutilated both hands were blown off, his eye blown out, his right leg torn in a horrible manner, and his body fearfully lacerated. Peter Weare had been married only about ten months, and his widow bereft of her husband in such a shocking and sudden manner has the sympathy of the whole community, and his afflicted parents and sisters and brothers share in the public sympathy.

The foreman of the mine Mr. Galbraith, had one eye blown out, and the other blinded. His hands were so badly injured that Dr. Kelly and Dr. Harding of Coe Hill, amputated one hand at the wirst and the other at the first joint. He has been removed from his boarding place at Mr J. A. McCall's in Coe Hill, where he will be more convient to his medical attendants. He expects his wife and son from Massachusetts as soon as the journey can be made. The foreman had his senses all through his terrible experience. The shock of the explosion split the building in half, hurling one side one way, and the other, another. Finger bones and shreds of flesh lay in all directions. Weare's horse in the stable, a short distance from the shop was blown, stable and all, a distance of 16 feet, and lay till the men were taken care of. When the horse was helped to its feet it seemed crazy for a time and it still deaf, but is able to do light work.

At the time of the explosion Mr. W. Daniels was going out of the front door, and was blown a distance of two rods without any serious injury. However, he was dazed for a time, and and Peter Weare's brother, David, was deaf all the evening. His brother were in the shaft. Both were terribly shocked.

For the War Fund.

London, Nov. 2—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, Canadian High Commissioner to London, has contributed £1,000 to the Transvaal war fund. The sum of £500 has been subscribed by Lord Mountstephen.

Freeman's Journal, in yesterday's issue, says the wild whoops of the English press regarding the support given by Canada to the British arms will probably prove to have been premature. No judicious reader, it says, can reflect on the messages from the Dominion and fail to note the unwillingness of Sir Wilfried Laurier to encourage the jingo movement. The thousand Canadian volunteers now on their way to Africa have not behind them the good-will of the Canadian nation.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. BELEAGUERED MAFEKING.

The Little Town on the Far-away African Veldt That is the Object of Attention

Mafeking is now beleagured by the Boers as Candahar was by the Afghans, and no authentic news has come from it for some days. A few facts about the town may be interesting. It is not perhaps altogether fair to call Mafeking defenceless, for during the past few weeks of tension the place has been more or less protected by sandbags and hastily thrown up earthworks. But Mafeking lies entirely in the open, bare on the veldt, which is as flat as a pancake. A few isolated kopjes, an ant-heap every here and there, a clump of bushes under 3 feet high—these are the only things that break the monotony of the landscape. The veldt runs right away to the far distant sky-line, and only a few scattered tin shanties mark the line of railway.

If the traveller were adventurous enough to travel by the through express from Cape Town to Bulawayo away up in far Rhodesia, he would find Mafeking practically half way between the two. To be exact, it is 870 miles from the former and 503 miles from the latter. Kimberley is 144 miles south. This railway, by the way, is the main Cape to Cairo route, and will one day carry the unavoidable globe trotter right through Africa from end to end.

There is nothing palatial about Mafeking. Normally it is a simple little township of a few hundred souls. Primarily it is a trading station with the far north, and there are many stores of greater or less importance. Grain stores, forage stores, tinned goods, saddles, rifles, ammunition, even furniture, can, or could, be bought there. In the centre of the main street is the market place, surrounded by galvanized iron houses and stores, each with its little raised verandah before it, painted green and white, and many of the more miscellaneous shops bearing weird Indian names. For the enterprizing Mahommedan trader has found his way throughout South Africa, and competes very keenly and successfully with the white men.

Colonel Baden-Powell, that veteran South African warrior, is in command of an irregular, but wholly reliable force of some [illegible] men encamped near Mafeking. He is an excellent officer a good sportsman, an inimitable entertainer, and a bit of a literary swell to boot. He went through the two Matabele wars, and gained experience honors, and—no wounds. In some way he seems to bear a charmed life because he is a reckless sort of fellow, and fears no amount of danger. He also has quite a remarkable gift of locality. That is to say, he is able by some extraordinary instinct to find his way about a totally unexplored country, and always to turn up just where he wished—or thereabouts. The natives think he is "uncanny" He has had adventures of all sorts in many different parts of the world. He played polo in Malta where he was A.D.C. to his uncle, General Smythe, and nearly got killed. He has shot big game wherever big game was to be shot, and then came home quietly and written books about it. His great work on pig-sticking is a classic. He is also a very clever actor and musical entertainer.

WHITE CAN HOLD LADYSMITH

He Has Over 10,000 Men, With Forty-Seven Guns of Great Power.

London, Nov. 2.—H. W. Wilson, the most famous writer on military and naval topics in England has written an article on the situation in Natal, in which he considers that General White's position is critical, but that it will scarcely compell him to fall back from Ladysmith to the Tugela.

"It is probable, then," says Mr. Wilson, "that General White will elect to stand at Ladysmith and face an a most certain seige. For if the enemy is, as the reports represent it, from 20,000 to 30,000 strong, with plenty of artillery, further offensive movements on our part are practically impossible.

"The British force is now about 10,000 strong with possible 500 to 1,000 bluejackets. The sudden arrival of the latter is in itself a danger signal.

"The total strength of the artillery in White's command is thirty-four 15-pounder field guns, three 12-pounders landed by the Powerful, two quick-firers captured at Elandslaagte, and eight 7 or 9-pounder muzzle-loaders of the Natal local forces.

"Such an army as this with ample food and ammunition and a river running through the town ensuring a good water supply, should be able to easily hold Ladysmith until the first troops of the army corps arrive.

"As for reinforcements for White's force, no troops will be immediately available, as the first brigade of the army corps will not reach Cape Town before November 8, and could not be in Durban before the 12th or 13th, but, the indications are the pressure will be taken off of White by a demonstration in the direction of Bloemfontein at the earliest possible moment, so that the troops as they arrive will be pushed towards the Oarnge River.

"The fact that Zayathia's artillery was a week ago despatched in this direction is not to be overlooked, as the Free State forces will not see without some alarm that their capital is threatened and would be certain to at once fall back.

The Gtear Disgrace.

The capture of six guns by the Boers is really the greatest disgrace of the entire war from a British standpoint, not that the weapons will be of much value to the Boers, but only once before during this century have six guns of the Royal Artillery fallen into the enemy's hands, and that was on Moore's retreat to Corunna, when a battery was captured through a mistake.

Bluejackets in Action.

There is no official news of the landing of bluejackets and mariners, but it is stated that a strong naval force holds the bridge across the Tugela river at Colenso, another occupies an important position south of the Orange river, while, it is declared, substantial detachments of sailors are at the chief centres of Dutch disaffection.

"The Government does not allow any definite statement regarding the naval strength in South African waters, but it is believed that there are eight vessels of various classes at Cape Town and in that neighborhood, and six at Durban.

There is a complete absence of news erspecting Kimberley and Mafeking.

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from soaked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the Wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

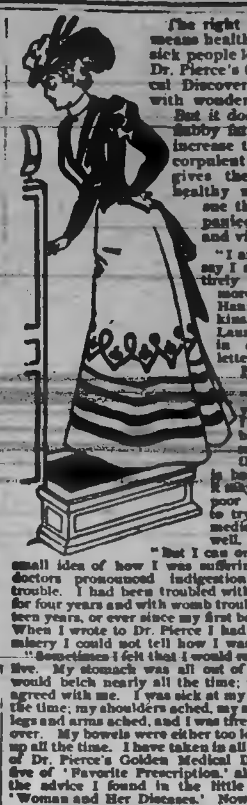
The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded,—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Ver us Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry tragedian; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and [illegible]"



The right kind of flesh means health. Nearly all sick people lose flesh; and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restores it with wonderful rapidity. But it does not make flabby fat; it will not increase the weight of corpulent people; it gives the substantial healthy muscular tissue that is accompanied by strength and vitality.

"I am thankful to say I am feeling entirely well once more," writes Mrs. Hannah J. Watkins, of Raccoon, Laurel Co., Ky., in a memorable letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "When I wrote you first I was feeling very badly, and the reason I want this published is because I think it may induce some poor suffering one to try Dr. Pierce's medicines and get well.

"But I can only give you a small idea of how I was suffering with what doctors pronounced indigestion and womb trouble. I had been troubled with my stomach for four years and with womb trouble about thirteen years, or ever since my first baby was born. When I wrote to Dr. Pierce I had such terrible misery I could not tell how I was suffering.

"Sometimes I felt that I would rather die than live. My stomach was all out of order and I would belch nearly all the time; nothing I ate agreed with me. I was sick at my stomach half the time; my shoulders ached, my sides hurt, my legs and arms ached, and I was tired and sick all over. My bowels were either too loose or bound up all the time. I have taken in all seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and five of 'Favorite Prescription,' also I followed the advice I found in the little book called 'Woman and Her Diseases.' Now doctor, I am so thankful I wrote you, and for your kind advice. You were so kind to write me and not charge me anything for consultation. When I commenced taking your medicine I weighed one hundred and four pounds and now I weigh one hundred and sixteen, and I am gaining all the time."

If constipation is also present, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken. They never fail; they never gripe. Medicine dealers sell Dr. Pierce's medicines.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company own and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

"The British force is now about 10,000 strong with possible 500 to 1,000 bluejackets. The sudden arrival of the latter is in itself a danger signal.

"The total strength of the artillery in White's command is thirty-four 15-pounder field guns, three 12-pounders landed by the Powerful, two quick-firers captured at Elandslaagte, and eight 7 or 9-pounder muzzle-loaders of the Natal local forces.

"Such an army as this with ample food and ammunition and a river running through the town securing a good water supply, should be able to easily hold Ladysmith until the first troops of the army corps arrive.

"As to reinforcements for White's force, no troops will be immediately available, as the first brigade of the army corps will not reach Cape Town before November 8, and could not be in Durban before the 12th or 13th, but, the indications are the pressure will be taken off of White by a demonstration in the direction of Bloemfontein at the earliest possible moment, so that the troops as they arrive will be pushed towards the Orange River.

"The fact that Zayathla's artillery was a week ago despatched in this direction is not to be overlooked as the Free State forces will not see without some alarm that their capital is threatened and would be certain to at once fall back.

The Great Disgrace.

The capture of six guns by the Boers is really the greatest disgrace of the entire war from a British standpoint, not that the weapons will be of much value to the Boers, but only once before during this century have six guns of the Royal Artillery fallen into the enemy's hands, and that was on Moore's retreat to Corunna, when a battery was captured through a mistake.

Bluejackets in Action.

There is no official news of the landing of bluejackets and mariners, but it is stated that a strong naval force holds the bridge across the Tugela river at Colenso, another occupies an important position south of the Orange river, while, it is declared, substantial detachments of sailors are at the chief centres of Dutch disaffection.

"The Government does not allow any definite statement regarding the naval strength in South African waters, but it is believed that there are eight vessels of various classes at Cape Town and in that neighborhood, and six at Durban.

There is a complete absence of news respecting Kimberley and Mafeking.

Where the Pot of Gold is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his house, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetised by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Versus Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry tragedian; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and [illegible]."

The right kind of flesh means health. Nearly all sick people lose flesh; and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restores it with wonderful rapidity. But it does not make flabby fat; it will not increase the weight of corpulent people; it gives the substantial healthy muscular tissue that is accompanied by strength and vitality.

"I am thankful to say I am feeling entirely well once more," writes Mrs. Hannah J. Watkins, of Raccoon, Laurel Co., Ky., in a memorable letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "When I wrote you first I was feeling very badly, and the reason I want this published is because I think it may induce some poor suffering one to try Dr. Pierce's medicines and get well.

"But I can only give you a small idea of how I was suffering with what doctors pronounced indigestion and womb trouble. I had been troubled with my stomach for four years and with womb trouble about thirteen years, or ever since my first baby was born. When I wrote to Dr. Pierce I had such terrible misery I could not tell how I was suffering.

"Sometimes I felt that I would rather die than live. My stomach was all out of order and I would belch nearly all the time; nothing I ate agreed with me. I was sick at my stomach half the time; my shoulders ached, my sides hurt, my legs and arms ached, and I was tired and sick all over. My bowels were either too loose or bound up all the time. I have taken in all seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and five of 'Favorite Prescription,' also I followed the advice I found in the little book called 'Woman and Her Diseases.' Now doctor, I am so thankful I wrote you, and for your kind advice. You were so kind to write me and not charge me anything for consultation. When I commenced taking your medicine I weighed one hundred and four pounds and now I weigh one hundred and sixteen, and I am gaining all the time."

If constipation is also present, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken. They never fail; they never gripe. Medicine dealers sell Dr. Pierce's medicines.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company own and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

WEDDING BELLS.

McDONALD—BANCROFT.

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday at the Charlotte street Methodist parsonage, Reid street, when Mr. Jas. McDonald, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Miss Lizzie Bancroft, daughter of Mr. Wm. Bancroft, of Harvey. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. O. Crumley. The sister of the bride, Miss Flora, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Thomas McWilliams assisted as groomsman. The bride received a number of very handsome presents from her friends. After the wedding the wedding party drove to the residence of the bride's father in Harvey. The friends of the contracting parties will wish them all success in their married life.

KEMPT—ARMOUR.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. John Armour, Water street, Tuesday evening, when his third daughter, Miss Mary, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thomas Kempt, of the Auburn Woolen Mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Torrance, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. The bride was attended by Miss Ella Henderson, whilst Mr. Ed. Fowler acted in a like capacity for the groom. An excellent wedding supper was partaken of by the company and a pleasant time spent in social enjoyment. Mr. and Mrs. Kempt will take up residence at Auburn. A large circle of friends join in the hearty congratulations the occasion calls for.

A Home in Toronto.

Mr. F. W. Miller, who has charge of the Shelter in connection with the Children's Aid Society, took up to the children's department, in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, on Thursday, three little children for whom a home had been found by the Provincial Superintendent.

Two of the children were brother and sister, and were aged four and six years respectively. It is the rule of the department not to seperate members of a family if possible; The father of the waifs disowned them, and the mother deserted them. The third child is a bright little baby boy, nine months old, whose mother died a short time ago.

New Readers.

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

Catarrh Can Be Cured

Catarrh is a kindred ailment of consumption, long considered incurable; and yet there is one remedy that will positively cure catarrh in any of its stages. For many years this remedy was used by the late Dr. Stevens, a widely noted authority on all diseases of the throat and lungs. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering I will send free of charge to all sufferers from Catarrh, Asthma, Consumption and nervous diseases, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers Block, Rochester, N. Y.

A Sad Case.

A young girl, aged about 18, was taken to Nicholls Hospital from the Children's Shelter, having fallen on a hot stove while in an epileptic fit, burning her face and neck. This poor girl has not a friend in the world, and is unfitted for any kind of employment on account of her poor health. She is past the age limited for the Children's Shelter, and it is a grave question as to what to do with her when she is discharged from the hospital.

JEFFRIES STILL CHAMPION.

It was a remarkable fast and fierce battle, Sharkey was the stronger near the end, but weakened under Jeff's onslaught. Jeffreys wraps a flag around his neck and he is congratulated on all sides. Sharkey was cheered for his great showing. Jim Jeffries is still the champion heavy weight of the world.

THE BEST OF THE BRAVE.

O Motherland! whose deep devotion
Will subjects from tyranny save,
Our thousand is crossing the Ocean;
We send you the best of the brave.
The soul of the nation is throbbing
To go forth in battle for you,
And loyalty silences sobbing
In hearts patriotic and true.
The best of the brave we are sending,
Canadians eager to go,
Who will, with a valor unbending,
Help vanquish the Empire's foe.
So Motherland, Motherland weeping
For sons in an African grave,
We, too, may leave heroes there sleeping,
We send you the best of the brave.

News From Canadian Contingent.

The Montreal Star has the grand distinction of having with the contingent a special war correspondent thoroughly accredited, who accompanies the Canadian troops by permission of the Minister of Militia, Dr. Borden, and who goes with instructions cabled from the War Office by the Secretary of War. The Star had the choice of empowering a man in the ranks to send in an occasional letter and dubbing him its war correspondent or engaging a special expert equipped with photographic apparatus and accompanied by a mounted orderly. The difference in cost was a matter of five thousand dollars. As might have been expected the Star chose the expensive plan.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

MR. McWILLIAMS EXAMINES.

Witness told Mr. McWilliams that he is at present working on a contract of Ald. Langford's.

Q.—What instructions did you get from Mr. Hay?

A.—I asked Mr. Hay is the second contract was to go on as the first and he answered "Yes."

Q.—He took it for granted that you knew what was going on?

A.—I suppose so.

Q.—How did you know what they were doing on the other contracts?

A.—From my own observations. They were using 9 cu. ft. of granite, 9 of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement.

Q.—You could not trust the men on the work?

A.—I had no confidence in Lavery. I think the others would do their work all right.

Q.—When you had any disputes with Lavery did you call in Mr. Sheehy?

A.—He never mentioned him. We generally settled it ourselves. I never went a stone's throw away from the men as I had to watch them.

Q.—You would have to go hustling round to watch all parts of the work?

A.—I watched the cement part, the mixing of the top particularly. You could see the stones being put in some distance off.

Q.—On the crossings did they put a surface of 2 1-2 or 1 1-2 inches?

A.—2 1-2 inches. Some of them were a little more.

Q.—What size box did you use for the gravel?

A.—3 ft. square and 13 1-2 inches deep. This was figured out and found to make 23 1-3 cu. ft.

Mr. Sheehy stated that the box was 13 1-4 in. in depth. Witness stated that he measured it 13 1-2 in. deep.

Q.—What amount of cement was called for?

A.—1 to 6 of gravel.

Q.—And one sixth of 23 1-3 feet would require about 4 2-3 bags of cement?

A.—Yes. I knew that more than 4 bags was required. My instructions were to let the work go on the same as the other contract.

Mr. McWilliams then questioned regarding the curb. The average depth would be about 21 inches and the average width between 5 and 6 inches, a cu. foot of curb for every lineal foot of sidewalk.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Lakefield News—On Monday evening last Capt. W. V. Reynolds left his gol watch and chain in the engine room of the steamer Empress. On returning in the morning he found that some one had stolen it. The Captain has a pretty good idea who took the watch, and if it is returned immediately trouble will be avoided.

Havelock Standard—Captain Jack Martin, of Peterborough, is home from the gold fields of British Columbia, and that he was successful in his search for the yellow metal is proven by the fact that he is carrying around with him a bag full of nuggets as samples from six claims which he holds near Atlin, B. C. The Captain was in Havelock on Monday en route to Trent Bridge, where he will spend a few days with relatives.

The Rev. Mr. Symonds will resume his class in Bible study this afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. C. building. Subject, "Prophecy." The public are cordially invited to attend.

The brigade was called out at eleven o'clock yesterday morning to extinguish a small blaze in the rear of the Salvation Army barracks on Simcoe street. Its services were not required, however, as the fire was put out in short order by those who first discovered it.

There was a free fight near the corner of Brock and Water street last night, in the vicinity of the Little Windsor Hotel. Some blood was spilled by one of the combatants, who was the worse of liquor.

HUTCH CURES WELL KNOWN PEOPLE

HUTCH 10 FOR 10 CENTS

C. D. Daniels & Co., 171 King Street East, Toronto, were represented by their manager, Mr. James A. Johnson, when interviewed about Hutch. A good demand was reported by Mr. Johnson and it had all sprung up within the last three weeks. A number of well-known people had affirmed they had received benefit from the use of Hutch after trying every other dyspepsia remedy in vain. From that he recommended it. Mr. Johnson had just returned from a most successful fishing expedition and looked as happy and as healthy as though he had been taking Hutch himself.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Impure water in summer often causes disease among poultry.

The objection to late hatched fowls is the danger of their being stunted.

Poultry matures within a year and is easily changed in any of its characteristics.

Irregular feeding invites derangement of the digestive organs and often causes disease.

In nearly all cases the male imparts the color. When white males are used all the chickens will be white.

Generally, ground bone is one of the best forms in which to give lime to the laying hens while they need it.

By using milk instead of water in mixing the soft food for fowls it serves both for moisture and nourishment.

One advantage in favor of the white breeds is that the pin feathers do not show so plainly as in the black plumaged birds.

Cornmeal does not contain all the essential elements of growth, and for this reason chickens often die off when fed upon

BISHOP VS. WARDENS

The Bishop of Toronto Opposes Mr. de Soyres

FOR RECTOR OF ST. JAMES'

Will Not Appoint Him to Succeed the Late Bishop Sullivan.

Regarding the Refusal, It Looks as if a Split is Imminent—Mr. de Soyres the Congregation's Choice—Wardens Surprised at the Decision.

Toronto, Nov. 4.

To the church wardens and lay representatives of St. James' Cathedral, this important document was addressed under Friday evening's date :—

My Dear Sirs,—I beg [illegible] by official [illegible] to acquaint you that it is my fixed and final intention, as I have intimated to you on many occasions, not to appoint the Rev. J. de Soyres to the rectory of St James' cathedral. I am,

Yours very truly,
ARTHUR TORONTO.

This announcement amazed many leading officials of the congregation, as the feeling had been general that the Bishop would appoint Rev. Mr. de Soyres, of St. John, New Brunswick, who had been named by the committee, and who, it is said, was the unanimous choice of the congregation.

But to Bishop Sweatman's mind this is not the case, as he stated this morning when seen at his office, that half the congregation would leave the church should Mr. de Soyres be appointed. Asked for his reason for opposing the appointment of the St. John divine, the Bishop replied that he was not prepared to answer the query, but stated that he had opposed Mr. de Soyres' nomination from the time it was made in February last until the present.

"Some of the congregation have been trying to force my hand in this matter. The newspapers have stated Mr. de Soyres had been appointed, and I have made this statement in order to contradict these reports."

"Are you not opposing the views of the congregation" the Bishop was asked.

"No," he replied, "one-half of the congregation would leave the church were Mr. De Soyres chosen."

"Well, when will you make an appointment, Bishop Sweatman ?"

"Just as soon as those who are advocating Mr. De Soyres learn that his selection is impossible. Then we can meet and discuss the matter. But a new rector will likely be appointed at an early date."

"The Rev. Forbes Winslow, of St. Leonards-on-the-Sea, is a candidate for the vacancy, is he not, your Lordship"

"Yes, he is," the Bishop responded, "but I want it understood he is not my candidate, and anyway it is not possible that he will be chosen."

Rather astounded were the churchwardens and lay representatives were found to be when informed of the Bishop's decision, which had not reached any of them at noon. Neither of the churchwardens had received any information along this line, and they had expected to have a meeting with the Bishop in regard to Mr. De Soyer's appointment to-night. All the members of the congregation seen declared that at least 90 per cent of the St. James' congregation favored Mr. De Soyre's appointment.

"It is a most extraordinary course on the part of the Bishop to inform a reporter of such an important decision, and not convey it to the officials of the cathedral first." This was the statement of Mr James Scott, one of the wardens.

Mr. A. S. Irving, the other warden, had not received any official intimation, and expressed his great surprise at the Bishop's announcement and the course he had followed in giving it publicity.

SILER ON THE FIGHT.

The Best Man Won Jeffries Outpointed Sharkey Throughout.

New York, Nov. 4—In an interview to-day Referee George Siler said:—"Jeffries received the decision over Sharkey because I thought he had the better of the fight.

"Sharkey put up a great fight, but he was out-generalled by Jeffries. The champion fought a clean cut battle. Jeffries outpointed throughout the fight, with the exception of a few rounds. Sharkey at times was aggressive and led often, but many of his blows went wild. Aggressiveness is not the only thing that figures in a contest. Sharkey's blows, which may have appeared to land on Jeffries, went wide of the mark. The champion blocked Sharkey's leads repeatedly. Jeffries altogether fought a cleverer fight and every blow landed by him was clean and effective. Sharkey, in his desire to win, resorted to questionable tactics. It was the greatest heavyweight fight I have ever seen, and I think it will be a long time before such another battle takes place. Both men showed gameness and their endurance was almost marvellous."

THE KAISER'S NIGHTMARE.

In it He Sees the American Navy Aiding Britain.

London, Nov. 4—The rumors of a continental anti-British coalition continue to occupy the French papers. Referring to the alleged Anglo-American understanding, said to be the outcome of the Hispano-American war, the Figaro says :—

"The Washington Cabinet is convinced that, had it not been for the resolute action of Great Britain, the McKinley Administration would have had to face a European coalation in Spain's behalf, to deprive the United States of the fruits of victory. The English played so well on this string that at the present moment, if Europe did not remain in a position of strict neutrality, it would not be long before a United States fleet showed its flag on the eastern and southern coasts of Africa. This is the Kaiser's nightmare, and it will be used as an argument in favor of the increase in the German navy. The English hope that the increase may be made, with the view of the conclusion of an alliance between Great Britain, the United States and Germany.

Mr. Latchford Nominated.

Renfrew, Nov. 4.—At the Liberal convention yesterday Hon. F. R. Latchford was formally chosen to represent the Liberals, against T J McGarry, the Conservative nominee. Mr Latchford made a speech telling how the Government had called him from the ranks of the people. He paid a high tribute to the retiring Premier and Hon. Wm. Harty. Mr. Latchford said he would do his very best. He wanted no machine politics in South Renfrew, but wanted to make a clean contest of it, and he felt he could win. Several other speeches were made.

London is Isolated.

London, Nov. 4.—This city is unprecedently isolated to-day, so far as telegraphic communication is concerned, the wires being down in every direction. Consequently no details of the damage wrought by the storm have reached here except from Hulensborough, where a number of houses were unroofed and chimneys blown down. A violent storm has been prevailing since midnight along the south coast of Ireland. The wind, which is from the south-west, has raised enormous seas. No vessel has attempted to leave Queenstown harbor to-day, many are running in seeking shelter. The workmen in the naval yard on Haulbowline Island, three quarters of a mile south of Queenstown, have been unable to get to the city. No casualties have been reported, but many are expected owing to the exceptional fury of the gale.

Dynamite Explosion.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Five hundred lbs. of dynamite exploded in the mixing house of the Aetna Powder Works at Aetna, Ind., to-day, resulting in the death of two employees.

COLENSO IS ABANDONED BY BRITISH TROOPS.

Gen. White Now Surrounded on All Sides, and His Line of Communication With the Coast Cut Off.

BRITISH POSITION AT LADYSMITH IMPREGNABLE.

Official Announcement That Colenso Has Been Abandoned—Natal Must be Protected, That is Why Gen. White Occupied the Neck of Land—Report that Colesberg Bridge Has Been Destroyed.

London, Nov. 4.—The news from Natal to-day is of the highest importance, seeing that it indicates the completes investment of Ladysmith. A despatch says the town was abandoned by the British, the inference being, of course, that the Boers were in such great force around it that it was impossible to hold the position any longer. General White's line of communication with Pietermaritzburg and the coast has thus been completely cut, and no further supplies or reinforcements can reach him unless the Boers are first defeated and driven from their position along the railway. It was understood that Colenso, with its important bridge over the Tugela, was defended by a composite military and naval force with powerful guns. Whether this force had a battle with the Boers before retreating is not known, though it is exceedingly probable. Even if General White were to fall back upon his third line of defence—the Tugela river—he could not now do so, seeing that it is in possession of the enemy. Hemmed in on all sides, nothing is now left the gallant defender of Ladysmith save stern resistance until reinforcements arrive or a surrender to superior force.

COLENSO VACATED.

London, Nov. 4.—It has been officially announced that the British have evacuated Colenso, south of Ladysmith.

Colenso is a point of the greatest importance. At this point the railway bridge from Ladysmith to Pietermaritzburg crosses the Tugela River. Colenso is about 15 miles south of Ladysmith. If the above news is correct it means that Gen. White is now surrounded on all sides and that his line of communication with the coast has been cut, so that it is impossible for trains to approach within fifteen miles of Ladysmith.

London, Nov. 4.—The War Office later issued the following announcement; "The Colonial Office has received information to the effect that the British troops have withdrawn from Colenso and have concentrated further south. But we have no news of any engagement in that neighborhood."

ANOTHER BITTER PILL.

London, Nov. 4.—The news that Colenso had been evacuated was another bitter pill for the British public, and is arousing fears that the continental statements of a second serious defeat of General White may prove true. A significant fact is that the War Office dies not say when Colenso was evacuated, so that the statement which emanated Thursday from Dr. Leyd, the diplomatic representative of the Transvaal, who is located at Brussels, that the Boers had occupied Colenso, was possibly true. There is more apprehension that the War Office is suppressing bad news.

MORE GUNS AT LADYSMITH.

Ladysmith, Nov. 1.—Afternoon, via Cape Town.—Four naval long range guns have been mounted here.

NATAL MUST BE PROTECTED.

London, Nov. 4.—Almost the only subject of discussion of this week in England was the disastrous reverse suffered by General Sir George Stewart White, the British commander at Ladysmith, Natal, and this was made the occasion for pouring out torrents of lay criticism and advice. Public opinion seems fairly divided, one section bitterly blaming the General commanding, and the other maintaining that he probably is not so much at fault as he made himself out. The latter section, which includes many service men and nearly all the service publications, urges the withholding of definite criticism pending more detailed accounts.

Praise for Troops.

The Naval and Military Record, after expressing this sentiment, sums up the situation as follows... "Considering the nature of the country, the lamentable unpreparedness of England and the unwillingness of the Opposition to allow a British regiment to go to South Africa until President Kruger's ultimatum was received, it is almost surprising that we have been able to hold our own so far. Not only have the Boers proved themselves determined fighters and splendid sharpshooters, as we knew them to be, but they have deloped surprising military and strategic qualities. They have nearly surrounded every garrison we hold, and have invariably occupied almost unassailable positions, fighting with great courage. Against such soldiers our little force, left isolated far from our base and without hope of relief for days to come, has not only done splendid work, but has gained successes which we venture to believe no other soldiers in the world placed in similar positions and in similar unfortunate conditions could have achieved."

Erroneous Comment.

Although this may fairly be said to represent conservative military opinion, its reference to the action of the Opposition as preventing the sending of troops in good time is entirely erroneous. The failure to send out troops enough cannot be charged to the Opposition, for Parliament was not then sitting. If there were any intention to hold Natal at all costs an adequate force should have been sent out by Oct. 4, when the excuse that such reinforcements might be taken by the Boers as a menace no longer held good as the Indian troops were on the way. A high Government official said to the correspondent of the Associated Press that the broad lines of policy affecting Natal had been much misunderstood.

Why White Went Out.

"We are often asked," said he, "why we sent Sir George Stewart White up the Neck of Natal unless we were sure he could hold it. Considering the tremendous reinforcements now on the way to him, it occurs to almost everybody, at first sight, that he ought to have retired without risking engagemetns; but it is forgotten what would happen in Natal unless we made a vigorous stand there.

"Natal has risked her little all on behalf of the Empire; and the least we can do is to risk something ourselves and to prevent the overrunning of her prosperous towns and rich fields by hordes of the enemy. Purely military considerations, I admit, might point to the fact that we ought immediately to have withdrawn from our advanced positions; but purely military considerations have some times to be subordinated to the interests of the Empire, and although many good lives have been lost in such a cause, they have not been wasted."

Yeomanry Go Out.

Several small detachments of country yeomanry are going out, independent of the War Office, to the seat of war, on the chance of joining the Imperial Light Horse. Lord Lonsdale and Lord Harris, both yeomanry officers, are aiding this movement.

The heavy losses among the British officers in Natal have led the military journal to suggest that the sword be abolished, not only on account of its uselessness, but also because its glitter attracts the aim of an enemy and indicates the officer.

The Queen's Appreciation.

Her Majesty, it is reported, has personally conveyed to Field Marshall Lord Garnet Wolseley an expression of her gratification at the manner in which the whole military machine has worked since it was first set in motion by the Boer ultimatum, especially in the matter of mobilization. Apparently the Queen has not forgotten the existance of the commander-in-chief—a lapse of memory to which the public is now rather prone and which, so it is said, the Marquis of Lansdowne committed intentionally.

Cruisers Preparing.

Although no orders have yet been received for the commission of additional warships, there is little doubt, judging from the activity on board them, that the first-class protected cruisers Amphitrite, Argonaut, Ariadne, and Blake, and the second-class protected cruiser Charybdis will soon hoist the flag. In addition to these there is now at Chatham a powerful reserve fleet, consisting of two battleships, three first-class cruisers, six second-class cruisers, two third-class cruisers, six torpedo boat destroyers and seven torpedo boats, ready for all eventualities.

AFTER THE WAR.

London, Nov. 4.—It is stated that the plan of the Government is to terminate the war as speedily as possible after the forts at Pretoria and Johannesburg have been razed, and then to promulgate by order of the Queen in Council a new constitution for a group of five Federal States,—

The Cape.
Natal.
Transvaal.
Orange River.
Rhodesia.

under the title of the Dominion of South Africa, the Governor-General being nominated by the Crown and the five States having power to elect their own Lieutenant-Governor and to have local Legislatures. The Dominion Parliament would sit at Cape Town. With some modifications, the outline of the scheme is based upon Canadian lines.

The same agency also learns from a well-informed source that some anxiety is being displayed in official circles at Paris and St. Petersburg at the rapidity with which the British Government has seized upon the state of war in South Africa to concentrate troops in the Cape and Natal commands in excess of what are regarded as the requirements of the situation. Notes have already been exchanged between the powers on this subject, and it is anticipated that unofficial inquiries will be addressed to Her Majesty's Government as to the contemplated absorption of the Orange Free State and the Transvaal Republic in the British Empire.

IS THE BRIDGE GONE.

Colesburg, Nov. 1.—Delayed in transmission.—An explosion was heard this afternoon in the direction of the Colesburg bridge, and it is supposed that the Boers have destroyed the bridge.

The Colesburg bridge crosses a branch of the Orange River in the rear of Norval's Post, Cape Colony. It is exceedingly improbable that the bridge is blown up.

BRIDGE IS INTACT.

Colesburg, Cape Colony, Nov. 2.—Delayed in transmission.—The bridge is intact. The explosion heard yesterday was only signals.

SEVENTY KILLED, 200 WOUNDED.

Cape Town, Nov. 1.—Delayed in transmission.—The Cape Times says the Boer loss at Reitfontein was seventy in killed and two hundred wounded. Three hundred horses were captured.

A SILLY STORY.

London, Nov. 4.—The War Office at noon to-day announced that nothing had been received there in any way modifying or altering the statement issued yesterday afternoon saying that belated despatches from Ladysmith were coming through. Nothing has been received to corroborate the reiterated reports from Berlin of the capitulation of General White.

A third despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, dated Cape Town, November 1, announces that the Boers have entered Cape Colony at Norvalspruit, destroying several bridges.

It is probable that the above despatch refers to Norval's Pont, and not Norvalspruit, which cannot be found on the map. It is not likely that the Boers have entered Cape Colony by Norval's Pont, which is fortified most strongly and could only be carried in a severe battle. Neither is it likely that the Boers would enter Cape Colony and then destroy the bridge forming their only retreat.

STILL NO NEWS.

London, Nov. 4.—The following official announcement has been made by the War Office;

"No news has been received from Ladysmith up to 3 o'clock this afternoon, we therefore presume that the wire is still interrupted."

In spite of silence the officials of the War Office do not credit the various rumors as to the position of the garrison, and no grave anxiety at present is felt regarding the ability of General White to hold his own.

TROOPSHIP RETURNS TO PORT.

London, Nov. 4.—The British troopship Papidan, which sailed for South Africa on November 1, from Liverpool, is returning in a damaged condition, having encountered yesterday's storm. She signalled that her fittings were out or order, that several horses have been drowned and that three of her boats were stove in. She is going to Liverpool to be refitted.

INVADED CAPE COLONY.

Burghersdorp, Cape Colony, Nov. 2.—Delayed in transmission.—The Boers have crossed Bethulie bridge this morning. About three hundred more of them are expected to cross this afternoon.

THE SEIGE IS RAISED.

Fort Tuli, Rhodesia, Oct. 29.—Delayed in transmission—There has been a few skirmishes with the Boers, whose main body has retired southward.

Fort Tuli is on the northern border of the Transvaal and is held by Col. Plummer.

ANXIETY AT CAPE TOWN.

London, Nov. 4.—The War Office is making every endeaver to communicate with Ladysmith, so news may arrive momentarily. In the meanwhile the best opinion is satisfied that if General White keeps strictly on the defensive he will be able to hold his own. The British experts smile at the Boer plan of campaign, which contemplates seizing Durban in order to prevent the landing of British troops there. They say it has one fatal defect, namely, that it ignores the British fleet, under whose guns, it is claimed the seizure of Durban would be impossible.

Preparing for Invasion.

The despatches this morning show that the forces of the Orange Free State are at length preparing to invade Cape Colony. These forces are not overwhelming, but the Dutch in the neighborhood of Colesburg and Burghersdorp are exceptionally pro-Boer, and their support is evidently expected. The objective of this force of Boers will probably be Naauw Port, one of the most important strategic railroad points in South Africa, and which will probably be, it is said here, the first advanced depot of the second division of the army corps. Naauw Port is understood to be well garrisoned and able to take care of itself. Trains thence to Colesburg have been almost suspended.

Cheering News.

The despatches from Ladysmith, though three days old, are regarded here as being more cheering, and as indicating that the Boers are not disposed to come to close quarters. On the other hand some people assert it is more probable that the Boers are recuperating prior to a fresh onslaught on Ladysmith.

Serious Situation.

Advices from Cape Town show that the people there are beginning to realize the seriousness of the situation in Natal. The merchants are apprehensive of the Boers overrunning the entire country, and it is reported that many of them have instructed their representatives to leave Pietermaritzburg.

In spite of the optimism of the military men, there is a feeling of general anxiety at Cape Town. The Orange river is reported to be so swollen that the drifts are impassable, and the Boers hold the wagon bridge at Philippolis which is the only means of crossing.

Fire in Hamilton

Hamilton, Nov. 4.—The plant of the Sun Oil Refining Company, corner Wentworth street and G.T.R. track, including the barrelling station and a large stock of refined and crude oil, was totally consumed by fire last night. The cause of the fire cannot be ascertained. The quantity of oil in stock was much larger than is usually carried, and the loss on this alone will be $7,000. The total loss will be about $20,000.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Investigation Before County Judge Continued.

WHAT THE INSPECTORS SAY

Nothing of Great Importance Elicited at the Hearings.

Examination of Mr. McFadden, Inspector on the Second Sheehy Contract—Inspector Bartlett Also on the Stand on Friday Morning's Sitting.

At the pavement investigation Thursday morning Mr. R. F. McWilliams continued his examination of Mr. T. W. McFadden, inspector on the second Sheehy contract—

Q.—When you tendered for this sidewalk did you figure on?

A.—Mr. Hay told me that the specifications were the same as those used last year.

Q.—Did any town official give you any authority for thinking that they would not be carried out?

A.—No.

Q.—Then you figured according to the specifications?

A.—In tendering on the contract given to Evans & Langford I intended to use one of granite and one of sand. I did not intend to use two measures of granite. I knew that Mr. Sheehy was using a measure of sand. I do not think I knew that 5 1-2 bags of cement were being used. I calculated on using one third of cement. The only change I knew of was the sand. I did not intend to use Ensign cement.

Q.—Why did you calculate that sand would be allowed?

A.—I heard the report that 2 of granite with 1 of cement would not work.

Q.—If you had known that 5 1-2 bags of cement were to be used instead of 3 as you calculated you could have put in a lower figure?

A.—Yes, I could.

Q.—How much lower?

A.—I would have made it about a cent lower. I calculated on using 4 bags instead of 4 1-2 in the base. I know that this was done last year and that the contractors were using four. I calculated on using Star cement. I did not consider the difference in price between it and Ensign very much.

Q.—You saw the crossings opened on Water-st?

A.—Yes. I would not have been satisfied with them as a sample of my work. They were not as hard as they should have been for the time they were laid. I saw the pavement taken from near Dr. Halliday's. I did not like the way it came off in slabs. I would not call it first class work.

Q.—Was stone foundation used in all parts of Mr. Sheehy's contract?

A.—Yes, all parts. Depth ran from 3 feet to 6 inches.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

Mr. Dennistoun—Do you know that this man Lavery had been drinking?

A.—Yes, at times. He was a little given to drink.

Q.—You know that the inspector through the engineer has power to dismiss any man?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And you did not report Lavery to the engineer?

A.—No. I thought I could manage him myself.

Q.—Do you remember that Mr. Sheehy reproved him strongly?

A.—I do not remember it.

Q.—You had no fault with Mr. Sheehy himself?

A. None. He would do what I asked. I know of no attempt on his part to cheat anyone. Lavery was the only man I could not trust.

Q.—Suppose a man like Mr. George Rose comes along with a sledge hammer and knocks the surface to pieces what effect would this have on the base?

A.—It would knock it to pieces.

Q.—Would this account for the base as you saw it?

A.—No. The base looked as if it had been struck with a hammer itself.

Q.—Then you have examined the curb of Sheehy's contract, the place where the base is exposed?

A.—Yes, it seems to be good work.

Q.—Did you have any trouble in getting Mr. Sheehy's men to remove the large stones from the gravel?

—A.—No. They removed them if I told them.

Q.—Who called you from your home to look at the crossings opened on Water-st?

A.—Mr. Sawers.

Witness said that the explanation of the surface coming off in a slab might be that the base had been let lie over night and was not sufficiently wet before the surface was laid in the morning. Witness did not know of concrete work without sand.

Q.—It has been said by someone that "Mr Sheehy is the most dishonest contractor he ever met with"?

A.—I had no difficulty with Mr. Sheehy.

The investigation adjourned till Friday morning.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The pavement investigation was resumed. F. Bartlett was the first witness.

Mr. Bartlett stated that he was inspector on the granolithic walks last year, the first Sheehy contract. He understood that the specifications this year were the same as last. This year he was inspector on the Evans & Langford contract.

Mr. Edwards—What proportions were used last year in the base?

A.—About 7 parts of gravel to 1 of cement. The specifications called for 1 of cement to 6 of gravel but did not name the cement. Star cement was used. We thought it better to use more gravel with the good cement that 6 parts of gravel to 1 of inferior cement. I was instructed to do this by Mr. S. Belcher. 7 parts of gravel to 1 of Star cement, cost about as much as 6 of gravel with 1 of cheaper cement.

Q.—What size box did you use for measuring the gravel last year?

A.—It was the same boxes he used this year, 6 feet square and about 14 inches

PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

The news from the seat of war is somewhat more reassuring. It is said that Ladysmith is safe and that the recent reverses have not affected Gen. White's chances of holding out until the army corps under Buller is ready to advance. Anxious enquiries are at present being made as to the troops nearly due at the Cape, which may be in time to assist White at Ladysmith in case he is pressed. The Northampton, Devon, West York, East Surrey and Queen's regiments sailed on Oct. 20, 5,000 strong, and should reach Ladysmith about Nov. 10. The Guards' brigade, 4,651, left about the same time and should arrive about the end of next week. General Buller sailed on Oct. 14 and arrived at Cape Town Oct. 30, which is probably a quicker passage than the transports will make. It is three days from Cape Town to Ladysmith by rail and so that, roughly speaking, three weeks is about the quickest journey which can be made from London to Ladysmith. Ordinary troops going in transports to Durban via the Cape and thence to Ladysmith by rail will take nearer four weeks than three, so that when it is said that Buller's army corps will commence to arrive in appreciable numbers by November 16, quick passages are being allowed for. A few regiments may be on the way and will arive between now and the tenth, but the main portion of Buller's army corps of 22,136 men and 114 guns will only commence to arrive on that date and it is not likely to be all landed, equipped with transport and ready to take the field before the end of the month.

As the time goes on the prophecies as to the number of men it will take to clear up that immense tract of country and end the war are assuming more exaggerated forms. It was thought that Buller's army corps, which, with the troops already in the field, regulars and colonials, will make 80,000, would be more than ample, but an excellent military authority now places it at 150,000. If Britain has to put anything like that number into South Africa she cannot do so without dangerously depleting her garrisons elsewhere, unless the colonies come to her aid.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The British forces evidently do not understand the characteristics of the United State mule.

•• • ••

Fighting Joe Martin is being welcomed with open arms into the Conservative fold. The Liberals will wish the Opposition much joy of its foundling.

•• • ••

Regarding the Ladysmith disaster, it may be mentioned that it was only the mules that ran. It has been pointed out that a number of mules for South Africa were purchased in Kansas.

Erie Mountain Consolidated Mining Co., Limited, Spokane, Washington.

The Erie Mountain Consolidated Mining Co., Limited, was incorporated last May under the laws of the State of Washington, and British Columbia, and registered with non-personal liability, stock fully paid and non-assessable.

The Company has a large treasury of 1,300,000 shares of its stock to be used for development of the five mineral properties which it owns, the same being located in the well known Nelson, Ymir, mining districts near Erie British Columbia.

Mr. W. Merriam, treasury of the company who has just returned from the companies property, says that they have a magnificent showing on the "Houlton" where they are opening up a well mineralized ledge 40 ft. between walls which are well defined, and traceable for a distance of fully 1,000 ft in length. In one shaft which has been sunk only 20 feet, there is a three foot lead of fine quartz from which five assays ranging from [illegible] to [illegible] gave an average of $39.42 gold, silver and copper.

The "Gilford" another property belonging to the company, Mr. Merriam says has simply a wonderful showing. There is a huge mineral dyke more than 100 feet in width on which they had run a tunnel for a distance of about 60 feet; this tunnel is being run to catch at greater depth a rich vein which was encountered in the upper tunnel. From this property thirteen assays ranging from $5.55 to $154.93 gave an average of $39.42 The ore from the lower tunnel is growing richer as progress is made, and with 75 feet further they expect to cut the main lead of rich ore. Mr. Merriam says the Company is in receipt of a letter from the Northport Smelter offering to freight and treat their ore for $6.00 per ton. The amount of silica and other fluxing ingredients which it carries make this ore particularly desirable.

All the properties of this company lie in the vicinity of the well known Silver King, Ymir, Second Relief, and some adjoin the well known Arlington, and Canadian King mines.

The Gilford is where the main development is now being done, lies only about 1,000 feet from the Railroad, and only about 50 miles from the Nelson, Northport and Trail Smelters.

It will be seen that the development of these properties is yet in its infancy, but with their present showing and very favorable location, with transportation and smelters close at hand, makes the prospects very bright for this company.

Their principal offices are located at 224 Mohawk Block Spokane, Washington.

A MORNING WITH KRUGER.

A Visit to the World's Queerest Millionaire Who is Now So Much Talked of.

Does he ever wash; is the first thought when one enters the presence. Does he ever do anything but smoke, and drink coffee and spit?

It is very early in the morning, not yet six; he is seated on the stoep (porch) as two soldiers announce your name. Already he has listened to the morning paper, read to him by that notorious person Colonel Ferreira.

Again you wonder, does he ever wash?

The heavy figure of a Lincolnshire farmer is clad in decayed black. Loose coat, the high buttoned waistcoat, the wide flat-fronted trousers, all bear the marks of coffee, tobacco juice and wear. Most extraordinary of all, verging on the grotesque, is he when adorned with the green scarf of office, like a past master of some friendly society.

There is no majesty, there is no greatness, there is nothing attractive, the force of character is not apparent. He does not speak to you—

He Roars at You.

His forcible remarks are punctuated by resounding blows on his knee, or on the unlucky interpreter, whichever comes handy. The fervor of his bellowings occasionally releases the brown pipe stem from the clutch of browner teeth.

The humor of the man is irascible, the manner overbearing. Years of absolute governing and enormous wealth have engendered an intolerant spirit of domineering. Were he not a President he might have succeeded as a philosopher. With all the vices of Epictetus he lacks many of his virtues. An arrogant appearance of humility conspicously parades all the rugged independence of a fakir in the leader of a Republic. Since he cannot dazzle, he attempts to inspire a superstitious awe; and, too little to appear great in the ordinary habits and manner of a man, he magnifies himself by increasing his idiosycrasies, and propagates his character by the force of his pecularities.

The contemplation of the man himself, though unpleasant, is necessary to estimate the enormous influence he till now has possessed. A European statesman may act up to his part—he seldom dresses down to it.

The Old Millionaire of Pretoria knows the value of affecting rusticity in appearance, and secures by it many a vote already half persuaded by the judicious distribution of dole and office.

His public complaint has always been "to be let alone," and having ingeniously obtained that modest immunity he erects on it a right to non-interference, and has for years boldly put forth a claim for absolute independence.

In the Israelites of old he finds a prototype for his people in the possession of their Promised Land, hemmed round by the ever intruding Philistines—himself by turns a Moses or an Aaron, making law and dismissing his Chief Justice or officiating in the high place at the Holy Communion.

That Secret Service Fund be established and supported by grants of State moneys, and wisely commenced with the members of the Executive, who alone had any control over the application of the fund. A student of history, he drew inspiration from Walpole's system of conscience money, and strengthened his position by pulling the State purse strings for the benefit of powerful supporters.

Even the Secret Service Fund has produced more enemies than friends.

The Dutch in Cape Colony are unrighteously indignant at the scanty recognition of their poverty.

In view of the approaching end of the corrupt "Republic," it is amusing to remember that it was but a few moons ago Dr. Leyds paid a State Secretarial visit to Albuquerque, at Delagoa Bay. The nominal subject was native labor for the mines; the real object a Boer port, and the South African Republic as a naval power.

Did not Albuquerque return that visit with even greater state. Was he not lodged and fed by the State at the Grand Hotel at Pretoria?

Was it not Paul Kruger who at that ever-to-be-remembered lunch lifted milily consciously parades all the gal? What hopes then engendered are now dashed for ever!

The decline of his authority presages his natural dissolution, and when the last page is turned what can he say? If he has been the genius of his country, he has been the political tarantula of South Africa.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank!" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you'd been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be pretty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west—

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em warm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the hoarsest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $25 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends

Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.

Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.

Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.

Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.

The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

ALIBI FOR ANDERSON.

What the Defence will Endeavor to Prove in the Winnipeg Bank Robbery Case.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 3.—The court room was crowded to the doors at the Anderson trial this morning, and intense interest was manifested in the proceedings. When the proceedings began to-day Davis was again placed in the box and confronted by the witnesses summoned from Chicago to prove that his character is not what it might be. The situation would seem to be uncomfortable for Davis, but he never winced, even when jerked up by Judge Bain for too apparent lapse of memory. Hagel to-day took up Davis' record as a detective, to show that he had never earned a living from detective work. The cross-examination from appearances will continue all day and then the Crown will likely re-examine Davis, and after two or three minor witnesses the case for the Crown will be closed. For the defence evidence will be to damage the character of Davis, prove an alibi for Anderson on the night he is said to have hidden the money and show his good character. Hagel will also emphasize the point that the vault might have been left unlocked.

Cost Her Her Reason.

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of set-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited in such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it is constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a large grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog-raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lachnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a field where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall

YACHT AND CREW ARE LOST.

The Chiquita Found Ashore With Her Dead Owner Lashed to the Rigging.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—The north-east gale, which has been raging for over 48 hours and brought the first snow of the season to the this locality still sticks. Life-savers at various lake points have been kept busy watching for and aiding vessels in distress. The following vessels were reported as being in trouble at various points—

Schooner William H. Dunham, two-master, ashore near St. Joseph, Mich.; steamer, name unknown, ashore on Tin Shoals, near Bois Blanc Island; schooner Kate Lyons, from Cheboygan, Mich., to Chicago, laden with lumber, stranded near Cal Head; schooner Elgin, bound for Chicago, put in at Milwaukee, leaking badly.

The fleet of sheltered vessels in Chicago harbour last night were reported as greatly increased. Over two hundred and forty boats have been reported in shelter during the last two days, which makes an unusually large number.

The schooner-rigged yacht Chiyuita with a dead man, supposed to be D. S. Way, the owner and captain, lashed to the rigging, went ashore in the gale three miles east of Miller Station, Ind. It is believed that all the crew and passengers have perished. Garments found in the cabin indicated that at least one woman was among the unfortunate party on the yacht. Where the vessel belonged was not ascertained last night, but it was thought it was from some Michigan port. The dead man lashed to the rigging was apparently 38 years old. On his left temple was a cut, caused probably by a falling spar.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

All Roads Lead to the Dressmaker.

Mr. Hornbill—Do you know, darling, I could pick you out of a crowd of women just by your style!

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two seasons!

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, noting his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the barreteros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the barreteros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing.

Beresford Goes to Sea.

Plymouth, Eng., Nov. 3.—Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford has accepted the post of second in command of the British Mediterranean squadron, in succession to Rear-Admiral Sir Gerard Henry Noel, whose time expires in January next. Lord Beresford has already selected his staff.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Cocoanut oil thickens and darkens the eyebrows.

A raw egg swallowed will detach a fishbone in the throat.

A good cure for corns is to rub them night and morning with a piece of ordinary sandpaper. If this method is persevered in, great relief is at once obtained and the corns will gradually disappear.

"A good stout toothbrush, plenty of water and some antiseptic dentifrice applied morning and night," says one who has given much thought to the interests of antiseptic purity, "will afford a greater safeguard against many diseases than most people are aware."

THE NEW SPAIN.

About the worst that can be said of Spain now is that it is the Washington Baseball club of nations.—Chicago News.

Nothing seems to be said about what Spain is going to do at the Paris exposition. It might at least make a display of mananas.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Now that we are friends with Spain once more, she may give us the contract of building her new navy. She has reason to know that we build a fairly good article of warship.—St. Louis Republic.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial looking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. RATHER A DOWNFALL.

Formerly He Was a King Now He is a Janitor in San Francisco.

San Francisco has a king in her midst who at present is not in the throne business. His name is James Jackson, and he signs it with a cross, for this sovereign is a servitor whose occupation has naught in common with royal regalia, palatial surroundings or regal authority. In point of fact, this particular king is a colored janitor. Instead of wielding a sceptre he flourishes a broom. But it is not his intention to spend the remainder of his life in demolishing cobwebs with dustpans and mops for daily companions. He expects to ascend the throne with due impressiveness and dignity just as soon as certain obstacles now in the way are removed.

Meanwhile he plies the mop and brandishes the duster as diligently as though to the manor born. Says he—

"I am the rightful King of Kabinda, only son of the late King of that district. My throne is now vacant for the reason that my claim to it has never been presented. I believe a usurper is now administering the province which is legally mine. To secure my rights and re-establish myself as the sovereign of the country is my aim and purpose, and I shall never relinquish my endeavors until I succeed or my head falls in the attempt."

The King of Kabinda is mahogany in color, small in stature, feline in agility and speaks English with the accent of a Kanaka. He has resided some twelve years in San Francisco and during that time has followed the occupation of janitor and cook. A restaurant keeper on Sutter street, whom he has served, gives a good account of him for thrift, efficiency and truthfulness.

He has lately petitioned two monarchs of Europe to restore him to his lawful rights. The first of these went to Queen Victoria and the last to Charles I., King of Portugal. To the first letter he has received the following reply —

Foreign Office, April 28 1899.

Sir—Your petition to her Majesty, the Queen, of the 21st ultimo, has been forwarded to this department to be dealt with, and I am directed by the Marquis of Salisbury to inform you in reply that her Majesty's government is unable to be of any assistance to your in the matter to which it refers, as Kabinda is situated in Portuguese territory. I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Francis Bertie.

James Jackson, Esq., San Francisco, Cal.

It was in accordance with the suggestion conveyed in this missive that King Jackson has applied to his Majesty of Portugal. He says that restoration to his throne isc only a matter of a warship or two, and if he were sent there attended by a show of force there would be no difficulty about a proclamation over that crossmark of his placing him securely in possession of his ancestral and regal estate.

Kabinda lies on the west coast of Africa, and the map shows it as bordering between the possessions of Portugal and those of France. It is a part of the Congo Free State and comprises an extensive though indefinite territory. In support of his claims and in explanation of how it occurs that he is at present so distant from the site of his empire King Jackson has the following to say—

"I am now 40 years old. I was born at Pernambuca, my father being King Pogastano, which interpreted into English, means James. Pernambuco is a town of about 20,000 natives on the seashore of Kabinda district, and five miles from Kabinda district, and five miles from Kabinda city, which lies toward the interior. Kabinda is the capital of the district and is a large city of native people. It is there that my father's palace stands.

"I left the country about twenty-five years ago, at the age of fifteen. I was a wild and foolish boy. My father wanted me to go to school, for there were schools in Kabinda, but I refused, spending my time roaming from place to place with a gang of young bloods, engaged in hunting, shooting and fishing, and not caring anything about education. I was everywhere recognized and treated as a prince, for I was my father's only son. It did not mean a great deal, however, to be a prince, for the people were on a low plane of life. All of them went about breech clout, though my father wore satin clothes cut after the fashion of Europeans.

"We wedre as civilized as any of the Africans and far more so than any of our neighbors in the interior.

"I used to spend much of my time in Pernambuco, for there the ships came in. Often a European warship lay in the bay, and I loved to look on the strange people. There were no wharves at Pernambuco—only the bare, sandy beach—and they had to carry everything out of the boats on to the shore. One day when I was in Pernambuca, Captain Wilson, of the brig No-Name, an English vessel, owned by Welsh Brothers, of Manchester, asked me if I would like to go to Liverpool. I was a young fool, of course, and said yes. The captain knew my father well, and knew I was the prince, so he took me off on board and they hoisted sail and started away. I can remember that I cried when I saw the vessel leaving and tried to get overboard to swim ashore.

"When we got to Liverpool, Captain Wilson took me to student Douglass, who was agent of Welsh Brothers, and told him that I was the son of the King of Kabinda. Mr. Douglass showed me to one of the Messrs. Welsh and he took me to his home in Manchester, where his wife sent me to school. But I had no mind for learning and soon ran away and found my way back to the vessel. Captain Wilson was getting ready to go to the South Coast of Africa and he shipped me as cook, giving me $10 a month, for I had learned to make bread, boil coffee and was generally useful. I wanted him to take me back to Kabinda, because my father knew nothing of my leaving, but the ship never went there and I never got back.

NIAGARA FALLS ARE WEARING.

Days Are Coming When Its Grandeur Shall Have Passed Forever.

Recent breaks in the rock edge of the Canadian or Horseshoe fall, over which by far the larger part of the Niagara river waters are precipitated have tended still further to give the fall a rounded instead of an angular outline. This result of the breaking down of the rock has been observed for about ten years, and the Horseshoe fall is gradually again approaching again the shape that suggested its name. It may be expected from decade to decade, slightly to change in appearance, and in the course of an ordinary lifetime the change in the position of the fall is considerable.

The brink of Niagara falls was mapped in 1844 by James Hall, who established bench marks that have been connected, within the past few years, with the latest surveys. As Dr. Gilbert has pointed out, the comparison of Hall's bench marks with those recently established show that in the middle of the Horseshoe fall the brink is retrograding at the rate of four or five feet a year. On the other hand the American fall, which carries a much thinner sheet of water, is receding so slowly that its rate is concealed by errors of survey.

These facts show the futility of the efforts some geologists have made to determine approximately the time it has taken the falls to cut the gorge of the Niagara river back from Lake Ontario to its present head. Just as there is a wide difference at present between the rates of retrogression of the American and Horseshoe falls, so the rate of cutting has varied greatly at different times because the conditions have not been uniform. The rock bed that is wearing away is not so thick in some places as in others and the volume and consequently the force of the water may have varied largely, for there is some reason to believe that the waters of Lakes Superior, Huron and Michigan may once have had an outlet through the Ottawa river to the St. Lawrence. There is thus reason to distrust any geologic chronology based upon modern measurements of the retrogression of Niagara falls.

We know at least that the drainage of about one-thirtieth part of the area of the United States pours over these falls and that the volume of water is 275,000 cubic feet in a second. The day is coming when the grandeur of Niagara will vanish, but many generations will live and die before the electrical companies now operating in the neighborhood of Goat Island will need to move their works further up stream.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Com-

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" asked the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like, ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

Mrs. Lily Heckert, of Bartlesville, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ty., writes: "I had prolapsus, or female weakness, so badly that at times I could not be turned in bed. I suffered from palpitation of the heart. I would often faint away, and it seemed as if I never would recover; had sick headache nearly all the time, and also had St. Vitus's Dance. At the commencement of the monthly period the misery would be so great that I would be nearly crazy. I had doctored with five different physicians, but they did me no good. One of these doctors, of forty years' experience, said to me, 'I can't do you any good, so why not try Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?' I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce and described my troubles. He wrote me a nice fatherly, kind letter in reply, and I followed his advice.

"Life is a pleasure to me now, instead of a burden as it was before. Three of my neighbor women have used Dr. Pierce's medicines and it has helped them all. I will take no other medicine but Dr. Pierce's and I recommend it to all my friends. The 'Favorite Prescription' helped me so much I always keep it in the house. I also have the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser and think it is a great book. I am willing to answer any letters of inquiry if stamps are enclosed for reply."

Her Neighbors.

Dr. R. V. Pierce is and for over thirty years has been, chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. Thousands of women have written to him describing their symptoms, and, on following the advice he gives freely, have become well, strong and happy. Many sensitively modest women write to Dr. Pierce and so avoid the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so generally insisted upon by physicians. Dr. Pierce's medicines cure you in the privacy of your home, and Mrs. Heckert's case is only one of thousands that have been cured after the doctors failed.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

PAINTING THE TOWN RED.

A Rowdy Drunk Who Caused Considerable Excitement Before Arrest.

On Saturday evening about eight o'clock a young man named Aaron McNaughton, hailing from Young's Point was in a helplessly drunk condition and drove a team and wagon up the railway track, between Smith and Antrim streets, he then procedde to George street, singing and shouting astride of a coal oil barrel. On reaching London street, he entered Alexander's grocery store and insisted on paying a bill he had paid two hours previously. It was with great difficulty that Mr. Alexander persuaded him to leave the store as the man showed a disposition to be quarrelsome. On making his exit he proceeded to entertain the neighbours with sundry snatches of well known songs, and flourishing a wad of bills challenged inspection as to his financial status. A crowd soon gathered on the sidewalk, and a well disposed citizen, seeing his utter incapability of reaching home in safety with the team, telephoned the police station that it would be a charity to come and take him in. Constable Stewart promptly responded, and on arriving on the scene found McNaughton engaged in a pugilistic encounter with a well-known resident of the north end, whom he viciously attacked when politely requested to clear the path and allow people to pass. The intoxicated man also showed fight to the constable, who had to draw his baton before securing him. McNaughton's team was taken to Leary's livery and himself to the station, where he remained till yesterday morning, when the chief allowed him to return home, on the understanding that he appears before Magistrate Dumble on Friday morning.

Wedding Stationery.

We have just received direct from New York a large stock of Crane's wedding stationery. Invitations printed to order in the latest styles. Also, wedding cake boxes of latest designs. The Times job rooms make a specialty of printing at home cards—the very best and nobbiest patterns.

Gold Lake Party Safe.

Deer are said to be very plentiful this year. Mr Brightman returned on Saturday from the hunt and stated that his party had secured two deer. The Eastwood party, Buckhorn, had nine deer to their credit. Word has reached town from the Gold Lake party that deer is plentiful there and that the buttermilk tank was still holding out. It is whispered around the Snowden House that in the event of the tank running out one of these days, the party will abandon their position, and make for the nearest shelter. Hurry orders have been received however, for a fresh supply, so that there is some hope that the lives of the party will be saved.

Street Expenditure.

The Times would like to know how much money was spent on the streets this year, exclusive of paving. We understand that most of the street work is going into debentures. If so, it is contrary to the wishes of a majority of the ratepayers, and may also be contrary to law.

A Coming Event.

Walter McRaye humorist and Shakespearian reader, will give an evening's entertainment in the Y M G A on Monday Nov. 20th, under the auspices of the Y W C A.

An Honor to Our Town.

Peterborough has had an additional honor conferred upon it by the appointment of Mr C Fessenden, M A Principal of the Collegiate Institute, a member of the Ontario Educational Council. The duties of this body are to superintend Departmental and University examinations, to appoint examiners and associate examiners and to advise the Minister of Education on educational matters generally. In discharge of his duties Mr Fessenden is associated with the leading University professors and educationalists of the province. It is needless to say that the duties to which Mr Fessenden has been assigned will be performed to the highest satisfaction of the council and of the public generally.

The Grand Central Property.

Now that the property comprising the Grand Central Hotel has changed hands, there is considerable conjecture as to what the Central Canada Loan and Savings Co. will do with it. In conversation with the local manager a short time ago, The Times was informed that it would be turned into first-class stores. The company, we believe, has been considering the advisability of cutting an arcade through to the rear, and constructing an opera house behind. The chief objection to this is that space for one store would have to be sacrificed to give an entrance. The company now have a number of vacant stores on its hands, so that the construction of new stores is not altogether desirable. One thing is assured, the property will no longer be used as a hotel.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Dr Rose, dentist, late of Peterborough, has refurnished the rooms lately occupied by Dr Devitt, at Norwood, and is doing business in that place.

Mr Alex Gardner, of Dummer, has leased his farm for a term of years and purposes in the near future taking up residence near Stony Lake.

Three lanterns were taken by parties from town from the shed at Union hall, river road, on Tuesday night. Owners will be glad to get them back, and if left at P Connal and Co's store will be forwarded.

Mr J W Blair, of Orillia, district manager for McCaffery & Farewell, of Oswego, buyers of telegraph poles, has resigned his position to enter the service of the Spanish River Pulp Co., comprising Messrs McCormick & McLeod and other well-known lumbermen, who intend operating upon a large scale.

Haliburton Co. is to have a new lumbering firm. Mr. Wm Carter, of Orillia, a well-known clothing traveller, has entered into partnership with Messrs Hudson and Byron Bucknam, Severn Bridge, in the purchase of a thirty-five mile limit in Nightingale township, in the extreme north-eastern section of the county, adjoining Nipissing district. A gang of 30 men went in this week to commence operations.

There was no sesion of the police court Saturday.

The organization meeting of the Peterborough Butter Board will be held in the Town Council Chamber on Wendesday morning, November 15th.

The 57th Battalion Band is preparing an excellent programme, which it intends putting on at a concert to be given in the market hall at an early date.

Before leaving town, Lt.-Col Montizambert, inspector of militia stores, inspected the stores of "C" Squadron, Third Dragoons. He highly complimented Captain Johnston on the condition in which everything was found.

Three lady's handkerchiefs which were lost at the ball, are in possession of Mr Crene at the Ontario Bank.

The new electric power house on the Dickson Company's raceway, is fast nearing completion, and it is only a matter of a short time until the building is ready for occupancy. The work of laying the floor is now in progress, after which the work of general fitting up will be commenced.

The Town Council will meet this evening,

Peterborough is likely to secure another industry, the name of which will not be disclosed at present.

The Auburn Power Co. will be obliged to pay a rental of one dollar per pole per annum to the town. A much better plan would be for the town to own the poles and compel all the companies to rent wire rights, and thus save disfiguring the streets with so many unsightly poles.

With more schools and newspapers those Boers will make great fellows for Britishers.

NEVER DREAMED

That Coffee Caused the Trouble.

"How to stop the use of coffee was a question.

"The doctor told me I had a coffee liver.

"I knew I was a wreck, physically and nervously, but I never dreamed that coffee was the cause of the trouble. I could not drink milk, and tea was as bad for me as coffee.

"Hot water was nauseating. I therefore turned to Postum Food Coffee, got a package and made it according to directions and found it just the thing I needed.

"Husband had no faith in it, so I made coffee for him and Postum for myself. For three years I used Postum and the change it has wrought is wonderful.

"Instead of being thin, sallow, nervous, weak and miserable, I am plump, with clear complexion, pink cheeks, and seem to have the endurance and vitality of a young woman of twenty, although I am twice that age. Husband, after seeing the change Postum has made, finally asked me not to make coffee for him any more, as he preferred Postum. It has been a Godsend to our family." Myra J. Tuller, 1023 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

deep. We used 4 bags of cement with his. It made good work.

Q.—What proportions were used in the surface last year?

A.—At first 2½ parts of granite to 1 part of cement. This made a good job. Then the granite got scarce and sand was introduced.

Q.—By whose instructions?

A.—Mr. Belcher knew of it. I suppose Mr. Belcher instructed me to allow it.

Q.—How much did you lay of granite without sand?

A.—About a block, I think.

Q.—Was there any explanation about the granite and cement not trowelling without sand?

A.—No. It was a question of cost.

Q.—How much sand was added at first?

A.—As much sand as there was crushed granite.

Mr. Bartlett went on to say that he did not know the size of the box in which the granite and sand for the surface were measured. 7 bags of cement were used in each batch and as he believed the proportion to be 1 of cement to 2 of granite and sand he thought they used 14 cubic ft. of cement and sand.

Q.—In one block you used all sand and cement?

A.—Yes, the block on the west side of George-st between Hunter and Simcoe-sts.

Q.—Did the mixed granite and sand make a good walk?

A.—Yes, it was apparently a good firm walk.

THIS YEAR'S WALKS.

Witness told Mr. Edwards that Ald. Langford and Mr. Hay instructed him as to the size of the boxes to be used this year on the Evans & Langford contract. For measuring the gravel for the base they use a box 5 feet by 4 feet by 12 or 14 inches deep, calculated at 3-4 of a yard. With this 3 bags of Ensign cement was used. The proportion of cement, therefore, this year was slightly less than that of last year and Ensign cement was used. Witness did not remember getting any instructions this year about the brand of cement to be used.

Mr. Bartlett stated that in the surface of the Evans & Langford contract this year they used 5 1-2 bags or cubic feet of Star cement to 18 cubic feet of granite and sand. This proportion was fixed by Ald. Langford and Mr. Hay.

Q.—Which gave you these instructions or both?

A.—Ald. Langford, particularly. In my presence he told Mr. Evans to use 5 1-2 bags of cement with the same size box for granite and sand as was used on the other contract. Mr. Hay was on the ground at the time. I do not know whether he heard or not. Ald. Langford gave these instructions to Mr. Evans. To me he said that the contractors had figured on these and the same quantities should be used as on the Sheehy contract.

Q.—What did Mr. Hay say?

A.—He gave me no special instructions. He was present and taking part in the conversation when Ald. Langford gave his instructions.

Q.—Did you object to the use of this quality?

A.—I told Mr. Hay I did not think it was right. I don't recollect that he made any answer. He was very quiet about it. The whole sum and substance is that Ald. Langford claimed the privilege of using the same quantities of Mr. Sheehy.

Q.—Did you understand that Ald. Langford was acting as an alderman or was stating the case for the contractors?

A.—I am sure I do not know. Ald. Langford was acting chairman of the Board of Works at the time and Mr. Hay was present.

Ald. Langford here asked the witness if he stated positively that he (Ald. Langford) was chairman at the time. Witness replied that he thought the date was August 7th. He heard a couple of days later that Ald. Langford had resigned his chairmanship.

Witness stated that the work on the Evans & Langford pavement appeared to be good.

Mr. Bartlett told of the two different pavements laid on London-st. from George to Water. On the north side the walk was made of granite and cement in proportions of 2 to 1. On the south side 9 cu. ft. of granite, 9 of sand and 5 1-2 of cement, the same as the Sheehy and Evans & Langford contract. The granite used on the north side was the same as was received all the time from the crusher. It was screened. There was some dust in it, as in all granite. It had particles of fine granite in it in quantity. So far as appearances go the other pavement is as good as the other. Another test was made on London-st. east of Water. 7 bags of cement was used with 18 cu. feet of granite and sand. Of this 18 cu. ft. 75 per cent. was granite and 25 per cent. sand. This test was made for Ald. McWilliams. All witness could say was that this also appeared to be good work.

Witness say one of the pieces of work taken up on Water-st. He did not examine it closely but did not think it looked very substantial. He had found a couple of hollow places in the work done under his own supervision on Dalhousie street. They would not indicate that the rest of the work was improperly done. As to the pieces that were taken up on Water-st. he supposed they were not properly united on the base. On his own work on London-st. a piece came up by the boards being pulled up while it still adhered to them but the surface there was still green, was not over two days old. Tests were also made on 30th and 31st of October.

Q.—For whom?

A.—Ald. McWilliams and Sawers.

Ald. McWilliams—"And Mr. Hay."

Mr. Dennistoun objected that both sides should be allowed to make tests on the streets. These tests should be open to one side as well as the other.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams explained that they were made not for investigating the qualities of work but for the purpose of calculating the amount of material used by Mr. Sheehy.

Mr. Dennistoun objected to all questions such as "if the contractor had done this according to the specifications" or "the letter of the specifications." These implied that the contractor had not followed the specifications and created a false impression among the newspaper readers and the public. The "specifications" or "the letter of the specifications" are that the engineer has power to make any changes he may think fit.

Mr. Bartlett stated that in the base of the pavements made on Dalhousie street Star cement and Ensign cement were used in different places. He found no apparent difference.

The total costs of the blocks on London-st. was $647. Witness could not tell the cost of each side of the street.

MR. McWILLIAMS QUESTIONED.

R. F. McWilliams questioned the witness briefly.

Granite and sand used in the pavements last year were both furnished by the town and it made no difference to the contractor who did the work which was used.

The first concrete work on the Evans Langford contract was laid on Aug. 7th. The quantities had been fixed before that.

Q.—Were you instructed by Mr. Hay and Ald. Langford both?

A.—I do not remember Mr. Hay saying anything particular but Ald. Langford claimed the privilege of doing the work the same as the other contractors.

Q.—It has been stated that Ald. Langford threatened "exposures" if they were not allowed to go on with the work?

A.—No, he did not say anything about "exposures." He did not say there would be any exposures but he said they would throw up their job and have an enquiry, or something to that effect, if they were not allowed to do the work the same as the other contractor.

In the work of London-st. where 3 parts of granite to 1 of cement the mixture worked well. It required more mixing, especially where the granite was coarser. The surface appeared to be good.

The investigation adjourned for noon.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

OUR TERMS.

Our terms are: $3 per year, when paid in advance, or $1 for 3 months, delivered to your houses in Peterborough or Ashburnham, or sent by mail.

Army of Deer Hunters.

It is estimated that 8,000 men are hunting deer in the northern woods. This is a large number, but it is quite possible the number is so great, if the licenses are taken into consideration. Estimates received by the Game Warden's department from the two hundred issuers of deer licenses show that close on five thousand sportsmen have paid them two dollars for the privilege of hunting the fleet-footed deer. Besides these five thousand, the settlers have been granted three thousand permits. This brings the number up to eight thousand, considerably ahead of previous years.

WILL RESIST AN INVASION

The Boers Have Seized Four Out of the Five Approaches to Orange Free State.

THE ORANGE RIVER BRIDGE IS IMPREGNABLE.

It Is Not Thought That They Can Prevent a British Invasion From This Strongly Fortified Point.

London, Nov. 6.—Either the Boers are committing the grave error of scattering their forces or they have far more men in the field than the most liberal estimates up to the present time have given them credit for. This reflection is the first to occur to one upon reading of their late doings on the Orange river, the boundary between the Orange Free State and Cape Colony. In order to accomplish the task the Boers appear to have set themselves, large bodies of men are necessary, and where they are coming from is a mystery unless they are part of the army which is defending the border of Natal. Should this prove the case the prediction that a British movement upon the Orange River would relieve the pressure upon General White has rapidly come to pass, for the mere threat of such a move has attracted large numbers of burghers to the locality.

import, for it implies that out of the five avenues by which the British can invade the Free State four are already in the hands of strong forces of Boers and the fifth is threatened. Aliwal North, Bethulie, Norval's Pont, Colesberg, are all towns which command bridges over the Orange River, and all are in possession of the burghers. But these places are of far less moment than the Orange River bridge, which, if reports are to be relied upon, is undermined, though still intact. The Orange River bridge, it must be remembered, is the key to the British operations. It is about 500 miles northeast of Cape Town and about 100 miles southeast of Kimberley.

The British long ago realized the importance of the position and have for weeks past been turning a strong natural battleground into an almost impregnable fort for the defence of the bridge. The bridge commands both the Free State and Cape Colony, and Colonel Kincaid, one of Kitchener's Soudan veterans, has been erecting exceedingly strong fortifications there, for it is by this route that Buller's army corps will enter Boerland unless the unforseen happens. Colonel Kincaid not long ago expressed the opinion that the bridge was too strong to be weakened by the Boers, and it is certain that any attempt to seize it will fail in face of the tremendous artillery fire which the British can direct upon the approaches. It is exceedingly doubtful that the bridge has been successfully undermined by the Boers, as in the present flooded state of the river the structure would have been swept away ere this. It is possible that an

ENGLISH ANXIETY RELIEVED.

London, Nov. 6.—An immense weight was lifted in the public mind by a brief official despatch published this morning by which the continental stories of disaster at Ladysmith were proved to be false, although the despatch itself revived the anxiety of the more timid in another direction, as it indicated that General White, instead of sitting tight and acting wholly on the defensive, as it is held in many quarters he ought to do, persists in sortieing and risking another Nicholson's Nek disaster. Generally, however, the cheery tone of the despatch showing that there is no anxiety at Ladysmith as regards the ability of the beleaguered garrison to hold its own, has an excellent effect on the country.

Not Closely Besieged.

From the fact that General White is able to take the offensive and shell a Boer camp, it seems that Ladysmith is not so closely besieged as was supposed. Not much importance, however, it attached to the shelling of the Boer laager, as the War Office has no confirmation of the story that the Orange Free Staters camp at Besters has been captured. Were this true, it might have considerable effect on the future attitude of the Orange Free State, which is not so directly concerned in the conflict as the Transvaal.

Boers Underestimated.

The irruption of Boers into Cape Colony is tending to show the British that they have greatly underestimated the forces they will have to meet, and that even General Buller's task may not be so easy as anticipated. It is becoming apparent that all the British calculations, based on population, are hopelessly at sea or there has been a very serious leakage of Dutch sympathizers from Natal and Cape Colony. Otherwise there is no accounting for the large forces of burghers reported from all directions. The War Office consequently is being urged to have more troops in readiness for all possible demands.

The evacuation of Colenso and the reported withdrawal of the British force from Stromberg are still unexplained. The former may be due either to the Boer artillery rendering the place untenable, or that pressure elsewhere, possibly at Pietermaritzburg, has necessitated the concentration at a threatened point of all available troops. It is said that if the objective of the Boers traversing Zululand was Pietermaritzburg, they ought shortly to be heard from. That the position is regarded as serious is apparent from the fact that British cruisers are hurrying to the Cape station.

With regard to Stormberg, it is claimed that if it turns out to be true that the place has been evacuated, it may either be due to the impossibility at present of providing an adequate garrison to defend such important supplies against the Boer raids, or to a change in General Buller's plans, whereby General Methuen's division will be landed at Durban to relieve General White. If the latter plan is decided on the nearest available stores are those at Stormberg, and the quickest method of making the necessary provision for an advance will be to railroad those stores to East London, whence they would reach Durban before the first troopship.

Vessels Will Coal.

A despatch from Portland says that the special service squadron has been instructed to forthwith coal for a voyage, and that no one connected with the squadron is permitted to sleep outside the port.

Advices from Cape Town, under date of November 3, says martial law has been proclaimed in the districts occupied by the British troops between the Orange River and De Aar. The Premier, Mr. W. P. Schreiner, has sent a circular to the magistrates and others warning all persons against all statements to the effect that the Parliamentary institutions and constitutional government will be lost or detrimentally affected. He adds that the proclamation of martial law is only a matter of temporary urgency in some districts, and does not cumpell the burghers of the colony to partake in the "deplorable hostilities."

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED.

Cape Town, Nov. 3.—Delayed in transmission.—A despatch from Aliwal North says there is no confirmation of the report that the Boers have gone up the river towards Herschel, twenty miles to the east, for the purpose of crossing into Cape Colony.

SORTIE FROM KIMBERLEY.

Kimberley, Oct. 31.—Delayed in transmission.—A strong reconnaissance made by Col. Scott-Turner discovered the enemy posted on a kopje. The Boers fired thirteen shells, none of which took effect and the reconnoitering party returned to Kimberley.

Deadlock in Samoa.

London, Nov. 6.—The Berlin correspondent of The Standard says the Samoan negotiations have reached a deadlock. Germany does not consider that the Gilbert and Solomon islands would adequately compensate her for waiving her claims. An agreement, however, would easily be arranged if Great Britain would cede in addition her portions of New Guinea.

Killed Near Cornwall.

Cornwall, Ont. Nov. 6.—The barge Laura, in tow of the tug Nellie Reid, was run into by the barge A.D., in tow of tug St. George, nearly Stanley Island, at 5 o'clock this morning and one man, the son of Capt. St. Denis of barge Laura, was instantly killed. He was coming up the forecastle hatchway and the force of the collision drove the hatch together, cutting the young man almost in two. The vessel is now lying aground near Stanley Island.

If Mr. Garrow is unseated that would make six elections to be held. The Government, it is conceded, will hold Peterborough, Brant and altogether likely, South Renfrew. This will make 90 seats, and taking from it the Speaker's vote, it would give the Liberals 49. If the Conservatives carried four disputed seats they would have 45 leaving a majority on Mr. Ross' side 4. But the chances are altogether in favor of the government carrying most of the bye-elections. Should they not succeed in doing so, however, things will look decidedly well for Mr. Ross. The re-election of Mr. Stratton by acclamation will have a tendency to inspire the Liberals throughout the country with confidence.

GEN. WHITE MAKES A SORTIE

Surprises the Enemy's Laager on Besten Hill and Captures Complete Equipment.

OUR MEN DO SOME GALLANT WORK IN ACTION.

Buller's First Despatch is an Encouraging One—The Boers Are Waiting for Additional Artillery.

London, Nov. 6.—The War Office issued the following at 11.40 last night;

Buller to the Secretary of State for War;

Cape Town, Nov. 5, 8.40 p.m.—The commandant at Durban sends the following, received from Ladysmith by pigeon post, dated Nov. 3.

"Yesterday Gen. French went out with cavalry and field artillery and effectively shelled the Boer laager, without loss on our side.

"Lieut. Egerton, of the Powerful is dead.

"Gen. Joubert sent in Major Kincaid, wounded on the ground. The shell-fire had punished them terribly.

"The entire camp equipment fell into the hands of the British. The scheme was well devised and brilliantly executed. It is hoped that it will considerably minimize the efficiancy of the Free State Boers to the westward.

"An artillery duel is in progress. A British shell struck a Boer 40-pounder and completely wrecked it.

STORY OF NICHOLSON'S NEK.

London, Nov. 7.—George W. Steevens, the correspondent of The Daily Mail at Ladysmith, adds to the story of the disaster to the British arms at Nicholson's Nek. He says that after an hour's fighting the Boers were reinforced by 2,000

"Thursday, 2.40 p.m.—Yesterday and last night some of the British guns were quietly placed in a better position, the naval brigade getting three of the Powerful's quick-firers on a high ridge close to the western side of the town. The Boers also dragged one of their forty-pounders to an excellent new position, and replaced their disabled guns with new ones in the old positions. They also placed a new battery on a hill four miles southwest of the town.

"Gen. White and his staff were astir before daybreak and important movements were effected. At 6.10 the bluejackets opened on the ridge where the Boers had a forty-pounder, and a furious cannonade ensued. After four hours the 40-pounder was silenced.

"Meanwhile the other batteries were bury, the British having the better of the fighting.

"Gen. French, with the Lancers, Hussars, Natal Carbineers and Border Rifles started at dawn and got within striking distance of the Boer camp on Bester's Hill before the enemy noticed them. A field battery also managed to take up a position commanding the enemy's camp without molestation. The camp was a large one, surrounded by wagons and other obstructions. Bester's Hill was well fortified, and there were good guns there.

"About nine o'clock the British opened fire. The Boers replied spiritedly, but their guns were not so well served and their fire was ineffective.

"The British fire was very good, for within a short time a 42-pound shell burst right in the midst of the camp, inflicting heavy loss and demoralizing the defenders.

"Then the cavalry suddenly charged and swept over the laager, driving everything irresistibly before them. The Boers fled precipitately, leaving many dead and of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, and nine wounded prisoners. Eight Boers were sent out in exchange, no others being fit to travel.

"Col. Brocklehurst, with cavalry, field artillery, the Imperial Light Horse and the Natal Mounted Volunteers, was engaged to-day with the enemy to the southwest of Ladysmith.

"The fighting lasted several hours. Our loss was very small.

"The bombardment of Ladysmith continued yesterday and to-day, many Boer shells being pitched into the town.

"Our troops are in good health and spirits, and the wounded are doing well."

A BRILLIANT ENGAGEMENT.

London, Nov. 6.—The following details of fighting at Ladysmith have been received; men. Both sides were careful and deliberate. The firing of the Boers was magnificent. The moment one of the British troops raised his head to see where the enemy was he fell back with a bullet through it.

Many of the Boers testify to their heavy loss, admitting practically that the whole of their firing line was shot.

After the engagement the Boers showed great kindness both to the wounded and the prisoners. This elicited the highest praise. They collected water for the British wounded and gave the blankets of the captured mules for hospital panniers.

Some of them asked the soldiers for their embroidered belts as mementos of their great victory, but were told that many of them contained money, the pay of the men. In many cases they then refrained from pressing their requests. Some of the wounded dropped their money, but the Boers would not take it. Only one attempted to loot the hospital panniers, and he was a German. The Boers, however, checked him from doing so.

The prisoners were placed aboard a train for Pretoria, but many of them managed to escape. Stragglers are coming into the British camp every day. A Catholic chaplain, Father Matthews, accompanied the prisoners to Pretoria, going of his own free will. The Boers spent the afternoon singing doleful hymns of victory under the trees. They had reason to be doleful, having lost many men.

THE BRITISH LOSSES.

Durban, Nov. 3.—Delayed in transmission.—The final figures now established of the disaster at Nicholson's Nek are as follows; Total missing of the Gloucestershire Regiment and the Royal Irish Fusiliers, [illegible]. Thirty-two of the Gloucestershire Regiment, 10 Fusiliers, and 10 batterymen were found dead on the field. One hundred and fifty were taken into Ladysmith. About 100 escaped and returned to camp.

MORE GUNS EXPECTED.

London, Monday, Nov. 6.—The general belief in London is that the Boers are now waiting for more guns from Pretoria before attacking Ladysmith. The fact that Sir Redvers Buller appears to have ordered a retirement from Stormberg, and perhaps from other places, relieves to some extent the public mind, which would have been further alarmed. Confidence is felt in any measure that Gen. Buller may deem advisable. The knowledge that the pigeon post is working has also come as a relief to the great anxiety previously felt.

The third-class cruiser Pelorus has been ordered from Gibraltar to Durban, and the third-class cruiser Fearless from Port Said to the same point.

Despatches from Cape Town and other centres in Cape Colony indicate that the Cape Dutch are becoming very restless in consequence of the continued Boer successes.

Considerable surprise is expressed at the constant bringing up of new guns by the Boers at Ladysmith.

THEY HOLD THE BRIDGES.

London, Nov. 6.—Outside of the fighting around Ladysmith, the most important news refers to the movements of the Free State Boers in the northern part of Cape Colony. While the British still hold De Aar and the Orange river bridge, the Boers have the latter undermined, though still intact, thus commanding the route from Cape Town to Kimberley. They also hold the Colesberg bridge, over which passes the main road to the Cape. They have possession of the bridge at Norval's Pont, carrying the Port Elizabeth line, and the Bethulie bridge, carrying the East London line. The Boers now seem to be pausing, but their natural objective will be the junction at Stormberg, which has already been evacuated, Naauwpoort, and De Aar. The importance of these points on which converge the railways connecting the Free State with the coast, is such that the first available troops are expected to be sent thither.

MORE ARTILLERY.

London, Nov. 6.—The fifteenth company of the Royal Garrison Artillery has been ordered to sail for South Africa next Sunday. They will take twelve howitzers and the latest pattern of lyddite shells.

COLESBERG OCCUPIED BY BOERS.

London, Nov. 6.—A special despatch from Cape Town, dated Nov. 3, says the Boers occupied Colesberg, Cape Colony, on Wednesday, meeting with no resistance from the local police, who yielded to superior force.

AUSTRALIANS ARRIVE.

Cape Town, Nov. 3.—Delayed in transmission.—The steamer Nineveh, with the New South Wales Lancers aboard, arrived here this morning. The men were given an enthusiastic reception. They embarked on a train and proceeded northward in the evening. Several of the troopers are just under age, and their parents objecting to their going on active service, cabled here demanding their discharge. The lads, to their great disgust, were detained, and will be sent back to Australia.

A Pro-Boer Discourse.

Orangeville, Nov. 5.—This town has been talking all week about a sermon preached in the Presbyterian church last Sunday by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Dickie, whose remarks have been subjected to a good deal of criticism. It was a pro-Boer discourse, and did not contain any words of friendship towards Joseph Chamberlain. Mr Dickie maintained that had strong enough efforts been put forth peace could have been obtained, but most unwise diplomacy had landed Britain into war with a weaker nation. The sermon caused a number of the congregation to leave the church before the service was concluded.

Hugo is Taking the Cure.

London, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Langtry, on learning of the circulation of reports representing that she and her husband, Hugo de Bathe, had separated, sent the following despatch to the Associated Press:—"Such rumors are preposterous. Please contradict in both our names. My husband is taking the cure at Aix and will return to London in a fortnight. We are looking forward to my American tour."

Deadly Folding Bed.

New York, Nov. 6.—Thomas Dow, a dealer in fertilizers was buried yesterday. He weighed225 pounds, and on Friday evening sat on the edge of an old-fashioned folding bed standing open in the dining-room of his house in West 46th street. The bed had been in the family for many years and was built of solid mahogany in the design of a sideboard. One of the balances at the head of the bed was missing and Mr. Dow's weight caused the bed head to fall over on him. He was caught and held in the bed. Miss Margaret Dow, his daughter, heard the crash and went into the room. She did not suppose her father was caught in the bed until she had looked through the other rooms of the house and could not find him. It took five men to unfold the bed. Mr. Dow's neck was broken. He lingered in unconsciousness until Saturday night.

GOOD SHOOTING.

Probably the war between Britain and the Boers will give the greatest impetus since the invention of gun-powder to the practice of rifle-shooting by the soldiers of standing armies.

Events so far make the fact more palpable than ever that other advantages in war combined are hardly enough to offsett good shooting. To the latter alone the Boers owe it that their comparatively unorganized levies can put half the number of British soldiers in peril. Courage, physical strength and endurance and able generalship all would not enable the Boers to make a formidable campaign against British regulars but for their deadly marksmanship, by which apparently they are able to so harass and hem in the British as to force them to attacks which are costly in lives, are liable to be accompanied by dangerous mistakes and fail to secure permanent advantages.

The tradition and habit of armies is drill. Ammunition is expensive, so instead of practising their soldiers half an hour a day in shooting, and picking out the best to form corps of sharp-shooters who could deal effectively with any enemy in any sort of country or cover, the leading military powers devote most of their attention to drill. That is all very well when your enemy relies on drill too, so that in war large bodies on each side shall stand up to each other to be shot at comfortably or charged solidly. But if your enemy fails to fight that way, if he flits about from cover to cover, taking snap shots at favorable opportunities, exposing himself to the return fire as little as possible—ready to shoot and run when charged, but ready to get back and shoot some more after the charge is over—if your enemy is of that kind, and occupies a rough and difficult country whether among the African Kopjes or the Afghan hills or the Northwest coulees as in the rebellion of the Metis in our own country, it is likely to take a greatly superior force in numbers, even of disciplined troops, to settle the matter. History has often told this story; we in Canada got a strong taste of it at Fish Creek, Cut Knife and Batoche, not so long ago.

There are two terms of service in the British army. The long term is twelve years. The short term is seven years, with five years afterwards in the reserve. Every man who enlists in the British army thus must spend at least seven years in the service, unless he buys himself out. Only men under 25 years of age are taken in the infantry. In seven years, with reasonable practice, any young man could be made a good rifle shot. In much less than seven years with faily practice or something approaching it, an average youth could be made a first-class shot, probably better than the average Boer. It would be expensive, perhaps costs more than the man's pay does, but according to Lord Roberts, the greatest of living British soldiers, one good shot is worth half a dozen bad ones—the paying policy, if a nation could not go the whole hog, would be to have fewer soldiers and make them better shots.

A moral for Canada exists in this. Our volunteers are required to drill twelve days or so each year, and to practise at the targets once a year. The drill is none too much, but the required shooting is awfully too little to make decent troops. In most city battalions, the companies of their own accord get up a little extra target practice, but the compulsory shooting is confined to one day each year, and that is all most of the militia battalions gets, if they get any. Then take the case of our volunteer cavalry—most have carbines but they get no practice at all. The chances are that most of our volunteers could not hit a mark a quarter of a mile distant in full view once in ten tries. If it is worth our national while to spend money to prepare for self-defence like free men if necessary, and most assuredly it is, more should be spent on the promotion of good shooting.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Ellsler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondanes, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 98 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one-third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the [illegible] for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackay, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

POULTRY POINTERS.

Impure water in summer often causes disease among poultry.

The objection to late hatched fowls is the danger of their being stunted.

Poultry matures within a year and is easily changed in any of its characteristics.

Irregular feeding invites derangement of the digestive organs and often causes disease.

In nearly all cases the male imparts the color. When white males are used all the chickens will be white.

Generally, ground bone is one of the best forms in which to give lime to the laying hens when they need it.

By using milk instead of water in mixing the soft feed for fowls it serves both for moisture and nourishment.

One advantage in favor of the white breeds is that the pin feathers do not show so plainly as in the black plumaged birds.

Cornmeal does not contain all the essential elements of growth, and for this reason chickens often die off when fed upon [illegible]

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and dance up in threes and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. BISHOP VS. WARDENS

The Bishop of Toronto Opposes Mr. de Soyres

FOR RECTOR OF ST. JAMES'

Will Not Appoint Him to Succeed the Late Bishop Sullivan.

Regarding the Refusal, It Looks as if a Split is Imminent—Mr. de Soyres the Congregation's Choice—Wardens Surprised at the Decision.

Toronto, Nov. 4.

To the church wardens and lay representatives of St. James' Cathedral, this important document was addressed under Friday evening's date :—

My Dear Sirs,—I beg her by officially to acquaint you that it is my fixed and final intention, as I have intimated to you on many occasions, not to appoint the Rev. J. de Soyres to the rectory of St James' cathedral. I am,

Yours very truly,
ARTHUR TORONTO.

This announcement amazed many leading officials of the congregation, as the feeling had been general that the Bishop would appoint Rev. Mr. de Soyres, of St. John, New Brunswick, who had been named by the committee, and who, it is said, was the unanimous choice of the congregation.

But to Bishop Sweatman's mind this is not the case, as he stated this morning when seen at his office, that half the congregation would leave the church should Mr. de Soyres be appointed. Asked for his reason for opposing the appointment of the St. John divine, the Bishop replied that he was not prepared to answer the query, but stated that he had opposed Mr. de Soyres' nomination from the time it was made in February last until the present.

"Some of the congregation have been trying to force my hand in this matter. The newspapers have stated Mr. de Soyres had been appointed, and I have made this statement in order to contradict these reports."

"Are you not opposing the views of the congregation" the Bishop was asked.

"No," he replied, "one-half of the congregation would leave the church were Mr. De Soyres chosen."

"Well, when will you make an appointment, Bishop Sweatman ?"

"Just as soon as those who are advocatitg Mr. De Soyres learn that his selection is impossible. Then we can meet and discuss the matter. But a new rector will likely be appointed at an early date."

'The Rev. Forbes Winslow, of St. Leonards-on-the-Sea, is a candidate for the vacancy, is he not, your Lordship"

"Yes, he is," the Bishop responded, "but I want it understood he is not my candidate, and anyway it is not possible that he will be chosen."

Rather astounded men the church-wardens and lay representatives were found to be when informed of the Bishop's decision, which had not reached any of them at noon. Neither of the churchwardens had received any information along this line, and they had expected to have a meeting with the Bishop in regard to Mr. De Soyer's appointment to-night. All the members of the congregation seen declared that at least 90 per cent of the St. James' congregation favored Mr. De Soyre's appointment.

"It is a most extraordinary course on the part of the Bishop to inform a reporter of such an important decision, and not convey it to the officials of the cathedral first." This was the statement of Mr James Scott, one of the wardens.

Mr. A. S. Irving, the other warden, had not received any official intimation, and expressed his great surprise at the Bishop's announcement and the course he had followed in giving it publicity.

SILER ON THE FIGHT.

The Best Man Won Jeffries Outpointed Sharkey Throughout.

New York, Nov. 4.—In an interview to-day Referee George Siler said:—"Jeffries received the decision over Sharkey because I thought he had the better of the fight.

"Sharkey put up a great fight, but he was out-generalled by Jeffries. The champion fought a clean cut battle. Jeffries outpointed throughout the fight, with the exception of a few rounds. Sharkey at times was aggressive and led often, but many of his blows went wild. Aggressiveness is not the only thing that figures in a contest. Sharkey's blows, which may have appeared to land on Jeffries, went wide of the mark. The champion blocked Sharkey's leads repeatedly. Jeffries altogether fought a cleverer fight and every blow landed by him was clean and effective. Sharkey, in his desire to win, resorted to questionable tactics. It was the greatest heavyweight fight I have ever seen, and I think it will be a long time before such another battle takes place. Both men showed gameness and their endurance was almost marvellous."

London is Isolated.

London, Nov. 4.—This city is unprecedently isolated to-day, so far as telegraphic communication is concerned, the wires being down in every direction. Consequently no details of the damage wrought by the storm have reached here except from Helensborough, where a number of houses were unroofed and chimneys blown down. A violent storm has been prevailing since midnight along the south coast of Ireland. The wind, which is from the south-west, has raised enormous seas. No vessel has attempted to leave Queenstown harbor to-day, many are running in seeking shelter. The workmen in the naval yard on Haulbowline Island, three quarters of a mile south of Queenstown, have been unable to get to the city. No casualties have been reported, but many are expected owing to the exceptional fury of the gale.

Dynamite Explosion.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Five hundred lbs. of dynamite exploded in the mixing house of the Aetna Powder Works at Aetna, Ind., to-day, resulting in the death of two employees.

THE KAISER'S NIGHTMARE.

In It He Sees the American Navy Aiding Britain.

London, Nov. 4.—The rumors of a continental anti-British coalition continue to occupy the French papers. Referring to the alleged Anglo-American understanding, said to be the outcome of the Hispano-American war, the Figaro says :—

"The Washington Cabinet is convinced that, had it not been for the resolute action of Great Britain, the McKinley Administration would have had to face a European coalation in Spain's behalf, to deprive the United States of the fruits of victory. The English played so well on this string that at the present moment, if Europe did not remain in a position of strict neutrality, it would not be long before a United States fleet showed its flag on the eastern and southern coasts of Africa. This is the Kaiser's nightmare, and it will be used as an argument in favor of the increase in the German navy. The English hope that the increase may be made, with the view of the conclusion of an alliance between Great Britain, the United States and Germany.

Mr. Latchford Nominated.

Renfrew, Nov. 4.—At the Liberal convention yesterday Hon. F. R. Latchford was formally chosen to represent the Liberals, against T. J. McGarry, the Conservative nominee. Mr Latchford made a speech telling how the Government had called him from the ranks of the people. He paid a high tribute to the retiring Premier and Hon. Wm. Harty. Mr. Latchford said he would do his very best. He wanted no machine politics in South Renfrew, but wanted to make a clean contest of it, and he felt he could win. Several other speeches were made.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the faltering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all manly power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.

BO

Stimulants and Purgatives can not cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will

Every bottle of this universal blood maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evident sickness tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. CO BO, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries fuel and strength to every tissue, and gives back health where once lurked death. VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 26 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign.—Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics who is a professor of politics, she will not experiment with Grover Cleveland, but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt Quay.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

> the mournful crocodile
> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
> —"2, Henry VI.," 1, 228.
> —"Poet's Lore."

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Phila

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wuz when I married her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with care or somethin will be spilled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit if I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves pertickeler on, fer they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin fer the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wuz comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wuz fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wuz comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wuz.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist sared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there fer a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wuz that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wuz, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wuz dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idea that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wuz killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wuz chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wuz, and so wuz Mandy, fer before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wuz up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wuz ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wuz in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wuz only what any wife ought to do fer her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on [illegible]

The man who has lost a leg on the field of battle may find a fairly serviceable substitute in a crutch or a wooden leg, but the man whose lungs have been invaded by the deadly germs of consumption must act promptly or give up all hope.

There is no substitute for a destroyed lung, and there is no hope for lungs that are crippled, save in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Although sweet to the taste it contains no syrup or sugar, which so often disagrees with the dyspeptic stomach. It contains no alcohol to inebriate or create morbid craving for stimulants. It is the only known medicine that, acting through the blood, will build new and healthy lung tissues. It builds up the lungs because it builds up the whole body. It endows a man with the appetite of a football player. It puts strength and muscle into the stomach and intestines, and causes the digestive juices to flow freely. It fills the blood with the elements that build up every organ and tissue of the body. It turns diseased lung tissue into healthy tissue by aiding nature in her own process of tearing down and rebuilding. It cures bronchitis, weak lungs, bleeding from lungs and lingering coughs. It prevents consumption by curing the weakness that leads up to it. Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Below is one of the thousands who have testified to these facts.

Abram Freer, Esq., of Rockbridge, Greene Co., Ills., writes: "My wife had a severe attack of pleurisy and lung trouble; the doctors gave her up to die. She commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she began to improve from the first dose. By the time she had taken eight or ten bottles she was cured, and it was the cause of a large amount being sold here. I think the 'Golden Medical Discovery' is the best medicine in the world for lung trouble. My wife is now using the 'Favorite Prescription' for 'turn of life.'"

Feel cranky? Case of constipation. A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 60 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

OBITUARY.

AN OLD RESIDENT GONE.

The death occurred on Sunday last in Ashburnham of Mary Davis, relict of the late Absolom Ingram. Mrs. Ingram has for seven years been a confirmed invalid, having been a victim of paralysis, which was ultimately the cause of her death. Deceased about forty years ago married her late husband, who predeceased her about four years ago. She was a devoted member of St. Luke's church and held in high esteem by all who knew her. The funeral will take place from the family residence to-day at 2.30 o'clock.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN GRIER.

D. T. Sample, President of Sample's Instalment Company, Washington, Pa., writes—"For years I was afflicted with chronic catarrh. Remedies and treatment by specialists only gave me temporary relief until I was induced to use Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. It has proved the one good thing in my case. In almost an instant after I had made the first application I had relief, and a little perserverance in its use entirely rid me of this offensive malady. I would be glad to personally recommend it to any and everybody." Sold by Ormond & Walsh & H. S. McDonald.

Our Go-lorious Ozone.

This is the way our talanted contemporary, the Bob. Ind. refers to the curative qualities of the Kawartha Lakes : Mr McIntosh and family left on Thursday for their home in Toronto, after a stay of five months, on Pigeon Lake, at Port Harvey, occupying one of the summer cottages of Dr McCamus. When Mr McIntosh came here five months ago, to summer on the Kawatha Lakes, he was a very sick man. The walk from the wharf to the Post Office was as much as he could manage. After a few weeks breathing the invigorating ozone and vitalising argon of the Lakes, he commenced putting on flesh, and since the opening of the shooting season he has been able to spend two or three hours a day, scrambling through the woods partridge hunting and enjoy it. During the regular holiday season Mr McIntosh had quite a settlement of his Toronto friends at Port Harvey, and they had a tremendously jolly time all returning to sing the praises of Kawartha. During the winter months Mr McIntosh will visit California, and next June he will return again to the shore of Pigeon Lake where all a man has to do is to breathe the gelorious air of heaven, and let his hide expand.

BOARD OF WORKS.

Ald McWilliams presented the following report :

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows :

1. Your Board instructed the Town Engineer to proceed with the construction of a timber bridge over the creek on Donegal street and authorized him to employ Mr W J Martin to superintend the work, and recommend that the work be paid for on the certificate of the Engineer.

2. Your Board also instructed the Engineer to have the wall of the bridge over the creek on Reid street repaired.

3. Your Board recommend that the Town Solicitor be instructed to take proceedings against the Grand Trunk Railway Company to compel them to rebuild the bridge over the creek on Smith street.

4. Your Board recommend that whereas no attention has been paid by Messrs Sheehy & Dolan to the letter sent them Sept. 22nd last, that they be notified to reconstruct the sidewalk on Charlotte street on the south side from George street west 115 feet and on the north side of the creek, at their expense, at once, and that if it is not done at once such neglect will be considered a refusal on their part and that proceedings under the contract will be taken by the town.

5. That Ald Langford be given permission to open Brock street to construct a drain from St. John's church.

6. That the Town Engineer be instructed to build a house to cover the steam road roller on the west side of lot 8 north of London and of George streets, to be an average distance at least 50 feet from Aylmer and London streets.

7. Your Board recommend that the Auburn Power Co. pay a pole rental for poles on the streets of $1 per pole per annum from Jan. 1st, 1900, to Dec. 31st, 1903, unless the average rental per pole paid by the Peterborough Light and Power Co. is over $1 per pole in which case the Auburn Power Co. shall pay for each pole the same as the average paid by the Peterborough Light & Power Co.

8. Your Board recommend that the Town Engineer be authorized to fix walls and entrances to floor of buildings where necessary where the sidewalks have been lowered or raised.

9. That no action be taken on the request of Mr G S Matthews regarding the Dalhousie street bridge.

10. Your Board recommend that crossings be put in on George street at the north side of Dublin street and the north side of London street, that the crossing on George street at Dalhousie street be repaired, that the sidewalk on Water street from Dublin to Argyle streets be repaired, and that the bridge on Walnut street and the sidewalk on Crescent street from Romaine streets be repaired, and that a crossing and sidewalk be put in on Barnardo avenue to Mrs Curtin's.

11. Your Board also recommend that the Town Engineer be instructed to put in a catch basin on the west side of George street at the corner of McDonnel street.

Ald. McWilliams, moved, seconded by Ald. Sawers,—That clause 10 of report be amended by providing that the crossing be put on George street at south side of Dublin and that the one on the south side be repaired.—Carried.

Considerable discussion was here indulged in as to the advisability of providing for additional catch basins, which only resultde in the report being adopted as amended.

Miscellaneous.

Sale for Taxes Postponed.

A by-law to extend the time for holding sale of land for arrears of taxes until after October 1st, 1900, passed its several readings.

Bogue's Account.

Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. Denne,—That James Bogue be paid $50 for removing a tree from Gilmour street and that he be paid the balance coming to him on his sewer contract, provided he accepts this amount for removing the tree and provided further that his sureties sign an agreement drafted by the town solicitor agreeing that he should be so paid, and that the account of the town against Mr. Bogue for sewer pipe be deducted from these payments.—Carried.

A Question of Authority.

Ald. E. H. D. Hall, moved, seconded by Ald. Langford,—That the town engineer be instructed to report in writing under whose authority he put in the catch basins at corner of Water and London streets, and Water and McDonnel streets, and also why he has not had those formerly authorized by the council attended to.—Carried.

Dickson Co. vs. Town.

Ald. Best moved, seconded by Ald. McNeill,—That the town engineer furnish a full report at the next regular meeting of this council of all the broken stone loaned the Dickson company from Oct. 1st, 1898 to Oct. 1st, 1899, and how much if any, broken stone has been returned. —Carried.

Contract vs. Day Labor

And. E. H. D. Hall, moved, seconded by Ald. Neill,—That the town engineer be instructed to report to the council the cost per foot of granolithic pavements built under the superintendence of Mr. Rose and Mr. Bartlett, giving a separate price for each street, and not including cost of taking up old sidewalks or repairing boulevards, or any work that contractors have not done, giving items.—Carried.

After a Grant.

Messrs. Wm. Collins and R. H. Leary, representing the Peterborough Poultry Association, addressed council as to what financial support they may expect from the town towards defraying expenses in connection with the coming poultry exhibition. They claimed that the show would attract a large number of people to town, and thought they were as equally entitled to a pretty substantial grant as other associations.

Ald. McWilliams thought they should be allowed $50 to defray cost of printing.

Ald. Neil favored a grant of $100.

Ald. Langford moved that the matter be referred to a committee of the whole council.—Carried.

The New Alderman.

On motion of Alds. Sawers and McWilliams that Ald. Weir's name be placed on all committees upon which ex-Ald. Davidson acted.—Carried.

Council then adjourned.

Mr E R Wood of Toronto, was in town over Sunday.

Miss Wade of Lindsay, is visiting Mrs R E McKee, of Smith.

Miss Nellie Bertram of Toronto, has been the guest of the Misses Hall, Stewart street, for the past week.

Miss Ridley, of Bowmanville, who has been visiting Miss Stethem, Ashburnham, for the past few weeks, has returned home.

Mr Chas Dawson, mechanical superintendent of the Dominion Bridge Co., Montreal, is in town for a few days visiting his family.

Captain R A Cockburn, late adjutant of the Third Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons, left yesterday per C P R, for Montreal, where he will take the steamer California for London, England. Captain Cockburn will then join his regiment, and may go to the Transvaal. In Captain Cockburn's departure from Canada the 3rd Dragoons loses a most valuable officer, and his position as adjutant will indeed be hard to fill.

WHAT IS PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND ?

It Means Life, Health, Strength and Freedom from Disease

Paine's Celery Compound, so popular with the people, is the one remedy that can be trusted to make a person well.

It stops the drain on the nervous system, dispels the harmful humors from the blood, and increases its volume and its nourishing capacity.

Its ability to relieve those ailments that seem to be peculiarly the misfortune of women is overwhelmingly proved by the many testimonials from women of the highest standing in the comunities where they live.

Its regulating power does away with "disheartened and cast-down feelings."

The aggravated causes of disordered liver and kidneys, mental depression, hysteria and kindred troubles, are recognized and dealt with by Paine's Celery Compound in a radical and scientific manner that embodies the most advanced medical ideas of this latter part of the century.

Paine's Celery Compound strengthens the stomach when it is irritable and inclined to indigestion, and prevents dyspepsia ; it relieves palpitation of the heart that results from irregular nerve supply to that vital organ, and puts new life into the entire nervous system.

Persons in sound health are not continually reminded of their heart, stomach or liver by distress of these organs. Whenever languor or pain attack the body there is no question as to the urgent need of strengthening the health by Paine's Celery Compound. Women in trying occupations, not only housewives, but saleswomen, teachers, book-keepers and others penned up for long hours behind desks and counters, will find their health and strength greatly improved by the use of Paine's Celery Compound.

A soundly nourished nervous system and a rich, pure blood supply brought about by Paine's Celery Compound are the best bulwark against such diseases as debility and impoverishment as rheumatism, neuralgia, headache and sleeplessness. This great invigorator, in addition to curing these diseases, builds up the system and prevents the disease from gaining a lodgement in the body.

When one hears it confidently declared by as many well-known and representative men and women everywhere that Paine's Celery Compound positively and permanently cures diseases that at first glance seem so remote from each other as chronic constipation, hysteria and nervousness, inquiry into these diseases shows that their common origin is a rundown, exhausted nervous system and vitiated blood, and Paine's Celery Compound builds up the one and purifies and strengthens the other.

TRIUMPH FOR THE BRITISH

The Boer Forces Meet With Most Disastrous Defeat at Ladysmith.

AND TWO THOUSAND BOERS ARE PRISONERS.

Cavalry Scores a Triumph and Infantry Does Great Execution With the Bayonet—Gordon Highlanders' Brave Rush.

London, Nov. 7.—A Cape Town despatch says that as fast as troops land they are sent away by rail, but their destination is kept secret.

London, Nov. 7.—To-day's despatches from Pietermaritzburg indicate that there is some big news of hard fighting at Ladysmith trying to get through to the coast. New companies of volunteers are mobilizing here and going to the front.

London, Nov. 7.—It is announced in a special despatch from Cape Town dated Sunday, Nov. 5, morning, that the British have been victorious in an engagement at Ladysmith, and that the Boer loss was very heavy, including two thousand prisoners.

London, Nov. 7.—A powerful double battery of twelve mortars leaves Portsmouth to-morrow, obviously for the reduction of the strong Boer positions. These independent field mortar batteries are a part of the implements of the first army corps.

Pietermaritzburg, Natal, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 4.—The general commanding says the line of communication north of Estcourt is entirely stopped.

Later, evening—The British forces at Ladysmith, it now appears, were engaged twice successfully on Thursday and on Friday. It is reported that the cavalry scored heavily and that the infantry did great execution with bayonets, the Gordon Highlanders carrying the principal Boer position at the point of the bayonet. The Boers lost heavily in killed and wounded, and a number surrendered.

Cape Town, Saturday, Nov. 4.—Afternoon.—A despatch from Ladysmith says that on Thursday afternoon the British cavalry charged the Boers while the latter were manoeuvering south of the town, and cut their way through them.

"Long Tom," posted on Bulwin Hill, shelled the town, but little damage was done. The naval gunners put the big gun situated on Hepworth's Hill out of action.

The enemy at Groblers Kloof engaged a company of the Royal Irish Fusiliers and brisk firing occurred on both sides. An armoured train with sixty infantrymen on board drew the enemy's fire enabling the volunteers to make headquarters safely. The military are eulogized for their timely help to the volunteers.

London, Nov. 7.—A special from De Aar says: A Frenchman who has arrived here from Kimberley says that the Boers stopped him twice, but released him on account of his nationality. The Boers tried to bribe him to give information regarding the force and resources of the British at Kimberley, but he refused to tell them anything. He says the British have only a few thousand men at Kimberley, while the Boers have at least four thousand.

Aliwal North, Saturday, Nov. 4.—A Boer commando is now located at Governor's Drift up the river, and it is reported to be about to cross into the Colony, probably to join the Bethulie burghers now in the colony. The natives are greatly excited in the district near the drift. Many Basutos have been discovered to possess assegais and guns, where none of the weapons were known to be previously.

EXPLOSION AT KIMBERLEY.

Hope Town, Cape Colony, Saturday, Nov. 4.—A despatch which has been received here from Kimberley, dated Nov. 1, says... Apparently the Boer reinforcements from Mafeking have arrived, as the burghers are more numerous and closer all around Kimberley. About 1,200 of them made a demonstration three miles eastward at Premier Mine to-day and opened fire on the De Beers carts, but no damage was done. The explosion of the dynamite magazine caused by the Boers firing the plain was terrific. The huts contained 35 tons of dynamite valued at £2,500.

All the wounded are progressing satisfactorily.

A committee to regulate the supply and price of food is being formed.

Mr. Rhodes is making an avenue a mile long at Kenilworth, to be called Siege avenue. A double row of orange trees and vines will be planted on either side with pepper trees forming the back ground.

THE VELDT ON FIRE.

London, Nov. 7.—The Daily Mail publishes the following despatch from Kimberley, dated Wednesday, by way of Hopetown, Saturday, Nov. 4.—"This morning the Boers fired the veldt near Dronfield, seven miles from Kimberley, and this afternoon the flames set on fire the smaller of the two magazines, exploding the dynamite with a terrific report. Fortunately no one was injured. The veldt is still burning and it is feared that the larger magazine, where there are 1,200 cases of dynamite, will be ignited."

NOT A CRUSHING BLOW.

London, Nov. 7.—Such scanty intelligence as is filtering from the front is generally accepted here as re-assuring, although the latter reports agree that the fighting outside Ladysmith on Thursday and Friday was much more severe than indicated by the official accounts. There is no longer such a disposition to jump at the conclusion that crushing blow has been inflicted on the Boers as was shown before. British contempt for the burghers has been chastened by defeat. The best-informed are inclined to discount the stories of the cutting up of the Boers until further confirmation is received. But the mere fact that General White was enabled to undertake a series of successful re-connaisances is taken as an indication that the grip of the Boer investment has been relaxed by the withdrawal of a portion of General Joubert's force southward. While, however, the anxiety in regard to the immediate stress of Ladysmith is alleviated, there is a widespread fear that the authorities are blundering and may find, too late, that the main expedition will prove too weak to complete its task with safety and despatch, as the Natal force has already admittedly failed to perform what was expected of it. The confession yesterday evening of General Lord Wolseley, the Commander-in-Chief that the Boers were more powerful and more numerous than had been anticipated, sufficiently explains the present happenings, and the War Office will hereafter have awkward questions to answer in regard to its apparent colossal ignorance of the Boer strength, which, both in number of men and excellence of artillery is apparently a complete surprise to the British military authorites. Mail news from South Africa show how inaccurate have been the estimates of the Intelligence Department and the Government experts.

The Boer Forces.

It is gleaned therefrom that a fair estimate of the Boer forces is as follows: Around Ladysmith, 25,000; traversing Zululand, 4,000; advancing on Burghersdorp, 5,000; Colesberg, 3,000; Kimberley, 7,000; Mafeking, 4,000, and on the northern Transvaal border, 2,000.

Exact information about the Boer artillery is lacking, but it is known that General Joubert's detachment, before it was reinforced, consisted of 16 Krupp field pieces of the latest pattern and two heavy Cruesot siege guns, which, but for the opportune arrival of the British naval brigade, would have rendered Ladysmith untenable.

In connection with the naval guns a most interesting and important experiment has been successfully carried out at Cape Town with a 4.7 inch gun, so serviceable at Ladysmith. One of the British cruiser Terrible's guns mounted on a Scott travelling carriage, was fired in the same way as a field gun with entire success. The Terrible with a number of guns thus mounted is on her way to Durban, and though the guns cannot now reach Ladysmith, they may be of the greatest value in the defence of Pietermaritzburg, which, it seems, will probably have to stand a siege.

The arrival of the Terrible with the relief crews for China, and other available men must have been placed in the neighbourhood of 3,000 more men at the service of the military authorities.

The Channel Squadron.

Interesting news comes from the Channel squadron at Gibraltar, showing precautions against all eventualities almost unknown in European waters in peace time. On the way to Gibraltar the fleet spread out four miles apart, and a sharp outlook was kept for suspicious craft. At Gibraltar extra sentries are posted at night at different parts of the ships, with ten pounds of ball cartridges each; the small guns on the upper deck and in the fighting tops are kept ready for immediate use, the ammunition being on deck; a few men sleep at the guns; the searchlights are kept working, and all boats are hailed and not allowed to approach without the permission of the officer of the watch.

IS KIMBERLEY IN DANGER?

London, Nov. 7.—Reports that Rosmead and Naauwpoort are also to be evacuated seem to corroborate the idea that Gen. Buller's first business will be to relieve Sir George Stewart White. It is believed that the Orange Free State commandos now have 11,000 men concentrated against Kimberley and on the Free State southern frontier. Opposed to them are only 7,000 British troops The towns which lie open to their attacks are Aliwal North, Burghersdorp, Stormberg, Barkly and Molteno.

A despatch from Pietermaritzburg, dated Friday, reports that railway communication with Ladysmith is severed, the Boers having effected a lodgment at Neitharpe, south of Ladysmith about seven miles. Among those invested at Ladysmith are Col. Rhodes, brother of Cecil Rhodes, Sir John Willoughby, and it is believed Dr. Jameson as well as most of the press correspondents, and probably the Earl of Ava, son of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava.

It is understood that when the time comes to arrange terms of peace, Natal will claim an apportionment of territory, which besides recompensing the colony for losses sustained, will place it in a position less open to attack in future.

TO COMBINE AGAINST BRITAIN.

Report That the European Terriers Are Beginning to Yelp Again.

New York, Nov. 7.—A St. Petersburg despatch to an afternoon paper says: The numerous rumors that certain continental powers have been meditating for some sort of a combined move to the detriment of British interests are not without foundation.

It was learned from a high Russian source, and the information can be relied upon, that a definite attempt has been made to bring about a combination between Russia, France, Germany and Spain, with the effect of embarrising Great Britain in the settlement of the Transvaal question. Not merely have unofficial suggestions been made by one power to another, but the proposal has been formally discussed by the various Governments concerned.

Russia, France and Spain, as Count Muravieff found in the course of his recent journeys were agreed as to the desirability of intervention, but the success of the movement was wrecked by the refusal of Germany, the only one of the four powers directly interested in South Africa, to take part in the proposal.

The adhesion of Spain to the combination appears to have been desired for the purpose of isolating and considerably weakening the British position at Gibraltar.

THE SECOND CONTINGENT.

No Definite Answer Yet—What the Militia Minister Says.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 7.—There is still no definite answer from the Imperial War Office regarding the offer of a second "bit of the thin, red line," from Canada. The idea in official circles is that the War Office is awaiting events, particularly, whether in the face of the position which General White now occupies. Major-General Sir Redvers Buller asks for more troops.

"I think that view of the matter very probable," said Hon. Dr. Borden to your correspondent this morning. "More troops may be required, and the longer the answer is delayed the more likely it seems to us that when it does come we shall find our offer accepted—at any rate we are making preparations."

"You have really started on the outfit, then?"

"Yes, we sent out several telegrams yesterday, and are making every preparation to have things in readiness so that when the contingent is accepted we will be able to fit it out in short order."

JAPAN IN HER WAR PAINT.

On the Trail of the Bear—Hostilities With Russia May Not be Far Off.

New York, Nov, 7.—The probability of war between Russia and Japan before the spring is considered in a half page of cablegrams in the Herald to-day. Japan has a larger fleet in the east than Russia, and in pursuance of a design to acquire Korea and thwart Russia's Chinese schemes before the completion of the trans-Siberian railroad, may, the correspondence shows, make war in a few weeks.

The London Daily Mail, commenting on the report, says:—"Japan knows that her time for striking is now or in the forthcoming spring. That is to say, she must assail Russia before the completion of the trans-Siberian Railway, while the hands of France are tied by the Paris Exposition.

"If Japan takes the opportunity war is likely to have but one result. Russia was never more heavily handicapped, while Japan has never been better prepared. Both nations are suffering from the stringency of money, but the plight of Russia is infinitely worse than that of Japan in this respect. Russians are badly provided with ships in the far east, and they have a famine to contend with.

"We have before pointed out the strict neutrality of the Russians, and at the present moment it is by no means due to friendship for England. With the German Emperor's visit to England to occupy Russia in the east, Russia is hardly ready to adopt the suggestions of Dr Ley as at the present moment.

"It is for this reason that the threatened intervention for which France worked so vigorously a week or two ago is fading out of view."

PERHAPS BY ACCLAMATION.

There Being no Split Among Liberals Mr. Latchford may not be Opposed.

Arnprior Nov. 6—It is reported here that Mr T W McGarry, the Conservative candidate for the local House, will resign. It is said the Conservatives expected that Mr R A Jamieson would be brought out in opposition to Hon Mr Latchford by a section of the Liberal party at the convention yesterday, but Mr Latchford's nomination was moved by Mr Jamieson and made unanimous.

A Family Quarrel.

Yesterday evening about eight o'clock Police Constable Stewart was called upon to quell a disturbance at the residence of a man named Smith, opposite the market square. Upon arriving on the scene the officer found Smith far from sober and profusely bleeding on the sidewalk outside his premises, while his wife was resting in the arms of a step-son, who likewise was severely cut, at the doorway of the house From all accounts Smith complains bitterly of the conduct of his wife, and threatens to make things interesting when brought before the Police Magistrate this morning. It appears that trouble has been brewing for some time in the family, which Smith claims drove him to drink, and culminated last night in blows. Smith was formerly connected with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company here.

ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, Was Returned Unopposed.

RESULT OF THE BYE-ELECTION YESTERDAY.

Hon. Mr. Stratton the Only Nominee and Was Therefore Declared Elected by Acclamation—His Address to Electors.

Mr. Chairman, and Electors of West Peterborough:

If I were capable of employing the most eloquent terms and the most expressive words, I could not convey to you my sense of the great honour I have received at the hands of my fellow citizens implied in an election by acclamation, and my gratitude for so signal a mark of your confidence.

It is not that I feared a contest. My past record will, I hope, relieve me of such an accusation. I rather take it as an idication that the West Riding of Peterborough appreciates the honour conferred upon it by the advancement of one of her humble citizens to the responsible position of a Minister of the Crown. While I appreciate the honour permit me to say, in all frankness, that I value the promotion I have received for the opportunity it affords of serving my native province in a way that I could not hope to do as a private in the representative ranks. I have accepted the responsibility; you have generously endorsed my acceptance, and it now becomes my duty to assure you that it shall be my constant and earnest endeavour to fulfil the duties of the office to which I have been appointed, with a single eye to the best interests of the Province, as represented by efficient, square, honest administration of the Department of Provincial Secretary. This department is the largest spending department in the Government, being charged with the disbursement of about one-third of the total supply bill voted by Parliament. It is due to you as electors of one of the most important constituencies in Ontario, that I give you the assurance, as I do now, that my department shall be managed on strictly business principles—that, as in a private business venture, full value shall be received for every cent of expenditure, and that not one penny shall be diverted from its intended purpose.

At this time, on the occasion of what I may be permitted to call an epoch in my personal and political career, I desire to take advantage of the opportunity presented to tender my most cordial thanks for the hearty support I have received in the past, a support which has encouraged me to persevere, and has cheered me in my honest endeavours to serve West Peterborough as efficiently as lay in my power. I have, of course, to first thank my Liberal friends, who have given me their hearty and united support during thirteen years of political warfare, and during four hard-fought campaigns.

CULMINATING IN THE PRESENT OCCASION—

I have also to most warmly thank those of the Conservative electors of this riding who have given me the benefit of their support. In so doing, I do not take it that they have done violence to the political principles they hold. In provincial politics the more direct, and, if I may so express it, more domestic character of the interests at stake, permit a relaxation of party lines that would not be as well warranted in the wider and more general sphere of Dominion affairs. Many of them have supported me on personal grounds, and grounds of local patriotism. In my personal as well as representative capacity I have endeavoured to be broad and liberal, fair and generous, acting on the theory that I represented every elector, and that every elector was entitled to my good offices and willing services, irrespective of party or creed. And I am glad to say that such a course has been appreciated and reciprocated.

Above all, I have to thank my political opponents for their generous forbearance in waiving their legitimate right to oppose my formal re-election. In so doing I feel that they have not sacrificed in any way their loyalty to their party. Abundant precedents for such a course exist—it has been no uncommon occurrence in the history of Canadian politics for a constituency to recognize the honour done it by the advancement of one of its citizens to the responsible position of Minister of the Crown, by permitting an unopposed return when he comes back for re-election, to the seat he has constitutionally forfeited by accepting office.

As you are aware, gentlemen, the retirement of Hon. A. S. Hardy, Premier of Ontario and Attorney-General, made a vacancy in the Ontario Cabinet, which was filled by the ADVANCEMENT OF HON. G. W. ROSS.

to the position of Premier, who re-organized the Cabinet, making a change in every portfolio except that of the Department of Agriculture, which Hon. Hon. Mr. Dryden still retains, and it fell to my lot to be honoured with the offer of the portfolio of Provincial Secretary, which I accepted.

In the retirement of Hon. Mr. Hardy the Province loses, through persistent ill health largely brought about by arduous devotion to public duty, a Minister who for a quarter of a century has given the province the best fruits of rare ability, who has given the province most effective, faithful and unselfish service who has at the same time distinguished himself both by effective work and versatility of administrative capacity in the several departments over which he has presided since his admission to the Cabinet 22 years ago. In his ministerial capacity and in giving advanced legislation and in assisting in placing upon the statute books of the province legislation in the interests of popular rights in the interests of labour, in advance of any other province in any capacity in which he acted it it safe to say that Hon. Mr. Hardy has few equals in public life anywhere. Another member of Mr. Hardy's Cabinet, Hon. Mr. Harty, Minister of Public Works, was compelled through ill health which has long incapacited him giving that devoted attention to his duties which his zeal in the public service impelled him to give, to resign his portfolio. Mr. Harty spent the early years of his manhood in Peterborough and his many friends in town, who, while regretting the cause of his retiring from active ministerial work, are glad that as a minister without portfolio, his valuable advice is still available at the council board of the province. Mr. Harty is succeeded by Hon. F. R. Latchford, a brilliant young man in the legal profession at Ottawa, a capable man in every way, of great energy, who has placed ability that has made him a prominent man in his profession at the service of his province and justifies the assertion that he will make to the former incumbents of his office, Hon. William Harty, and Hon. C. F. Fraser and their predecessors.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

While we deplore the loss of the services of Hon. Mr. Hardy as Premeir, it is compensation to know that his mantle has indeed fallen on worthy shoulders. Of Premier Ross, who also assumed the Portfolio of Provincial Treasurer it is difficult to speak in too eulogistic terms. It is superfluous to comment upon the eminent fitness for the important position of Premier Minister, of a statesman who developed splendid ability, and achieved phenomenal success in his faithful and fruitful discharge of his duties as Minister of Education for the past sixteen years. You will all doubtless readily agree with me when I claim that Hon Mr. Ross experience as a prominent Parliamentarian extending over a period of 27 years, his capacity for hard work, shown both in his official and representative relations and in many a hard fought campaign, his pluck, his fighting qualities on behalf of what he considers the right cause, his tolerant attitude, his broad views, his progressive ideas, his pronounced provincial patriotism coupled with broad and earnest Canadianism and the depth of his Imperial sympathies all combine to justify not only his elevation to the high position he now holds, but also to justify the hope, confidently held, that, under his leadership the administration of the affairs of Ontario will be vigourously applied, and that all its interests, material, moral, educational and civil, will receive the benefit of progressive and practical application of the best and highest principles of government. In this work, I can speak for myself and also for my colleagues, he will have the earnest and devoted co-operation of his associates in the government of Ontario. We may expect from a man of Mr. Ross energetic and practical character, an administration of provincial affairs correspondingly energetic and practical, advanced and decided and thorough and definitely in line with the public interests at every point.

With Mr. Ross as head of the Government and Provincial Treasurer, it was to be expected that the

FIRST CARE OF THE GOVERNMENT should be exercised in the interests of the provincial finances. It has always been recognized that the Province of Ontario has been favoured in having some of its most eminent sons occupy the position of Provincial Treasurer, and it has been generally accepted that the province has been exceptionally fortunate in enjoying the most effecive administration of its finances that has ever been enjoyed by any province or state. No Liberal or independent thinker has ever doubted the soundness of our financial standing or undervalued the splendid management of our financial interests. But there have been in some quarters, statements made, and reiterated from time to time, in regard to our finances that are at palpable variance with the facts. These statements have received a certain degree of credence, among many who have not had an opportunity of making such investigation as would settle doubts which had been suggested. The financial question is one in which the people are deeply interested and it is their right to be put in possession of definite information upon the subject that will not admit of dispute or of variation of opinion, but will, in the mind of every man desirous of knowing the facts, settle the question for all time. Therefore the new Premier has felt himself justified in appointing a commission of financial experts to set at rest several points upon which issue has been raised. The Government methods of book-keeping have been assailed; the correctness of the financial statements issued have been denied; it has also been charged that the annual balance sheet submitted to Parliament is incorrect and the most insistent criticism has been directed against the correctness of the otherwise accepted statements of Provincial assets and liabilities. The Government is proud of the financial record of the province. The statements that have been made regarding them from time to time are held to be full, fair and correct, and the government is not afraid to submit the matter to

THE SEVEREST TEST.

that is, investigation, the most exhaustive, examination, the most minute, and report, the most unbiassed, by three of the most eminent financiers and financial experts in the province, that is to say, Mr. Angus Kirkland, Manager of the Bank of Montreal, Toronto; Mr. B. E. Walker, General Manager of the Bank of Commerce, and Mr. John Hoskin, Q.C., President of the Toronto General Trusts Company. The government should know if they have been deceiving the people in regard to the

HARD FIGHTING AHEAD.

The determination with which the Boers are pushing their aggressive campaign is quite sufficient indication that we may look for stiff fighting, even against heavy odds, before the British general can dictate a new franchise law at Pretoria. The Boers began this war with an impressive reputation for skill in fighting from cover and preparing ambuscades for an unwary foe. But we were inclined to think that they would not stand punishment well, and that they would be very reluctant to expose themselves much in order to gain an advantage. The plan of the campaign most often present in the minds of unmilitary observers was a slowly advancing British column, perhaps held back for quite a time at the passes through the mountains, and badly harassed all along by swiftly moving bodies of mounted riflemen. We were hardly prepared, however, for the pitched battles that have been fought; and the pressing forward over these blood-stained fields to the siege of Ladysmith.

No one, at least outside of the Boer laagers, has any doubt about the final result of the war. Britain in earnest cannot be beaten or even long kept at bay by the two little Republics which are emphatically not democracies, and conjecture is chiefly concerned as to the amount of blood which the settlement of the dispute must cost. These last weeks in Natal have tended to increase the estimate of this deadly cost which most observers would be inclined to offer. The Boers were certainly not overawed by their losses outside of Glencoe not yet at Elandslaagte, and few would have been surprised had these repulses caused a withdrawal of the burghers to their defences in the passes. This undoubtedly shows a greater readiness to endure the afflictions of war than was expected.

The significance of this lies chiefly in the future. It will be no case of cover and dodge when we get to fighting them in the passes. They may be expected to hold their ground stubbornly and take full advantage of the natural strength of their position. This presages a costly victory for the British advance, and makes it all the more necessary for Canada to be ready to bear her share of the burden. Boer courage and determination may, of course, collapse when the truth comes home to them that they are fighting a hopeless battle, the result of which is sure. Men may be as brave as the bravest and as certain that they are in the right as are the Boers—which is saying a great deal—but they find it hard to keep up a stiff struggle against certain defeat. Then it is only a question of how many soldiers will be killed before the end comes. The result will not be affected—only the number of graves multiplied. For the honour of the flag and their own military reputation, they will do something; but the stubbornness of the man fighting before his door is gone. Still we will see a good deal of blood-letting in South Africa before the Boer is convinced of the uselessness of his sacrifice; and it is only common patriotism for the Empire as a whole to stand ready to make good the losses.

Treed by a Wolf.

Mr. A. M. Harvey, a mining prospector, of Toronto returned from the back country yesterday. While out in Chandos a few days ago, he says he saw a large wolf. He describes it as being a very old animal, as he looked gaunt and haggard. At first the wolf seemed inclined to show fight, as he came up near to the man and growled and snarled and seemed bent upon making a meal of the aged prospector. But, he being acquainted with the habits of these ferocious animals, made a dash for a nearby chestnut tree and grasped one of the lower limbs and drew himself up and hastily climbed the tree. He was none too soon, for the teeth of the hungry animal snapped within a few inches of his legs just as he was pulling himself into the tree. The wolf made fruitless jumps after the thoroughly frightened man, who set up a yell for help, which was heard by a party of men engaged in excavating at the mine, about one-fourth of a mile away. They hastily came to the rescue of their companion, who by this time was in the topmost branches of the tree, still yelling lustily. When help arrived the wolf was running around the tree trying to find out if there was not some way by which he could go up higher and make a breakfast out of the expert. The wolf, seeing that he was outnumbered, slowly ambled away. Several hunters also report having seen wolves this season.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

An English Opinion That It is Practically Inexhaustible.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Kent remark a few days ago in the Times that it would be difficult to reinforce the British army in India, now prompts me to ask for space to describe that army as I find it on a somewhat hurried examination. The regular army in England and the colonies at the beginning of the year was composed of 171,394 men. The great bulk of this force was in the British Isles. One army corps is in course of despatch to South Africa and the reserves of that corps alone have been called out, namely 25,000 men out of a total of 83,000, forming the First Class Army Reserves.

Very recently the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Wolseley, in a public speech, stated that two army corps could be despatched to any part of the world as quickly as transportation could be provided, and another corps shortly afterward.

I think, therefore, you will admit that one army corps at least can be promptly sent to India. I may add that if every regular soldier in Great Britain and Ireland is shipped away for foreign service the garrisons are at once remanned by the militia, composed of 132,493 men, and the yeomanry cavalry of 11,891 men.

In the event of the militia and yeomanry being sent abroad to reinforce the regular army, then the Government will call out the magnificent volunteer army of 263,963 men. Needless to tell any military man that in physique, workmanship, spirit and intelligence, the volunteers are the grandest force England has ever possessed.

Finally, conservative military estimates place the number of men in private life who have passed through one or other of the military services as above one million. The above facts prove that the military resources of England are practically inexhaustible.

J. H. A.

HUTTON VS. HUGHES.

Why Col. Sam Hughes Did Not Get a Position on the Contingent.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says —

Col. Sam. Hughes sailed with the Contingent on Monday, but was in no way attached. It is a good thing for Gen. Hutton that Sam has gone. It will be better for the General if the Colonel does not return. Before leaving Colonel Hughes wrote Mr. Laurier fully stating his reasons for demanding the resignation of the General, and when the Colonel gets back to his Parliamentary duties, he will make the General understand that nothing struts on two legs that can ever give slack to a Canadian. No sir. Col. Sam is a Canadian clean through, and from the heels up. The difference between he and the General commenced at Niagara last summer. Col. Sam had his 45th regiment of Volunteers at the Camp. The Colonel had camped before and he knew a suitable bit of ground when he saw it, so at once selected the best site for his boys. Later on a city corps arrived and the General ordered the Colonel to move his regiment of farmers and give place to the city chaps. Not much, said Colonel Sam. My boys are as good as any on the ground. If I move, I move home. The conversation between them was not exactly according to Army rules, doncherno, and the 45th's tents remained where their Colonel placed them. Now you know why Col. Sam is not Major of the Contingent, and when you see the General's scalp hanging from the tower of Parliament buildings next sprnlig you will know how it came there.

THE FIRE BRIGADE.

The stepladder's gone from its place in the shed and the hose reel is not to be found.
And we've looked high and low for the big dinner bell, still it seems to be nowhere around.
The hoe and the rake have been taken away and the axe from the block has been drawn.
And Rover is missing and so are the tots, whom we last saw at play on the lawn.
There is wood to be chopped and windows to wash, and we've hunted all over the place
For a sight of the things we're in need of the most, or the glance of a mischievous face.
Then there comes a big noise from the old willow road, and we turn out to see the parade,
For bearing down toward us with many a shout, comes the little men's fire brigade.

First there's the small waggon with Bobby inside, and Rover who's bounding about
Just like some high stepper a-doing his best to pitch the brave fire chief out.
The hose reel we wanted next hove into view, with Tommy imitating a prance,
While Archie holds on at the end of the thing and makes the old dinner bell dance.
There is no snow on the ground and one cannot but smile to see little curly-haired Ned
Come tugging along almost ready to drop,
with the step ladder tied on a sled.
And all go so excited and raised such a din, that I have felt sorely afraid
They would all get discharged were it anything else than a little men's fire brigade.

The rogues! Why, they don't seem to mind us, for they rush through the mud and the mire,
And somewhere out back of the cart house there must be a terrible fire,
For when we were going around there they ordered us back out of harm
And we heard the chief giving directions to turn in a second alram,
Old Rover's rough coat is all dripping, as he comes round the barn with a jump,
And he looks as though he was saying
"They've been holding me under the pump."
O, it's useless to go and disturb them, but when some nice doughnuts are made,
We will get all our things back and quickly disband the little men's fire brigade.

Advertising for a Janitor.

In Stratford, Ont. the Municipal Council recently wrestled with the job of appointing a janitor, and the Stratford Herald says —

The following is a verbatim copy of one of the many applications received for the janitorship of the city hall. The name of the writer is for obvious reasons withheld, though it might be stated that he is amongst those who voted on last night and polled a good vote. It is only fair to state that the large majority of the applicants were most business-like and earnest in their tone. The latter shows that the writer had a lively appreciation of what would likely suit Stratford aldermen—

"May it please your worship and gentlemen of the city council—I take this opportunity of asking your support as an applicant for the position of janitor of the city hall. I am a Canadian-bred and born, and a Canadian I wish to die. I have no encumbrances; there are only eleven of us in the family; they are able to eat. I have not spoken to any of the aldermen privately, for the reason that none of them called at my house since the last election, but I assure you if I am appointed I will be able to repay you in various ways. For instance, I will not bother you for that fifty yards of sidewalk that I asked for some time ago, although God knows it is needed bad enough. I am not a temperance man, but I am a total abstainer. Nevertheless, if you should have a bit of a spree in the hall at any time, I would not object, and the young ones could gather up the corks and bottles before the W. C. T. U. would have time to come, and on any dark night, if you were afraid to go home alone, I would send one of the kids with you. As for qualifications leave that to me. Hoping you will be unanimous in appointing me, I remain yours."

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. [illegible] Its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 85 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fiah department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally are served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

A Pro-Boer Discourse.

Orangeville, Nov. 5.—This town has been talking all week about a sermon preached in the Presbyterian church last Sunday by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Dickie, whose remarks have been subjected to a good deal of criticism. It was a pro-Boer discourse, and did not contain any words of friendship towards Joseph Chamberlain. Mr Dickie maintained that had strong enough efforts been put forth peace could have been obtained, but most unwise diplomacy had landed Britain into war with a weaker nation. The sermon caused a number of the congregation to leave the church before the service was concluded.

Deadly Folding Bed.

New York, Nov. 6.—Thomas Daw, a dealer in fertilizers was buried yesterday. He weighed 226 pounds, and on Friday evening sat on the edge of an old-fashioned folding bed standing open in the dining-room of his house in West 49th street. The bed had been in the family for many years and was built of solid mahogany in the design of a sideboard. One of the balances at the head of the bed was missing and Mr. Daw's weight caused the bed head to fall over on him. He was caught and held in the bed. Miss Margaret Daw, his daughter, heard the crash and went into the room. She did not suppose her father was caught in the bed until she had looked through the other rooms of the house and could not find him. It took five men to unfold the bed. Mr. Daw's neck was broken. He lingered in unconsciousness until Saturday night.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

[illegible]ulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or val-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient château, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

WILL RESIST AN INVASION

The Boers Have Seized Four Out of the Five Approaches to Orange Free State.

THE ORANGE RIVER BRIDGE IS IMPRFGNABLE.

It Is Not Thought That They Can Prevent a British Invasion From This Strongly Fortified Point.

London, Nov. 6.—Either the Boers are committing the grave error of scattering their forces or they have far more men in the field than the most liberal estimates up to the present time have given them credit for. This refection is the first to occur to one upon reading of their late doings on the Orange river, the boundary between the Orange Free State and Cape Colony. In order to accomplish the task the Boers appear to have set themselves, large bodies of men are necessary, and where they are coming from is a mystery unless they are part of the army which is defending the border of Natal. Should this prove the case the prediction that a British movement upon the Orange River would relieve the pressure upon General White has rapidly come to pass, for the mere threat of such a move has attracted large numbers of burghers to the locality.

import, for it implies that out of the five avenues by which the British can invade the Free State four are already in the hands of strong forces of Boers and the fifth is threatened. Aliwal North, Bethulie, Norval's Punt, Colesberg, are all towns which command bridges over the Orange River, and all are in possession of the burghers. But these places are of far less moment than the Orange River bridge, which, if reports are to be relied upon, is undermined, though still intact. The Orange River bridge, it must be remembered, is the key to the British operations. It is about 500 miles northeast of Cape Town and about 100 miles southeast of Kimberley.

The British long ago realized the importance of the position and have for weeks past been turning a strong natural battleground into an almost impregnable fort for the defence of the bridge. The bridge commands both the Free State and Cape Colony, and Colonel Kincaid, one of Kitchener's Soudan veterans, has been erecting exceedingly strong fortifications there, for it is by this route that Buller's army corps will enter Boerland unless the unforseen happens. Colonel Kincaid not long ago expressed the opinion that the bridge was too strong to be weakened by the Boers, and it is certain that any attempt to seize it will fail in face of the tremendous artillery fire which the British can direct upon the approaches. It is exceedingly doubtful that the bridge has been successfully undermined by the Boers, as in the present flooded state of the river the structure would have been swept away ere this. It is possible that an

ENGLISH ANXIETY RELIEVED.

London, Nov. 6.—An immense weight was lifted in the public mind by a brief official despatch published this morning by which the continental stories of disaster at Ladysmith were proved to be false, although the despatch itself revived the anxiety of the more timid in another direction, as it indicated that General White, instead of sitting tight and acting wholly on the defensive, as it is held in many quarters he ought to do, persists in sortieing and risking another Nicholson's Nek disaster. Generally however, the cheery tone of the despatch showing that there is no anxiety at Ladysmith as regards the ability of the beleaguered garrison to hold its own, has an excellent effect on the country.

Not Closely Besieged.

From the fact that General White is able to take the offensive and shell a Boer camp, it seems that Ladysmith is not so closely besieged as was supposed. Not much importance, however, it attached to the shelling of the Boer laager, as the War Office has no confirmation of the story that the Orange Free Staters camp at Besters has been captured. Were this true, it might have considerable effect on the future attitude of the Orange Free State, which is not so directly concerned in the conflict as the Transvaal.

Boers Underestimated.

The irruption of Boers into Cape Colony is tending to show the British that they have greatly underestimated the forces they will have to meet, and that even General Buller's task may not be so easy as anticipated. It is becoming apparent that all the British calculations, based on population, are hopelessly at sea or there has been a very serious leakage of Dutch sympathizers from Natal and Cape Colony. Otherwise there is no accounting for the large forces of burghers reported from all directions. The War Office consequently is being urged to have more troops in readiness for all possible demands.

The evacuation of Colenso and the reported withdrawal of the British force from Stromberg are still unexplained. The former may be due either to the Boer artillery rendering the place untenable, or that pressure elsewhere, possibly at Pietermaritzburg, has necessitated the concentration at a threatened point of all available troops. It is said that if the objective of the Boers traversing Zululand was Pietermaritzburg, they ought shortly to be heard from. That the position is regarded as serious is apparent from the fact that British cruisers are hurrying to the Cape station.

With regard to Stormberg, it is claimed that if it turns out to be true that the place has been evacuated, it may either be due to the impossibility at present of providing an adequate garrison to defend such important supplies against the Boer raids, or to a change in General Buller's plans, whereby General Methuen's division will be landed at Durban to relieve General White. If the latter plan is decided on the nearest available stores are those at Stormberg, and the quickest method of making the necessary provision for an advance will be to railroad those stores to East London, whence they would reach Durban before the first troopship.

Vessels Will Coal.

A despatch from Portland says that the special service squadron has been instructed to forthwith coal for a voyage, and that no one connected with the squadron is permitted to sleep outside the port.

Advices from Cape Town, under date of November 3, says martial law has been proclaimed in the districts occupied by the British troops between the Orange River and De Aar. The Premier, Mr. W. P. Schreiner, has sent a circular to the magistrates and others warning all persons against all statements to the effect that the Parliamentary institutions and constitutional government will be lost or detrimentally affected. He adds that the proclamation of martial law is only a matter of temporary urgency in some districts, and does not compell the burghers of the colony to partake in the "deplorable hostilities."

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED.

Cape Town, Nov. 3.—Delayed in transmission.—A despatch from Aliwal North says there is no confirmation of the report that the Boers have gone up the river towards Herschel, twenty miles to the east, for the purpose of crossing into Cape Colony.

SORTIE FROM KIMBERLEY.

Kimberley, Oct. 31.—Delayed in transmission.—A strong reconnaissance made by Col. Scott-Turner discovered the enemy posted on a kopje. The Boers fired thirteen shells, none of which took effect and the reconnoitering party returned to Kimberley.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. New Readers.

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

Deadlock in Samoa.

London, Nov. 6.—The Berlin correspondent of The Standard says the Samoan negotiations have reached a deadlock. Germany does not consider that the Gilbert and Solomon islands would adequately compensate her for waiving her claims. An agreement, however, would easily be arranged if Great Britain would cede in addition her portions of New Guinea.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grisly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

STATE LINES.

Lumber can't help being high in Oregon. It grows that way.—Oregonian.

Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi and Ohio are the only states that elect governors and state officers this year.—St. Louis Republic.

Missouri now has a beer inspection law. The rush for appointments as inspectors will be akin to the opening of an Indian reservation to settlement.—Omaha Bee.

It is predicted that a comet will strike Iowa next fall, but a comet will have no terrors for the Iowan who has lived through an active cyclone season, with a political campaign due next year.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harlaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface, then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Vs as Fiction.

How Old Are You?

A woman is mighty sensitive about her age. Some have been known to fly into a passion on the witness stand when an inquisitive lawyer asks, "How old are you?" The actual number of years don't count for much in a healthy, vigorous woman. If she be forty, she will look younger than a weak woman at 25. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription keeps women looking young by keeping disease away from those marvelously delicate organs which distinguish the female sex. It cures all the debilitating wastes and drains, all the aches and pains. It quiets the nerves, and stops those bearing-down sensations. It fits the wife for the task of child-bearing, making the period of gestation one of comfort, shortening labor and making it almost painless. It fortifies the whole system, so that recovery after confinement is quick, and there are no dangerous after-effects. The babe of the woman who takes "Favorite Prescription" is sure to be healthier than the babe of the mother who does not take it. There is no alcohol or opiate in this medicine. It is a pure, non-alcoholic tonic and nervine.

Mrs. Axel Kjer, of Gordonville, Cape Girardeau Co., Mo., writes: "When I look at my little boy I feel it my duty to write you. This is my fifth child and the only one who came to maturity; the others having died from lack of nourishment—so the doctor said. I was not sickly in any way, and this time I just thought I would try your 'Prescription.' I took nine bottles and to my surprise it carried me through and gave me as fine a little boy as ever was. Weighed ten and one-half pounds. He is now five months old, has never been sick a day, and is so strong that every body who sees him wonders at him."

In cases of sudden sickness, the Common Sense Medical Adviser (1008 pages) may save a life. Sent free in paper-cover for 31 one-cent stamps to pay customs and postage. Cloth cover 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

The Apple Trade.

Apple packers are now in the vortex of their work. Three weeks ago buyers offered $2.50 a barrel for all they could pur-increase in ocean freight rates, made two weeks ago, the price has gone down to $1.50 and $1.75. Farmers, however, are very reluctant about selling for less than these, but since an announcement of an $2 a barrel and even ask as high as $3 when bought in small quantities. Taking the apple crop as a whole, reports say that the yield has been small.

Intermediate Championship Match.

A despatch was received last evening by Captain R. F. McWilliams, of the local Rugby football team, to the effect that the intermediate match between the Tigers, of Hamilton, and the local c'ub will be played in Peterborough on Saturday next. This is the final match which will decide the provincial championship. The Tigers recently defeated the Torontos, winning the championship of Western Ontario, and a lively and exciting game may be expected.

financial condition of the province, and in anticipation of the report of the commission no stronger proof can be afforded of honest financial administration, no stronger proof that the condition of our finances is as represented, can be afforded than the act of submitting all phases of the financial situation to an impartial, keen, and competent board of commissioners. The report of the commission of financial experts will be looked forward to with interest by the people, and I have every confidence that, after the most searching investigation, the result will be a report satisfactory to the people of the province, and will show that the Liberal Government of Ontario through the statements of its Provincial Treasurers as to our financial position, have represented at least, no exaggeration of our favourable financial condition. (Applause). It is very greatly to the credit of our provincial standard of honour, to the honesty of the public men of the province that during the thirty-two years of our distinct political history, there have been expended in carrying on the public services of Ontario, in round numbers, a hundred million of dollars, and without any of it having gone astray. There may have been differences of opinion as to the wisdom of some of the expenditures, yet there has been no charge that any of the public funds have been diverted to any other use than that authorized by Parliament. Of course the expenditures of the province have increased somewhat, but nearly all increase has been in answer to the growing demands of the province, as development has progressed. And no small amount of the increased expenditure has been made of the people in whose interests exclusively the administration of public affairs are, and should be, conducted.

Perhaps it will not be out of place for me to point out that one of the first acts of the Government of Hon. Mr. Ross was to institute proceedings looking to the vigorous prosecution of all those persons reported by the trial judges in the several election trials, as liable to punishment for corrupt practices, and to issue a Royal Commission to enquire into the alleged irregularities in connection with the West Elgin election contest. Neither myself, nor the Government of which I form a part, have any interest or desire to palliate or extenuate corrupt practices aimed at the freedom or purity of our elections, and I am sure the action taken by the Government will meet the approval of every person desirous of seeing the purity of our elections maintained, and the composition of the commission, and the high character of its members will be such as to guarantee a thorough and impartial investigation in the interests of justice. There can be no doubt that the vast majority of the electorate of the Province is in sympathy with clean and straight electoral methods, and will endorse a course that has the attainment of such an object. It is to be deplored that in the keenness of political contests, adherents of both parties sometimes place success of their candidates before the sacred obligations of the law, and while such conditions unfortunately exist, it is the duty of the Government to see that the purity of our elections and the sacredness of our franchise are maintained, and it shall be the aim of the Government of this province to use the powers entrusted to it by the people to secure to the people the free and fair exercise of the franchise.

We in Ontario have a country to be proud of—a country with a great past—a country with a future of magnificent promise. The past is what we have made it, the future is what we shall make it, and every patriotic Canadian should unite in the effort to make it worthy of the place it holds in the great Empire with which we are connected. We have now only come to a faint conception of what our connection with the means. More and more we have made it our best market, and the more we make ourselves valued by the Mother Land the more shall our material interests be promoted. We have extended to Great Britain a trade preference, and we may expect a similar preference when we shall have paved the way to a development of our resources to an extent to supply in adequate measure her demands for our products. We have shown our oneness with the Empire by the splendid act of sending a thousand of the flower of our Canadian manhood to help in the extension of the principles of true liberty and good government, which has made Canada a nationality of the highest type, and we may be sure that throughout the length and breadth of Ontario there will not be found a voice of dissent from the first act of the new Government of Ontario, which almost before the ink was dry upon the oath of office to which the members subscribed, voted the sum of $500.00 to the Canadian Contingent Red Cross Fund to purchase medical comforts for our lads during their South African campaign.

It may be a sordid view to take of the matter, but the closer in any way we draw the bonds between us and the Mother Land, the better it pays. Our relations to Great Britain suggest that the British market should be our proper market, and circumstances have made it our best market. She freely takes what we can send in the way of supplying her wants. But we have as yet only begun to touch the fringe of our vast resources that can be made tributary to an unbounded and profitable trade with Great Britain, and the process and result of the development of our resources with such an object in view, will set in motion a train of industrial and commercial activities that will affect every interest of the country and promote an expansion of prosperity to whose bounds one can hardly place a limit. We live in a progressive age, and Ontario must keep pace with it. We must catch and use the spirit of the growing time; we cannot afford to mark time, and it seems to me that we should seriously consider whether it is not worth while, whether it would not to aim at a liberal and aggressive policy of development, to consider whether or not it is our duty to advance boldly in a campaign of development of the great and still dormant natural resources of the province; to consider whether we should not strike out boldly in the direction of achievement of new conditions—should not create conditions—which will result in making our magnificent natural resources, almost limitless in their extent, a factor in our industrial and commercial activities and a factor in our provincial prosperity. We have millions of acres of lands untenanted and in wild condition, capable of sustaining hundreds of thousands of agricultural population. These areas are now useless because they are inaccessible. To make them available for settlement a way must be made to get at them. To this end railways and other transportation facilities, are indicated. We should at least consider the advisability of taking measures to make them attractive to the surplus population of Ontario that are now crowding the professions and largely non-producing callings to the starvation point and congesting and injuring the labour market. We have too many people in the older settled portions of the province, that is, too many to find profitable employployment. Why not, then, turn the stream of our surplus population from our cities, where their presence simply adds to the unemployed, to the rich, unsettled lands of our province. We may help to do this by bringing these remote places in railway touch with settled conditions. Is it not worth while to consider whether we might pursue, and with profit in the long run, a liberal policy of encouragement to approved pioneers and thus, instead of allowing farmers' sons to crowd the city labour market, farmers' sons upon our now unsettled lands will create demands that would stimulate the commercial activity of our cities. We have immense areas of valuable timber still in their original condition. We have unbounded resources in the form of minerals in many parts of the province. These resources

SHOULD BE DEVELOPED

as rapidly as possible, and, in connection with this development, the question of ingress to and egress from these resources—the transportation problem—is a most important one and, although at the last session of the Legislature considerable sums in aiding railways were voted, it does not appear that in respect to those of most developmental character, anything, or at least very little practical, has yet been undertaken. There will be found I am sure no one to doubt the desirability or, in fact, the necessity, of pioneer railway lines into the remote regions of the province, if we are to secure anything like adequate enjoyment of the rich harvest of wealth as well as revenue that would be derived from a development of our at present inaccessible latent natural resources. If once these riches were brought in touch with enterprise and capital on one hand, and a market on the other, then these results would certainly follow. I have previously urged that facility of transportation is the first step towards the realization of the vast wealth existing in our inexhaustible store of natural resources distributed over wide areas. We must in order to attempt to live up to our privileges, not to say responsibilities, tap the heart of the resources of our outlying districts. Our wild lands, adapted to agriculture, should be peopled, and to this end a vigorous settlement policy is plainly indicated. Then with railways furnishing connection, capital would be tempted to engage in the work of developing our resources in timber and minerals, of which there is practically no end. What we have in sight, so to speak, is immense and in addition we have the great Hudson Bay region, which though imperfectly explored contains, it is said, immense belts of agricultural, timber and mineral land, which it seems to me from what is known, would warrant exhaustive and minute exploration. Our timber is not gone by any means. It is a mistaken idea to regard white pine as our only forest wealth. We have the most extensive spruce forests in the world, and our spruce is the best in the world for manufacturing purposes, and for it the

DEMAND IS INCREASING

and, as the limited areas in other countries, especially in the United States, disappear the increased demand will add to its value and, speaking for myself, I am in favour of arrangements looking to the securing to the province of Ontario the largest share of the profits accruing from the conversion of our raw material into finished products. I am in favour of having for Ontario the fullest value, not only the fullest market value but the last dollar of profit represented by the employment of Canadian labour and Canadian machinery and Canadian capital, in regard to the development of both our timber and mineral resources. (Applause). Under such circumstances and in view of provincial advancement worthy of our great heritage, would it be unwise to consider whether it would be well to enter upon a large, progressive policy—a policy of reaching out, a policy of expansion and a policy of Ontario and all its natural wealth for the benefit of Ontario? I have strong personal convictions in this regard but there are many considerations that enter into the problem and if the time for the adoption of such a policy has not arrived the way may be paved to the adoption of a course that will make the future an approximate realization of the position Ontario is calculated, by natural endowment, and the energy of her people to occupy.

We have a great province. Slowly and by degrees as we push outward the fringe of settlement we gain glimpses of what is beyond; but even our prominent citizens, our capitalists and the people at large have no definite knowledge upon which to base action or formulate plans. The Government should know—it is their duty to know—capital should know—it is its interest to know — the people should know — it is their right to know — the extent and nature of the resources of our country. To discover the extent and character of these would be useful information. We cannot doubt that the knowledge revealed by systematic investigation to even the most sanguine. Then we might know to what extent action would be warranted in proceeding to bring these regions into touch with commercial conditions. If a Government wish to take the first step in this direction, a knowledge of the value of the region to be tapped would enlist the help of capital and the same knowledge would lead the people, who must be behind every government, to support the enterprise. The circle of benefit from such a train of conditions would be wide; the building of railways would give employment to labour on the scene and relieve the labour market at home. Such a policy as I have suggested the possibility of, if adopted, would give access to new districts and create new centres of demand for the products of our manufacturing establishments and the wares of our city wholesale houses, give increased traffic to railways to such an extent as to encourage the investment of capital, give employment to working men, open up new avenues of trade and help to make the great capital of Ontario greater that it now is by diverting and directing trade to its natural centre. One cannot separate the interests of the capital of the province, of which the province is proud, from the interests of the country at large—what helps the one helps the other.

We have, as I before remarked a great, a rich province with a tremendous crop of national wealth ready for the sickle of enterprise. It rests with us to determine what the harvest shall be. I feel it my duty to advocate a course that will make possible a policy in the interests of the future of Ontario. If we strike out boldly, if we aim high, if we attempt large things in provincial development, we shall succeed. We have a great country; let us make the most of it and let Ontario have the lion's share of the profit. I am sure the universal sentiment of our people will be in favour of, a policy of development, especially a policy that carries with it the spirit of, if not the actual, condition that will in the matter of profit in connection with the exploitation of our natural resources give Ontario the sheaves and other countries the gleanings. (Applause.)

However this afternoon I have been expressing my own views which are I believe warranted by the conditions and with which I believe the majority of the people of the province are in sympathy. This is, however, not the occasion for going into details and I shall not detain you any longer, but take this opportunity of again thanking you most cordially for the honour you have conferred upon me by electing me for the fifth time your representative. I shall strive to my utmost to justify your confidence and to efficiently discharge the trust reposed in me as a minister of the Crown.

For the Old Fashioned Coffee Was Killing

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, for it seemed as if there was for it seemed as if there was nothing for breakfast if we did not have it on the table.

"I had been troubled some time with my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse steadily.

"Some times it would beat fast and at other times very slow, so that I would hardly able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast, and if I walked up a hill, it gave me a severe pain.

"I had no idea of what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off the coffee and began drinking Postum Cereal Food Coffee. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble and attribute the cure to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee.

"A number of my friends have abandoned the old fashioned coffee and have taken up with Postum, which they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum very weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since it was first started in our house." Mrs. L. A. Smith, Blodgett Mills, Cortland Co., N. Y.

Capt. Martin At Home.

The Vancouver, B. C., News-Advertiser of late date has the following:—"Captain John Martin was one of the passengers on yesterday's Atlantic express. He will be welcomed home in Peterborough after having been away in Atlin since February. He has some good paying claims, and a very fine hydraulic proposition which is under option to a London syndicate represented by Mr F T Bagshawe, of this city. Captain Martin will return to Atlin in the spring." Captain Martin arrived in Peterborough last week and has been kept busy shaking hands and greeting his hosts of friends. The Times will furnish its readers with a description of Capt. Martin's mining property, and what he proposes to do with it. If our enterprising friend Jack don't make a million or two out of it, we are no prophet.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

Continuation of the Evidence Before the County Judge.

On account of the crowded state of our columns, our report of the investigation regarding the pavements has been left over. We now resume the report. Mr. George Rose, who was foreman on the day work done by the town on Charlotte, Park and other streets this summer, was the first witness sworn on Monday morning, and was examined by Mr. [illegible]. He began work on July 11th. Witness stated that he asked Mr. Hay what proportions he was to use. Mr. Hay told him that he was to use proportions of 2 to 1 on the top and 6 to 1 in the base but also told witness to go up on Water-st. and get the size of the boxes from Mr. Ranney.

Mr. Rose—Mr. Ranney told me he had boxes made and told me to measure them and to use 1 box of granite, 1 box of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement. The box for the gravel for the base measured 5 feet square and 14 inches deep. About a block had been done at that time. I figured this box to contain 29 cu. ft.. Mr. Ranney told me I was to use four bags with it. I then went on at my own job but when I came to put 5 1-2 bags of cement with 18 feet of granite and sand I saw that something was wrong. I was just going to see how many bags it really did take to fill the box and I had either 7 or 8 bags in and the box was not yet full, when Mayor Davis came along and told me I had better get the right proportions from some one. Then Ald. Langford came along and told me to use 5 1-2 bags of cement with the 18 feet of granite and sand and also to use 4 bags of cement in the base.

Q.—What sort of a job did that make?

A.—I always considered that there was too much sand in the surface. It is hard to tell just what kind of a job the mixture made. I considered that there was enough fine stuff in the granite to do without sand but I never offered my opinion to anyone.

Q.—What kind of a job did you make of the base?

A.—I consider that I made a good job.

Mr. Rose—The box held more gravel than would make 6 to 1. Ald. Langford said it was very little. When I got down farther on Charlotte-st. I cut 5 inches off the end of the box, leaving it 5 ft. x 4 ft. 7 in. x 14 inches. I knew there was too much gravel going in. I cut the box without any instructions from the engineer or anybody else. I wanted to get the quantities right.

The witness stated that he was told by the engineer to alter the crossings on Mr. Sheehy's contract on Water-st. He said "The surface was not what I would look for in concrete work. I consider that it was too brittle, contained too much sand. I broke the pavement with a point and a six pound hammer. In some places I found there was no bond between the bottom 4 inches and the top 2 inches and I just broke it without the point. A crossing near London-st. was very good in every way. Across from it there was one in which one half was no good at all. It seemed to have no bond. It is pretty hard to tell what was the cause of this. There were others like it. The cement may have not been properly handled. Almost all the crossings were defective in some parts of the base. I took out quite a lot of this defective base and put in new material.

Q.—What would cause these places where there is a hollow sound?

A.—Different things. If the foundation had sunk or if there was a separation between base and surface. I just cut enough away in each case to make the alteration required. At Dr. Halliday's there was more loose than I removed. I did not think it my business to do so.

Q.—Did you keep track of the work you did?

A.—Yes. I made a rough measurement on Hunter-st. and Park-st. and the work cost about 14 cents a square foot. According to the measurement of Mr. Ranney, who afterwards said he had made an error, it cost a little over 13 cents a square foot. The estimate I have made is that the cost of the work on Hunter-st. was a trifle over 16 cents, on Park-st. 18 cents and on Charlotte-st. 13 1-2 cents a square foot.

Q.—What else can you say?

A.—Well, if any comparison is to be made between day and contract labor I would like everybody to know that the circumstances are altogether different. An eight or ten foot sidewalk can be built for a less price per square foot than a 4 foot sidewalk. A contractor can build a wide sidewalk cheaper than a nrrow one can be built by day work. Then, there is much difficulty in getting the supplies for the day work.

MR. McWILLIAMS EXAMINES.

Q.—Did you have any information from Mr. Hay after you started your work?

A.—No. He knew the proportions I was using all right. He did mention once about the box for measuring the gravel for the base being too large but he did not tell me to reduce the base.

Q.—Tell what Ald. Langford said to you.

A.—I was measuring the box when Mayor Davis came along and when he went away Ald. Langford told me to use the 5 1-2 bags of cement with the 9 feet of gravel and cement.

Q.—What would you say about the two classes of work done on Stewart-st?

A.—I consider that the 2 parts of granite with 1 of cement makes a decidedly better job. The other is practically a sand finish, as the granite sinks to the bottom. In the granite we used on all our work there was, I considered, sufficient fine stuff to make a good job without any sand. At first it was coarser than it was afterwards. I talked to Mr. Ranney as to why sand was used and he said that he believed himself that it was not necessary. Some of the granite we got would contain 25 or 30 per cent. of particles as fine as sand.

Mr. Rose expressed the opinion that in the 9 feet of granite used for the surface finish there would be about 3 feet of granite sand. With the 9 feet of sand put in every batch this would make 11 feet. He thought that in the mixture used in the surface there was about 50 per cent. of sand. As to the gravel used in the base it often contained 50 or 60 per cent. of sand. The specifications call for not more than 30 per cent. of sand in the base.

Mr. Rose testified that the surface finish of some of the crossings on Water-st. was 2 1-2 inches thick as required and some was not an inch thick. Witness had had experience in concrete work for about four years. In the work on the Trent Canal they used from 20 to 25 feet of broken stone with 15 feet of gravel and sand and 4 feet of cement, about 1-10 or 1-11 of the mixture being cement. Witness had cut hardened concrete on the canal and had cut that on Water-st, which was, however, only 4 inches deep. Judging from the manner in which both had cut Mr. Rose would not consider the base of the Water-st contract a concrete at all. "Taking the crossings I cut into I would not consider that a piece of concrete work at all, and I am a judge of concrete. I have handled considerable of it." Witness considered the excessive cost of the work on Hunter-st. due to extra digging and filling. Charlotte-st cost only 13 1-2 cents a square foot because it was a five foot walk. There was a good deal more work done at 13 1-2 cents than at 16 cents. There was no inspector.

Mr. Rose identified the pieces of pavement in court as coming from the Water-st contract. Other specimens were made by Mr. Rose himself as samples. Raddon assisted at the making and kept count of the proportions. Witness found that concrete made of 3 of granite to 5 of cement was much stronger than that in which sand was used. He had tested them by breaking.

Q.—Was there a solid body under the crossings?

A.—It seemed loose. It seemed as if there was some bad management putting it in. I don't like to run down another man's—

Mr. Dennistoun—O, go right ahead, don't apologize now.

MR. DENNISTOUN.

Mr. Dennistoun then questioned the witness. Mr. Rose stated that he was his own inspector. He first got $1.75 a day and later $2.75. He had been told the specifications. He knew that the quantities named by Mr. Hay were not being used but he did not report the deviation. He did not consider himself an inspector, simply a foreman. Mr. Hay knew what he was doing all the time.

Regarding the specimens in court he had been asked to make them by Ald. McWilliams. He got nothing for his work.

Mr. Dennistoun—You did it simply to down Sheehy. That was your whole satisfaction. How long did it take you to make these specimens?

A.—Several hours.

Q.—Why did you make these blocks if it was not to hurt Sheehy?

A.—Mr. Raddon asked me to make them. He did not tell me that Mr. McWilliams had asked him. I made the second lot of blocks a week ago when asked by Ald. McWilliams. I knew they were going to be brought here for evidence. I did it for the purpose to show what concrete work is when it is properly done.

Q.—Don't you think it would have been better if you had brought some of your own sidewalk?

A.—When I cut into mine there was no talk of this investigation.

Q.—Are you prepared to say that your work is better than Mr. Sheehy's?

A.—Yes, I am.

Q.—You say that your work is good work, a good job for the town?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And it is built in the same proportions as Sheehy's?

A.—I altered the box.

Q.—But is not the work done by you before you altered the box good work?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What dryers did you use?

A.—3 to 1.

Q.—And Mr. Sheehy used the same proportions. Then Mr. Sheehy's work is as good as yours?

A.—I did my mixing in a different way.

Q.—Then it is all a question of workmanship of mixing—Your proportions made good work at first?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then Mr. Sheehy's made good work if the workmanship was right?

ARMY CORPS IS IN SIGHT

2000 Men Expected to Land Within a Week's Time.

VICTORY IS NOT CONFIRMED

But Officials Say That the Rising Tide is Now Expected, and That the Boers' Success Has Reached Its Utmost Limit.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The strictness of the military censorship established by General Buller, in the interests of the empire, is producing the inevitable result in the shape of sensationals details of Great British victories published by newspapers, though unknown at the War Office. The latest despatch from the scene of hostilities left Estcourt, which is within easy reach of General White, seeing that armored trains could still pass Colenso on Monday last, and reported officially that since Friday there had been no hostilities around Ladysmith. It was stated in the despatch that the two actions of Thursday and Friday last, the British lost eight killed and twenty wounded, losses altogether out of proportion to the immensity of a victory such as the one reported, which could not have been won without a heavy list of fatalities. In the absence therefore of further official intelligence from the front, it must be concluded that nothing unusual has taken place at Ladysmith since the Nicholson's Nek affair.

The announcement of General Buller that hostilities have been suspended for so long a time is peculiarly significant. It is either an evidence that the Boers are awaiting the arrival of more artillery before again attacking Ladysmith, or that General Joubert has so extended his front by operations down the railway to Pietermaritzburg that the pressure upon the besieged British force has been considerably relieved. It must be born in mind that one of the difficulties to be encountered by the Boer generals is the keeping together of an irregular force, which is apt to melt away in face of long opposition. It is possible that General Joubert, in order to prevent his men becoming discouraged in face of the stubborn defence of Ladysmith, has felt itincumbent to revive their drooping courage by the small success which an advance along the railway might bring forth. It does not appear that the Boers have yet made any attempt upon Estcourt above which place communication was yesterday reported to be interrupted. It is probable that the presence there of 3,000 British troops has caused them to make a halt in their southward progress. Communication is still interrupted with Ladysmith, and the latest information is that an armored train failed to get much beyond Colenso in an attempt to reach White. It is interesting to note that General French, who is one of thetwo or three finest cavalry leaders in the British service, succeeded in escaping from Ladysmith before the railway was cut and that he is en route for the Cape, in order to take charge of General Buller's cavalry division in its march upon Pretoria.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A Cape Town despatch this afternoon says that the first of the transports bearing the army corps for service in South Africa have been sighted. It is expected that 20,000 men will be landed within a week.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—It is semi-officially announced that the main question which the Czar and Kaiser will discuss at their meeting is the means of preventing war between England and the Boers from spreading beyond the boundaries of South Africa and causing a general European conflagration. The chief aim of the Kaiser's subsequent visit to Queen Victoria is to further this object.

London, Nov. 8.—An air of relief was was observable among the British War Office officials to-day, as a result of the re-assuring news from Ladysmith, and the tone of comment on the war news has assumed an optimism that lately has been absent leading to the belief that, in addition to the brighter prospects of the beleagured garrison, the War Office is cheered by the news of the arrival at their destinations of the first transports with Gen. Buller's army corps. Now the officials are inclined to predict that the low water mark has been reached, and that slowly but steadily the may be expected.

The proposal to send out an additional 15,000 troops is highly approved, and it is considered probable that fully that number will be required, as all independent reports concur in saying the resistance of the Boers will be stubborn to the last, and that not until the resources of the two Republics are exhausted will they acknowledge that they are beaten.

Doubt as to Big Victories.

The news of a great victory, which was circulating here yesterday evening is not confirmed, and the Boer losses reported by what may be designated "kaffirgrams, ought to be greatly discounted, as the Kaffirs, knowing the British wish to hear of Boer losses, are likely to supply them with reports to their taste.

A Cheerful View.

However, allowing for all exaggeration, General White appears to have given Gen. Joubert's forces several home thrusts, and the War Office justified its contention to-day, that the news demonstrates clearly that General White is able to more than merely hold his own, and can strike blows of such considerable force as not only to ensure the safety of Ladysmith, but, probably, also to have a telling effect on the duration and results of the pending operations of Gen. Buller's army corps. In short, the War Office officials take a decidely hopeful view of the entire situation, and be'ieve that even the advance section of the British forces at Ladysmith have seen the worst days.

The White Flag Trick.

It is hoped that the renewed charges of Boer violations of the sanctity of the white flag originated in the lively imagination of the Kaffirs. Though similar charges have several times been reiterated during the present campaign, and though officials [illegible] report similar practices in the former Transvaal war, there has not been any mention of such tactics thus far in any of the official reports received from Gen. White and Gen. Yule, who would surely have forcibly remonstrated against such conduct on the part of the Boers.

The British Advance.

One of the most important items to-day is that Gen. French is going to Cape Town. This is taken as a confirmation of the statement already made by the Associeted Press that the main advance of the British forces will be through the open, flat country of the Orange Free State, and the southwestern part of the Transvaal. Otherwise so skillful a leader as General French would not have been hastily withdrawn from Ladysmith at the present time of stress.

The Boers' Next Move.

There is much speculation regarding the next Boer move. It seems clear that it will be impossible for them to closely invest Ladysmith, owing to the fortunate arrival of the long range naval guns, which kept the Boers at least four miles off, making the circle of investment about 25 miles in circumference, which, it is claimed, it will be impossible for the Boer force to fully occupy.

It is beyond belief however that Gen. Joubert will remain long inactive, and it is conjured here that his present quiescence is due to the fact that he is awaiting the arrival of heavy guns from Pretoria and Johannesburg to effectually bombard and render untenable the British position.

BLEW UP A BRIDGE.

Queenstown, Cape Colony, Nov. 8.—It is reported that the Boers have blown up the Stormburg Spruit bridge, as a terrific explosion was heard in the direction of the bridge.

THE WHITE FLAG AGAIN.

Lourenzo Marques, Nov. 8.—Delayed in transmission.—A runner from Ingnavuma, Zululand, brings news that on November 1, 250 Boers invaded British territory and advanced toward the fort at Ingnavuma with a white flag. When they were one hundred yards distant they fired volleys into the fort, which, however, had been evacuated. The Boers burned all the stores on the Lebombo and thoroughly ransacked Pomeradorp, which they burned to the ground.

IN SHIRT SLEEVES.

Estcourt, Natal, Sunday, Nov. 5, 5.20 p.m.—Brigadier-General Wolfe Murray has received important despatches from Ladysmith, by a runner, but their contents have not yet been divulged.

The armoured train, with a detachment of the Dublin Fusiliers and a railroad engineering staff, which left here for Colenso to repair the line, yesterday evening, and which also intended to go through to Ladysmith, if possible, has returned here. The commanding officer reports that he proceeded beyond Colenso, and found the dwellings there untouched. There has been no looting except in the single case of a store, which was looted by Kaffirs.

Several prisoners were arrainged before Gen. Wolfe Murray this morning.

It is reported that the Boers are not within 20 miles of here.

They Bore Charmed Lives.

The bullett holes in the uniforms of the Durban Volunteers, show the narrowness of their escape from Fort Wylie, which was only effected after the heavy fire of the Dublin Fusiliers had inflicted severe loss on the Boers.

A member of the garrison who was hard pressed by the Boers leaped into the river, amid a shower of bullets and, diving repeatedly, reached a far bank [illegible].

Gen. French managed to leave Ladysmith by the last train from there. Four miles from Colenso the Boers fired on the train, but no one was hit. The general is going to Cape Town, in order to take command of the cavalry.

The Border Regiment arrived here on Friday.

Sub-Inspector Petley, of the Natal Police, says that his men alone, formed one of the several burial parties, interred 84 Boers, who were killed at the battle of Talana Hill.

Fighting in Shirt Sleeves.

The Dublin Fusiliers are being served with new kits, as they lost everything in the retreat from Dundee. The colonial forces are already fighting in their shirt sleeves, and it is expected that this will spread to all the forces before long.

SECOND CORPS NOT ACCEPTED.

The Imperial Government Replies To day to Canada's Offer—The Embargo on Cattle.

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—Information has been received by the Dominion Government from the Imperial authorities that no second contingent will be necessary. Therefore the offer of a second contingent has not been accepted.

Major General Hutton is turning his attention to the connection of the Quebec battalions of the active militia.

A cable has been received stating that the embargo against Canada cattle going into Belgium will be removed from the 15th inst.

There is not likely to be any change in the Portfolio of Militia, for some time at any rate.

BRITAIN RETIRES FROM SAMOA.

Germans Will Take Possession, But England Obtains Exceedingly Valuable Concessions in the South Pacific—Only One Island for Uncle Sam.

London, Nov. 8.—The Samoan question has been settled, and Germany, as was to be expected, has obtained the largest slice of land, though at the cost of extensive concessions to Great Britain in other parts of the South Pacific Ocean. The agreement officially announced from Berlin will, of course, depend upon the acquiescence of the United States, who, as a solatium, is given the second largest island of the Samoan group—Tutuila—where Germany takes Savaii, the largest, and Opolu, the smallest and Great Britain relinquishes her rights in the islands altogether. But it must be admitted that she has not done so without a substantial recompense. The two best islands of the Solomon group, which lie due east of New Guinea and northeast of Australia, have been ceded to her and will add two more links to the chain of British stations in the Pacific.

But this is not all. Germany renounces her claim, a shadowy one at the best, to the Friendly Islands, visited by the renowned Captain Cook, and which lie almost south of Samoa, together with the small and isolated Savage Island near them to the east. None of the islands are intrinsically of great value. But they are all in close proximity to the steamship routes between the American Pacific coast and Australia and between Chinese and Japanese ports and Australia, and are therefore of great importance to British commerce. It is quite possible that the silence of Germany regarding the Transvaal war and European intervention may have a great deal to do with her acquisition of the main island in Samoa and a right to do as she pleases in furtherance of her admittedly great interests there.

INDIANS DON WAR PAINT.

They Attack a Hacienda and Kill One of Its Occupants—Brave Defenders Vanquished.

Guaymas, Mexico, via Nogales, Ariz. Nov. 8.—The Yaqui Indians have killed Nettleton, an American, and carried a German into captivity. They have renewed hostilities in the lower Yaqui valley, and the people in the river towns in that section are again on the defensive. A soccial courier arrived to-day with intelligence of the terrible fight between Nettleton, the American, and Rossick, the German, and Indians at Cajame Haciend, near Bacom, last Saturday night. The two men were overseers of the property. At the beginning of the attack, shortly before daylight, they made a brave defense, and used their arms effectively, but the doors of the house were battered down and in the hand to hand battle that ensued Nettleton was shot and clubbed to death. Rossick, although wounded, was spared. After taking all the provisions in sight and their prisoner, the Indians withdrew to the south side of the river. Three Americans have been killed by the Indians since July.

Anderson Free.

Winnipeg, Nov. 8.—At the assizes to-day, Anderson, formerly clerk in the Molsons Bank, accused of robbing that institution of $62,000, was acquitted by the jury. The verdict was greeted with applause by the friends of the accused, who will tender him a banquet. The scenes resemble those following the acquittal of Penton at Cobourg.

A SMITH WEDDING.

Nuptials of Mr. Silas Blewett to Miss Margaret Dever.

A very pretty and interesting event occurred at the residence of Mr. Andrew Dever, of Smith, on Nov. 1st, when his daughter, Miss Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. Silas W. Blewett, also of Smith.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev Mr. Gunton, of Bridgenorth, in the presence of a large number of intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bride was attended by Miss Florence Blewett, sister of the groom. She was charmingly attired in a costume of cream silk cashmere with white figured silk lace, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore a similar costume and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. John Northey assisted the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Blewett were the recipients of numerous and costly presents from their friends, among which was an elegant clock from the North Smith brass band, of which the groom is a valuable member.

At the conclusion of the marriage ceremony a pleasant evening was spent in social enjoyment. The newly married couple were heartily congratulated by the company, and all will join in wishing them many years of happy married life.

ANNIVERSARY SUPPER.

Anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot Celebrated.

Good weather and a large crowd favored the members of Col. Saunderson, L. O. L., No. 321, at their annual fowl supper, held on Tuesday, Nov. 7, at their hall at Downer's Corners. Supper was served from 6 to 8, in first class style by the ladies, after which an adjournment was made to the hall, where a good programme of music, speeches, etc., was given. The chair was occupied by Mr Dawson Kennedy, Past Master of No. 321.

The programme was as follows :—
Opening chorus—Hold the Fort.
Chairman's Address
Instrumental music—Mrs M W Matchett.
Address—Mr Henderson.
Address—Mr J Jonse.
Song—Mr King.
Address—Mr W Kindred.
Address—Rev J E Moore.
Instrumental music—Mrs Matchett.
Address—Rev W L Armitage.
Song—Mr King.
God Save the Queen.

A very pleasant evening was spent and a good sum was realised.

The unavoidable absence of Bro. Holland, of Port Hope, was very much regretted.

Guy Fawkes was burned in effigy after the programme was rendered

POLICE COURT NOTES.

George Smith appeared in Police Court yesterday with a nose decorated with a scar, and pleaded guilty to the charge of having been drunk and disorderly. He was given $1 or ten days.

Bert Craig and James Hayes were fined $1 each for fighting.

John Donohue was charged with being a vagrant, and his father went into the box and said his son would not work and had no home. The accused said he was willing to work if he could get it to do, but he was not able to do all kinds of labor, and hence his idleness. He said he would trouble no one if left alone. He was fined $1 or ten days.

Two boys charged with damaging a fence, the property of Mr J J Lundy, had their case enlarged until the 16th.

A Second Bridal Tour.

Mr and Mrs Robert J Green, of Fargo, North Dakota, are visiting friends in Peterborough. Mr Green, when last here, about three years ago, renewed old acquaintances and made many new ones, who are now glad to see him again. Mrs Green, whose last visit was not so recent, is also held in kind remembrance by many friends. Before their removal to Dakota they lived in this province, their former home being in the Niagara peninsula, where they will visit before their return, where they enjoy a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Having recently celebrated their golden wedding this may be said to be their second bridal tour.

Troops for Esquimault.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—England does not intend to be taken unawares in any move that may be made in the Pacific as a result of a possible combination of two or more hostile powers against her interests in that quarter of the globe. It is learned that a strong detatchment of marines, whose sailing from England was not announced, will arrive at Halifax to-day or to-morrow, en route to Esquimault, B. C., the strongest British stronghold and naval base on the Pacific ocean. The fortifications at Esquimault are also undergoing considerable strengthening and enlargement, and a large quantity of heavy ordnance has recently been shipped across the continent to be mounted at that fortress. The reason for the strengthening of Esquimalt, it is understood, lies in the possibility that Russia may seize the opportunity of the Boer war to attack England in the east.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 8, 1899

CARDINALS AND PAPAL INFALLIBILITY.

There seems to be much misconception even in quarters presumably well informed concerning the nature of the infallibility attributed to the official ex cathedra utterances of the Pope by the Vatican Council. There is no excuse for the misunderstanding, seeing that the doctrine has stood before the world as a cardinal dogma of the Catholic faith for the last thirty years. Nevertheless, Dr. Bardsley, the Anglican Bishop of Carlisle, said the other day in an address that "since the declaration of papal infallibility, the Pope would not seem to require such a consultative body as the College of Cardinals."

This assertion is made the text of a long article in the London Tablet, which is well known to be the organ of Cardinal Vaughan. The writer admits that if the Vatican Council had declared that the Pope, when he speaks ex cathedra, is infallible because he is inspired by the Holy Ghost, then, indeed, as far as such decisions should be concerned, he would have little need of Cardinals, Councils or consultation. He would then be simply a sort of oracle, and would only have to put himself into the required condition, and to fall under the influence of inspiration, in order to arrive without further trouble at an unerring decision. That, however, is not in the least what the Catholic Church understands by Papal infallibility. When the Vatican Council defined the term, it avoided the word "inspiration," and used the word "assistance." The ideas represented by the two words differ as essentially as to be lifted bodily to a height differs from being merely kept from falling while one climbs to it. Inspiration, by which the Pope would be informed through the influx of the Holy Spirit what he should decide, would be one thing; quite another would be the preventive assistance of the Holy Ghost by which the Pope would be left to find out the truth by such ordinary means as are available, but should be safeguarded from falling into error in doing so.

The Tablet would compare inspiration to the action of a mother who should carry her child in her arms to a given point, so that he would need to expend no labor in reaching it; it would liken assistance, on the other hand, to the action of a mother who should place her child on the ground and encourage him to walk to a given point merely keeping her hands in readiness to prevent him from falling on his way thither. Inspiration, in other words, is a vehicle which carries a man across a bridge, while assistance leaves him to walk across a bridge himself, but puts a parapet on each side to shield him from falling into the river in so doing. Between inspiration and assistance, thus defined, there is, obviously, all the difference which exist between a divine act and a human act divinely safeguarded, a difference which includes the very field of human investigation and consultation which the Bishop of Charlisle supposed to have been rendered useless.

It is pointed out by the Tablet that the precise meaning of the doctrine of papal infallibility was set forth in the report made to the Vatican Council by the commission which drew up the decree. Speaking of the cooperation of the Church with the Supreme Pontiff in his infallible decisions, the Court says—"We certainly do not separate the Pope, when he defines infallibility, from the cooperation and help of the Church." And again—"We do not exclude the cooperation of the Church, for the infallibility which pertains to the Roman Pontiff is given to him, not by way of inspiration or revelation, but by way of divine assistance. Hence, the Pope in the discharge of his offices and in the [illegible] of the gravity of the question of [illegible] is bound to employ suitable means for the due investigation of the truth and for its fitting formulation, and such means are councils and also the advice of the Bishops, and Cardinals, and theologians."

Thus we see that, although the Pope was declared by the Vatican Council to be infallible, when he speaks ex cathedra, it by no means follows that he must disband the College of Cardinals. On the contrary, in view of the possibility that he may have to draw up an infallible decision, he may have more need of them than ever, and also of the consultation of the episcopate at large and of bodies of expert theologians. In a word, papal infallibility does not exclude consultation of the Church, but, on the contrary, calls for it imperatively.

GORE'S LANDING.

[illegible] is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. Aitchison, and intends spending the winter with her.

Mr. Charles McBride is seriously ill this week as the result of a heavy cold. Drs. Pratt of Coldsprings and Ivey of Cobourg have been in attendance.

Mr. George Wallace left on Tuesday to take a position at the Crossen Car works, Cobourg.

Mr. C. F. Sorby, has purchased a new lot of trout fry. Mr. Murray, of Kendal, placed them in his pond on Monday.

Messrs. Cyrus Field and T. York, Cobourg, have been out for a week's duck shooting. They report rather poor luck.

Mr. James Manley is moving this week into the house formerly occupied by his mother, and now the property of Mr. J. Harris. Mr. Manley has sold his place to Mr. William Fowler.

The steamer North Star is still engaged in drawing wood to Peterborough. The Beaver has discontinued her Saturday trips and will soon lay up for the winter.

Owing to the heavy rain on Hallow E'en the small boy was not in evidence and gates remained on their hinges much to their owner's satisfaction.

THE KIMBERLEY MINES.

Something About Their Character and the Men Employed in Them.

In 1867 a Kaffir boy playing with a pebble attracted the attention of a prospector, who discovered that the pebble was a diamond. That was the beginning of the Kimberley mines in South Africa. Between 1867 and 1899 the value of the diamonds taken out was $455,000,000. There were originally four famous mines—the Bultfontein, Du Toit's Pan, De Beers and Kimberley. In the natural order of events a trust had to follow and so all were merged into the Kimberley, the richest and largest. The trust occupies 200,000 acres of land, employs 15,000 natives and 25,000 whites, consumes each month in the "compounds" 25,000 pounds of mutton and 200,000 pounds of beef, turns out 220,000 carats of diamonds a month, uses 6,000 tons of coal a day, has 2,000 horses and mules, 12 stallions of the best breed and 200 brood mares.

The "compounds" are reminders of the convict camps of the south. They are three in number, and each is a pen of iron and wire, surrounded by barbed wire fences 10 feet high to prevent escape. In the corrugated iron houses, which form three sides of the square, and whose doors open only toward the centre of the square, 3,500 natives live during the time of their contract, lasting six months. Each room holds 20 people, who sleep on bunks. They are Malays, Hottentots, Kaffirs, Fingoes and Bechuanas. Some are clothed and some are not. Some have their teeth filed to resemble a saw. Others have their heads shaved, leaving a fringe at the back. Some are tatooed and nearly all have holes in their ears to hold anything that comes to hand. Spoons, straws, feathers, stumps of cigars and cigarettes are carried in this manner.

Within each compound is a "commissary," where supplies are sold. Extending over the whole enclosure, which covers several acres, is a wire netting to prevent the throwing over of diamonds inclosed in tin cans, etc. This was done once. The natives look like crows in a cage. They are not allowed to leave the compounds during the time of their contract. The mine shaft is reached by means of an underground passage, and each man is searched after the day's work. No liquor is furnished. The pay is from 24 to 79 cents a day. These prisoners are kept in a detention room one week before their contract expires, where they wear gloves made of two discs of leather chained to their wrists. Their clothes are taken from them and examined, and at the end of a week they are turned loose, without the possibility of carrying away a diamond.

The Kimberley mine is the crater of an extinct volcanoe. The mouth of the crater is 312 feet below the surface of the prairie, and the shaft is 300 feet below that, making a total depth of 612 feet. Blue rock is raised to the surface by powerful machinery, where it is spread out in a field of about 200 acres and left to the mercy of the sun, rains and wind for a year, when it decomposes and falls apart. It is then brushed and washed twice or three times, and finally passed over shaking tables covered with a kind of grease which retains the diamonds while the refuge passes off. The germs are then washed in acid and taken to the valuator. Out of 3,000,000 tons of blue rock about 1,500 pounds of diamonds are obtained. A syndicate of diamond buyers takes the product of the mines.

TIRE PUNCTURES.

In Turkey they call the bicycle "the devil's chariot."—New York Telegram.

It is not considered good form for a red headed girl to ride a white bicycle. This is important news and should be remembered.—Kansas City Times.

The bicycle rider is not hard hearted. He sincerely regrets collisions with pedestrians, though his regret is not as keen as it used to be when wheels were higher in price.—Kansas City Journal.

Of course the Boston Globe editor is writing of the Boston maiden when he says—"In the case of the average bicycle girl distance lends enchantment to the view."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Arab chieftains and other high moguls of the race are eager to get any old bicycle they can lay their hands on. They learn to ride quickly and are proud and happy when mounted on what they call the "horse of the devil."

Some seed for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Menzies Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim adjoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16.80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Texas Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3¼cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.60 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3¼ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With [illegible] dances of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set in places. An ochre faced, villainous chief dances, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and bowings, spinning, flag waving, clattering—it is the accumulated uproar of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my darnedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

Smoking in the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye comes to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Ad-

JAPAN IN HER WAR PAINT.

On the Trail of the Bear—Hostilities With Russia May Not be Far Off.

New York, Nov. 7.—The probability of war between Russia and Japan before the spring is considered in a half page of cablegrams in the Herald to-day. Japan has a larger fleet in the east than Russia, and in pursuance of a design to acquire Korea and thwart Russia's Chinese schemes before the completion of the trans-Siberian railroad, may, the correspondence shows, make war in a few weeks.

The London Daily Mail, commenting on the report, says:—"Japan knows that her time for striking is now or in the forthcoming spring. That is to say, she must assail Russia before the completion of the trans-Siberian Railway, while the hands of France are tied by the Paris Exposition.

"If Japan takes the opportunity war is likely to have but one result. Russia was never more heavily handicapped, while Japan has never been better prepared. Both nations are suffering from the stringency of money, but the plight of Russia is infinitely worse than that of Japan in this respect. Russians are badly provided with ships in the far east, and they have a famine to contend with.

"We have before pointed out the strict neutrality of the Russians, and at the present moment it is by no means due to friendship for England. With the German Emperor's visit to England to occupy Russia in the east, Russia is hardly ready to adopt the suggestions of Dr Leyds at the present moment.

"It is for this reason that the threatened intervention for which France worked so vigorously a week or two ago is fading out of view."

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny,
The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

TO COMBINE AGAINST BRITAIN.

Report That the European Terriers Are Beginning to Yelp Again.

New York, Nov. 7.—A St. Petersburg despatch to an afternoon paper says; The numerous rumors that certain continental powers have been meditating for some sort of a combined move to the detriment of British interests are not without foundation.

It was learned from a high Russian source, and the information can be relied upon, that a definite attempt has been made to bring about a combination between Russia, France, Germany and Spain, with the effect of embarrising Great Britain in the settlement of the Transvaal question. Not merely have unofficial suggestions been made by one power to another, but the proposal has been formally discussed by the various Governments concerned.

Russia, France and Spain, as Count Muravieff found in the course of his recent journeys were agreed as to the desirability of intervention, but the success of the movement was wrecked by the refusal of Germany, the only one of the four powers directly interested in South Africa, to take part in the proposal.

The adhesion of Spain to the combination appears to have been desired for the purpose of isolating and considerably weakening the British position at Gibraltar.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet. One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and those lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up, shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner, 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 30 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lump—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

THE SECOND CONTINGENT.

No Definite Answer Yet—What the Militia Minister Says.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 7.—There is still no definite answer from the Imperial War Office regarding the offer of a second "bit of the thin, red line," from Canada. The idea in official circles is that the War Office is awaiting events, particularly, whether in the face of the position which General White now occupies, Major-General Sir Redvers Buller asks for more troops.

"I think that view of the matter very probable," said Hon. Dr. Borden to your correspondent this morning. "More troops may be required, and the longer the answer is delayed the more likely it seems to us that when it does come we shall find our offer accepted—at any rate we are making preparations."

"You have really started on the outfit, then?"

"Yes, we sent out several telegrams yesterday, and are making every preparation to have things in readiness so that when the contingent is accepted we will be able to fit it out in short order."

PERHAPS BY ACCLAMATION.

There Being no Split Among Liberals Mr. Latchford may not be Opposed.

Arnprior Nov. 6.—It is reported here that Mr T W McGarry, the Conservative candidate for the local House, will resign. It is said the Conservatives expected that Mr R A Jamieson would be brought out in opposition to Hon Mr Latchford by a section of the Liberal party at the convention yesterday, but Mr Latchford's nomination was moved by Mr Jamieson and made unanimous.

Cobourg citizens are talking of applying to the Government for an official audit of the town accounts.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. VIVID HEALTH

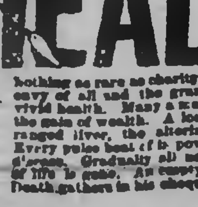
Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.

CO BO



Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will.

Every bottle of this universal blood-maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. [illegible] A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. CO BO, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries life and strength to every tissue, and gives health where once lurked death. END OF THE WORLD.

Numerous Prophets Whose Guesses Have Proved to be Wrong.

In 1521 Jean Stoffer, a German, plunged Europe into terror by predicting a universal deluge in 1524 "owing to the conjunction of several planets in a watery sign"—the watery signs are Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces. At his ominous words thousands fled to the mountains and others took refuge in boats. Awiol, a doctor of law and canon of Toulouse, even built a sort of ark on four pillars as a haven of refuge. There was no need of such excitement. No flood came. On the contrary the season was even calmer and drier than usual. Stofler had, indeed, made a serious blunder and one for which many of his fellow astrolgers, including Cardau, never pardoned him.

Stofler, however, is only one in a long list of prophets whose predictions in regard to the end of the world have proved utterly false. As far back as the year 1000 many communities were driven half distracted by rumors that the day of judgment was close at hand, and again, in 1186, whole cities were paralyzed with fright for the same reason. Now and again during the latter part of the middle ages the same extraordinary phenomnenon was witnessed, though in a lesser degree and ever since the modern revival of occultism there has not been wanting erratic prophets of the Jean Stofler type.

Years ago a Mr. Baxter created a sensation in England by his prediction that the world would certainly come to an end in 1887. Thousands believed in him and great was their surprise when they discovered that he was mistaken. Yet such is the credulity of human nature that their faith in him remained unshaken and no matter what year he selected as the final one of the world's existence, they accepted his prediction as gospel truth.

Abbe Dupin's Prediction.

Equally bold, though doubtless not as popular as Baxter, is the Abbe Dupin, cure of the village of Dion, in France, and author of a book with the following extraordinary title: "The grand coup or universal cataclysm will ravage the world between the 19th and 21st of September, 1896, according to the scriptures. The prophecies of the old and new testaments compare with those of the fathers and with the secrets of La Salette, in which is foretold the great war which will destroy nine-tenths of the human race, the coming of antichrist and his reign, after which the church will triumph over her enemies and the reign of Christ begin on earth." The author fixed September, 1896, as the time when the great "coup," as he called it, would take place, but he added that if it did not take place then it would certainly occur before the close of 1899.

The appearance of comets has frequently given rise to similar predictions. This was the case when the famous comet of 1680 appeared. Whiston ascribed the deluge to its former appearance, and such an excitement did it cause among all classes of the people that Bayle wrote a treatise to prove the absurdity of belief founded on these portents. Mme. De Levigne, writing at the same time, said;

"We have a comet of enormous size. Its tail is the most beautiful object conceivable. Every person of note is alarmed and believes that heaven, interested in their fate, sends them a warning in this comet. They say that the courtiers of Cardinal Mazarin, who is despaired of by his physicians, believe this prodigy is in honor of his passing away and tell him of the terror with which it has inspired them. He had the sense to laugh at them and to reply facetiously that the comet did him too much honor."

Scared by a Comet.

Camille Flammarion, the distinguished French astronomer, says on the same subject: "In this century predictions concerning the world have several times been associated with comets. It was announced that the comet of Biela, for example, would intersect the world's orbit on Oct. 29, 1832, which did as predicted. There was great excitement. Once more the end of things was declared at hand. Humanity was threatened. What was going to happen? The earth—that is to say, the path of the earth—had been confounded with the earth itself. The latter was not to reach that point of its orbit traversed by the comet until Nov. 30, more than a month after the comet's passage, and the latter was at no time to be within 20,000,000 leagues of us. Once more we got off with a good fright."

In his entertaining book, "La Fin du Monde," Mr. Flammarion gives a graphic description of a collision between the earth and a comet which is to take place some time in the twenty-fifth century. "These two moving bodies, the earth and the comet," he writes, "will dash like two trains rushing headlong upon each other with resistless momentum, as if impelled to mutual destruction by an insatiable rage. But in the present instance the velocity of shock will be 865 times greater than that of two express trains having each a speed of 100 kilometers an hour.

EVERY BOER A MARKESMAN.

His Surroundings Such That He Must Be Expert With the Rifle.

It is easy enough to see how the Boer became so expert with the rifle. History of 100 and more years ago in the northwest and the west of this country is repeating itself on the South African veldts. Every old State of the American Union, except Louisiana, was won from its red owners by the pioneer and his deadly rifle. For 200 years the Hollander who went to far-off South Africa and his descendants have fought wild beasts and wild men for the country they wanted. The Boer region of South Africa, producing fine wheat and corn crops, is very fertile. It has a native grass that live stock thrives on, with a climate very much like that of the country from southwestern Kansas to New Mexico. But to obtain this country the Boer had first to conquer it. This made him a sharpshooter. Every Boer is a hunter. He has to be. His farm is large, anywhere from 15,000 to 25,000 acres. The country is sparsely settled. The lion and other small cats and the hyena were the natural enemies of his flocks and herds. They had to be kept down by the Boer and later by the rifle. Kruger is himself is said to have killed 250 lions, not to speak of panthers and hyenas. Then the ever-present danger of a native outbreak caused the solitary farmer or Boer to see to it that he had the best arms available for defense and offense.

The Boer weapon that did such execution at Dundee the other day is the sporting model of the Mannlicher, a German arm, perhaps the most powerful weapon of its calibre and weight in the world. The military Mannlicher is used in the armies of Austria, Holland, Greece, Brazil, Chili, Peru and Roumania. The ideal Mannlicher is a sporting rifle known as the Haenel model. It is a beautifully finished arm, weighing about eight pounds, and costing in South Africa about $50. The rifle barrel is 30 inches long, the carbine 24. It has a pistol grip and sling straps, and is hair triggered. Its calibre is 30. This rifle has an extreme range of 4,300 yards, and a killing range of 4,000. At that distance, the bullet will go through two inches of solid ash, and nearly three of pine, quite enough force to kill, if the bullet struck a vital part. At 20 yards it will shout through 50 inches of pine.

HOLDING THEIR JOBS.

Sovereigns Rarely Abdicate Unless They Are Forced to It.

The rumor several times repeated and as often denied that the Czar would abdicate calls attention to the fact that the voluntary abdication of a reigning monarch is very rare.

Czars have been put out of the way. Czars have been murdered, but no Czars have ever abdicated. The Grand Duke Constantine, next brother and heir to Alexander I, gave up his right to the throne in the reign of Alexander in consequence either of his marriage with a woman not of royal rank or of his conscious unsuitability for the throne, and the younger brother, Nicholas I, succeeded, but this was not an abdication.

Indeed, the whole of the voluntary abdications in modern history might be counted on the fingers of one hand. English records afford no instance of an abdication, though English monarchs have been deposed often enough. The nearest approach to an abdication in English history was Richard Cromwell's resignation of the Protectorship.

In France there never was a voluntary abdication. Napoleon I signed abdications in 1814 and 1815 under the pressure of foreign invasion. Charles X and Louis Phillippe did the same thing in 1830 and 1848, respectively, under the pressure of revolution. All these abdications were made in favor of the heirs but were all rejected, and all the would-be abdicators had to leave the country.

No King of Prussia ever abdicated.

The first voluntary abdication was that of Emperor Charles V, King of Spain, the Netherlands, etc., in 1555, when he was 55 years old. In his case, ill-health was a predisposing cause, and he survived his abdication only three years.

In 1654, Christina, Queen of Sweden, daughter of the great Gustavus Adolphus, then aged 28, abdicated the throne which she had occupied since the age of six. Her misgovernment through favorites had caused a good deal of discontent; but her abdication may be termed voluntary.

The House of Savoy affords four examples of abdication within a century and three-quarters, one of which may be regarded as voluntary. Victor Amadeus II resigned without compulsion the Sardinian throne in 1730, in favor of his son. He tried in the following year to regain it. He failed and died in prison in 1732.

In Poland there were three cases of abdication, those of August II, in 1707; of Stanislas Lesacinski, in 1735, and of Poniatowski in 1795; but all three were brought about by foreign intervention.

Philip V, King of Spain, abdicated in favor of his son in 1724, a melancholy and inactive disposition being his only motive. The son died almost immediately, and the father resumed the government and nominally held it until his death in 1746.

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery in Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cultivate the young orchard thoroughly early in the season.

In selecting trees, take those with smooth, healthy looking bark.

Ground bone is good for small fruit plants, grapevines and bearing apple orchards.

The deeper the soil, the larger the reserve of moisture for the roots in time of drought. To secure quick growth prepare the soil deeply.

For four years Mr. Zingsheim suffered with piles but now his suffering has entirely vanished and he has gained twenty-five pounds.

John F. Zingsheim, Esq., of No. 9 Lark Street, Amsterdam, N Y., writes: "I was afflicted with piles for four years brought on by heavy lifting. My suffering was extreme and the piles gradually increased in size notwithstanding the fact that I tried many different kinds of treatment. After becoming physically incapacitated and unable to work at all, and after much hesitation I wrote to you. I am very happy to state that your advice has done me great good. You advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also his 'Pleasant Pellets.' They have cured me. I thank you most heartily for what you did for me. All suffering has entirely vanished and I have gained about twenty-five pounds in weight. I used only one bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of the 'Pellets.'"

Piles is a disease that is usually treated locally with ointments which are well enough in their way but do not touch the cause.

This is where Dr. Pierce's medicines excel—they cure the cause of disease and of necessity the disease itself disappears. Piles are caused by a severe inflammation of the lining of the rectum and lower intestines, and this inflammation is due to the presence of effete, poisonous matter. To cure it two things are necessary. 1st—thorough cleansing of the bowels; 2d—the soothing and cooling of the inflamed membranes.

The first is produced by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Two little 'Pellets'—about twice the size of a pin head—are a dose. They are the pleasantest cathartic known. They do not gripe but they do their work.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cools and purifies the blood and acts as a general tonic to the whole digestive system, neutralizing and eradicating all poisonous, irritating matter.

The patient who takes these two remedies will not only find his piles cured but will soon discover that his general health is greatly improved.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Caught Sure.

The Journal of Commerce, Montreal, is threatening to sue the Lindsay Council. The civic fathers, it appears, refuse to pay for the "write up" which was given the town by the paper, claiming that it was n. g. and not up to what was promised. Peterborough had similar experience, but our local rulers, who know a thing or two in spending good money, paid the bill. It is'nt safe to let our council loose when there is a skin game on. They would be caught sure.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Canal Association will be held in the Town Council Chamber on Tuesday next.

An effort is being made to have the station at the Grand Trunk railway in Port Hope moved from the south to the north side of the track.

Court Stanley A O F will attend divine service on Sunday evening, Nov. 12th, in the Murray street Baptist church, when the Rev Mr Bastow will preach the annual sermon.

Applications has been made to the Lindsay Council to have the street lighting franchise of the Culverwell Company extended 30 days.

Fresh Oysters, per pint, 30 and 35c, the Spot Cash Grocery Co.

Word was received at the Snowden House that the Cold Lake party had secured ten deer up to Saturday night. If any member of the party secures more than the law allows (which is two deer) the matter can be disposed of at once, and the guilty one punished, as our worthy Police Magistrate is a member of the party. He would probably be deprived of his buttermilk for 24 hours as a punishment, which would prove an everlasting example.

PERSONAL.

Mr J J Welsh, of Apsley, was in town yesterday.

Mr J Saulter, of Toronto, was in town yesterday and gave the Times a call.

Mr W Cochrane, who is now working the Belleville district in the interest of the Wrought Iron Range Co., was in town yesterday to meet his little daughter, Ada, who has just recovered from an attack of typhoid fever.

Mr J Alex Culverwell, the energetic manager of the Lindsay-Burleigh-Peterborough Power Transmission Company, is in town, and states that operations will be begun on the work at an early date.

Mr John Doherty, of Westwood, was in town yesterday, and favored the Times with a visit. Mr Doherty reports business good.

Mrs H W Gray and her daughter, little Miss Meta, are visiting friends in Orillia.

Mr and Mrs T F Matthews have returned home after a pleasant two months spent in England.

Mr. Eugene Coste, M. E., late mining engineer of Geological Survey, was in town yesterday. He is a director of the Burleigh Falls Power Company, and in company with Mr. Culverwell, and the New York bankers who are financing the company, paid a visit to Burleigh Falls on Monday and Tuesday. They were agreeably surprised at the fine power available and the facilities for cheap development.

Mr Wm Atkinson, representing the Brantford Carriage Company, is in town in the interest of his firm.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

Continued from page one.

A.—I suppose so.

Mr. Dennistoun—And Mr. Sheehy had a competent engineer over him all the time.

Q.—But the specifications call for 4 to 1. Why did you not follow the specifications there? Why did not Ald. McWilliams find something wrong in your contract?

A.—Ald. Langford told the finisher what dryer to use.

Q.—So that if Mr. Sheehy did not go according to contract you went him one better?

A.—Yes.

Q.—When you opened Sheehy's crossings you found out that the top was brittle. What do you mean by that?

A.—It would fly to pieces if it was struck by a hammer.

Q.—Did you not have to drill all around it before you struck it with the hammer the day I saw you breaking it?

A.—No, I did not.

The session adjourned for noon.

When the pavement investigation was resumed in the afternoon Mr. George Rose was still in the box and was cross-examined by Mr. Dennistoun, counsel for Mr. Sheehy. Mr. Dennistoun asked for the good points in Mr. Sheehy's work.

Mr. Rose said that he didn't see any good points. There were two crossings that were all right. As to the general appearance of the work Mr. Rose offered the opinion that he did not like the finish. It is, said Mr. Rose, too wavy.

WAS HE BIASED?

Q.—Is there anything else that you, as the great Government expert from the canal, can find fault with?

A.—I am not here to find fault.

Q.—Was there any wavy appearance in the work you did?

A.—No.

Mr. Dennistoun—Then it does not arise from any bad material for you used as much sand as Mr. Sheehy did.

Mr. Rose—I had a more experienced finisher than Mr. Sheehy.

Q.—Had your man any previous experience with this work?

A.—No.

Mr. Dennistoun—And Mr. Sheehy had had two men who had regularly learned the business. I want to find out how far you carry your animus against Mr. Sheehy. Can you say a good word at all for Mr. Sheehy's work?

A.—No, not where I have examined it.

Mr. Dennistoun tried to get the witness to say something good for Mr. Sheehy's work but the witness stuck to his points that his examination was not sufficient to disclose any merits. He then produced some pieces from Mr. Sheehy's contract and the witness pronounced them good concrete.

Q.—Knowing that Mr. Sheehy had given a five year bond for these walks was it fair of you, as one working man to another, to batter his work to pieces without telling him?

A.—Certainly, I think it was fair to do what the engineer told me.

Q.—During the seven or eight days you were knocking the pavements to pieces did you point out any defects to Mr. Sheehy?

A.—I did. He looked at it and said it had not set.

Q.—What did you tell Sheehy?

A.—I told him it had not bonded. I do not know whether there was any cement there to bond or not. Putting the cement in to dry might account for what I saw. If there was enough cement there was not enough water.

Q.—Do you know that Mr. Sheehy's crossings were laid by a different part of his gang, that owing to their having to be laid differently, it required a special gang of men to make a special trip back?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then it might be that the crossings are not a fair test at all, that a crossing might be found bad and all the rest of the work good?

A.—I do not know anything about that. I only know of the crossings.

MR. ROSE'S CONTRACT.

Q.—Did you ever get stone from the town yard?

A.—Yes, a couple of loads.

Q.—When men brought supplies to you did you give vouchers?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you give any for this stone from the town?

A.—No. That was kept track of by the man at the yard.

Mr. Dennistoun wanted the witness to show how he calculated what he had given as to the costs of the walks laid by him. Mr. Rose had not the figures with him, his books being at home. Mr. Dennistoun stated that the town treasurer's books would show that Mr. Rose's work had cost nearly 12 cents a square foot all round. Mr. Rose stated that he did not allow anything in his estimate for the stone got from the town yard and did not make any returns to the town treasurer for this stone but he allowed for the time of the men and team engaged in drawing it.

Q.—You say that you did not get fair play on your contract?

A.—That is right. I could not get plant or tools or supplies from the town. I could not get screens or anything else. Mr. Bartlett got everything he wanted. He got hose and rakes and all the tools he wanted and I hear his lumber bill came to $180.

Q.—Who was trying to kill you?

A.—I have my own opinion.

Q.—Was it Ald. McWilliams?

A.—No, I don't think it was.

Q.—The engineer?

A.—No, I don't think he had much to say about it anyway.

Q.—Who was it then?

A.—I have only my own opinion. It may have been wrong.

Q.—You will not state who it was who was impeding you. Perhaps you want to take this back?

A.—I do not want to take anything back. The chairman of the Board of Works seemed to be controlling everything.

Q.—Did you ever ask the chairman of the Board of Works for anything you did not get?

A.—No, the engineer was the man I was supposed to deal with.

Q.—Why don't you say that you have your knife out for the chairman of the Board of Works?

A.—I don't want to blame any man unless I am sure of it.

Mr. Dennistoun questioned the witness at length to find out whom he suspected of interfering with him and keeping back the work of the town, but Mr. Rose refused to state that he suspected any one alderman though he had his opinion.

COMPOSITION OF SAND.

Q.—Are you aware that some sand is composed of all granite?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Can you state how much granite there was in the sand used by Sheehy and you?

A.—No. I do not know that there was any granite in it.

Q.—But all the granite in the sand was fit to go into the pavement?

A.—Yes, if I believed there was any granite in it.

Q.—But you would be satisfied to let all the granite in the sand go into the pavement?

A.—Yes, if you could separate it and show what part was granite.

Q.—Then it all comes down to a question as to what the sand was composed of before you could condemn it?

A.—Yes.

Mr. Dennistoun—Thanks, that is the first straight answer you have given this afternoon. You appear to have practised your evidence for only one side of the case.

DAVE CONROY'S DEER.

A Bad Mixup in Which the Magistrate Gets Non-Plussed.

Some time ago Mr Dave Conroy, the "Deer banker," lost a valuable pet deer, and offered $25 reward for its recovery, "dead or alive." Byram M Wylie, who is considerable of a dead game sport himself, undertook to "locate" said deer. He was not long in doing so, Henry Bickle, a Smith farmer, being charged with the theft of the animal. He was first charged with killing the deer but Dave thought that he would get off too easily, and laid an information charging Bickle with theft. It appears that a young man named Cuttis, in Bickle's employ, killed the animal. At the court yesterday morning Curtis swore that he did so on the instructions of Bickle. The latter and his wife went into the witness box and swore that Curtis had no such orders. Magistrate Edmison remarked that it was apparent that either side was committing perjury and he could not see his way to make a conviction. The accused was dismissed. E B Stone defended Bickle.

Silver Wedding.

Mr and Mrs Osway, Carver, North Monaghan, celebrated their silver wedding on Monday last. Upwards of forty invited guests were present to join in doing honor to the happy event. After a recherche supper, the Rev O C Elliott was voted to the chair, and addresses of a congratulatory nature were made by the chairman, Messrs T M Hunter, G H May and J Wilson. The remainder of the evening was spent in pleasant enjoyment. Many costly and beautiful presents testified to the esteem in which the host and hostess are held by their friends.

Ozo Tea, the Spot Cash.

"Ev'ry Month" for November.

In Ev'ry Month for November, under the title of Marketing in Many Countries, the decline of the open air market in America, and its still-existing European popularity is treated in a graphic and interesting manner, and is accompanied by a series of illustrations of the market-places of many lands. A timely sketch of The Presidents of Some Women's Clubs contains information concerning the purpose of the best known women's clubs in New York, together with photographs of the representative heads of these associations. Cats Famous and Fashionable describes the present fad for high bred felines and reproduces the prize winners of the latest shows; and, although it is not in the power of everyone to own a pet for which $5,000 has been refused, still the article is entertaining as showing the length to which fashion will go when it takes up a fancy. Always well selected for its dramatic situations, the page of illustrations From the Plays of the Month is especially so in the present number, embracing as it does photographs of Becky Sharpe and The Only Way—the dramatizations of Thackeray's Vanity Fair, and Dickens' Tale of Two Cities. Two well-written short stories, A White Occasion and From Soul to Soul supply the necessary fiction, and the usual Fashion and Floral departments. November Novelties and Window Gardening are both worth reading.

The regular features of four pieces of music is always worthy of comment, and in this issue are unusually well chosen. A splendid contralto sea song, Davy Jones, by Chas. D. Bingham, will be greatly appreciated as good contralto songs are so rare; The Little Amazon Military Schottische, by Eduard Holst, is a peculiarly dashing and brilliant piano piece, and one that is sure to become a special favorite with teachers for its admirable fingering possibilities; Just One, a sentimental song by Chas. Miller, is simple and pathetic, and has a most attractive melody; while Shifting Lights Skirt Dance has a fascinating swing and is sure to win popular favor.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

MURDEROUS BURGLARS

While Defending His Property John Vascoe Was Shot

ROBBER FATALLY WOUNDED

Nemesis Swift and Fateful Step Pursues the Burglars.

McIntosh and Williams Raid Varcoe's Store in Toronto, and Shoot Him When Disturbed—One Seriously Injured by a Fall, the Other Shot on the Street.

Toronto, Nov. 9.

John E Varcoe, a grocer, who carried on business at 182 Queen-st. east and lived over his store, was cruelly assassinated about half-past one o'clock this morning by two burglars, who were disturbed and resisted while ransacking and robbing his premises. Both burglars were captured, one after being chased and fatally shot by Police Constable Dixon, of No. 2 division. The other was so badly injured by a fall from a window to the concrete sidewalk below that he lay stunned until he, too, was secured. The event was so sudden and tragical that it formed the topic of general conversation to-day and the scene was visited by thousands.

Nine in the House.

Last night, after the close of business, the regular occupants of the house retired as usual. There were nine people on the premises: Mr Varcoe, who is murdered; Mr Al. Varcoe, a brother; Frank Armstrong, who manages Mr Varcoe's store on Shater street; Noel Thomas, an employee; Mrs Armstrong, who kept house; her two daughters, Miss Look, a lodger, and little Meta, the six year old daughter of Mr Varcoe.

Al. Varcoe, Armstrong and Thomas occupied a room on the first flat; Mr Varcoe and his little daughter were in a room on the top flat, and the ladies were in other parts of the same. The first intimation of trouble was when the two burglars, who are Henry Williams and James McIntosh, were heard by the three men on the first flat. All was dark, of course, and when one of the occupants demanded who was there, the two invaders entered the room and theatened to shoot any one who would create a disturbance. They also demanded money, and on being told that none was there they asked where the boss was. One of the three said he was upstairs, whereupon one remained with drawn revolver to restrain the trio below while his accomplice crept quietly upstairs to the upper storey to attack Mr Varcoe.

Varcoe Shot.

His little daughter awoke and screamed, and Mr Varcoe was then told to lie still or he would be shot. The commotion had the effect of drawing the lower burglar up to the aid of his partner, and together they proceeded to search Mr Varcoe's pockets. For a short time he lay still, but finally he leaped out of bed and attacked the pair. Both fired and the unfortunate man received two bullets in the groin. The murderers dashed downstairs to escape. The ladies had, of course, been aroused by the deadly combat, and great confusion reigned. Williams and McIntosh made for the window overlooking the store door, smashed the large pane of glass which forms the lower half, and were in the act of crawling out upon the ledge when Thomas dealt Williams a terrible blow with a chair which hurled him to the pavement, a distance of nearly 15 feet. He alighted on his head and received severe injuries, which incapacitated him so far as any attempt to escape was concerned.

Pursuit of McIntosh.

McIntosh, unharmed, darted out on the ledge, which is about 18 inches wide, ran along it several yards and then lowered himself quickly until he hung by his hand. He held a 38 calibre Smith and Weston revolver in the right hand, and before he dropped he trusted himself to the left arm alone and with the right he fired at Constable Dixon, who had in the meanwhile arrived on the scene and was directly below him. Dixon stepped behind a telephone pole and waited for his man to drop. McIntosh fell, regained his feet and dashed eastward, cutting across the road in a diagonal direction towards the hotel on the corner of Queen and Sherbourne streets. Dixon was after him and only a few feet away. Once, twice, thrice he fired at the flying burglar, and just when the fugitive had reached the second door below Queen street on the east side of Sherbourne-st., Dixon fired a fourth shot, which struck the burglar in the right hip, penetrated his bowels and turned down his left leg, whence it was subsequently extracted by the doctors. Dixon leaped on his man, wrestled his big revolver from him and took him to the patrol box. An alarm was sent in, and on the arrival of the patrol wagon the prisoner was taken to the police station, but was later on removed to the General Hospital.

THE BANQUE VILLE MARIE.

Judge Wurtele Gives Judgment on a Technical Point.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Mr. Justice Wurtele gave judgment this morning in the case of Wm. Weir, president, F W Smith, director, and F X Lemieux, accountant, of the Banque Ville Marie, who are accused of having furnished the Government with a false statement of the bank's standing. On behalf of the defendants Mr. Donald McMaster, Q. C., had entered demurrers to the indictment, but His Honor this morning held that the indictment though ungrammatical was good in law and disallowed the demurrers. The accused and E. Lictenhein, vice-president of the bank, were arraigned and pleaded not guilty. The court allowed a separate trial in each case and that of Wm. Weir, the first to be taken up, was fixed for the 15th inst.

TO SHELL PORTO CABELLO.

General Castro Notifies Non-Combatants to Withdraw From the City.

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 9.—General Castro has asked Mr F B Loomis, dean of the diplomatic corps, to inform the Ministers and Consuls here and elsewhere that he will attack Porto Cabello, which has not surrendered, as reported, by land and sea on Friday. This is a notification for the non-combatants and foreigners to leave the town, which will be shelled from two forts, while the defending forts will be fired upon by Castro's battery. His armed vessels will also take part in the engagement.

General Paredes, who violated a flag of truce by arresting General Bolivar, alias Ruiz, Castro's envoy, yesterday, will, it is announced be hanged if captured.

Hon. J. R. Stratton at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—Hon J R Stratton arrived here this morning on his way to South Renfrew. He will leave for the riding to-night and will address a couple of meetings there.

Hon G W Ross is expected here to-night and will speak a Renfrew to-morrow. Mr Stratton, who has many friends at Ottawa, was the recepient of numerous congratulations to-day on his recent appointment to the Cabinet and his election afterwards by acclamation.

New Policy by two Emperors.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The Berlin correspondent of the Galois says the interview at Potsdam yesterday between Emperor William and the Czar resulted in decisions of the highest importance which will shortly have considerable consequences in modifying the policy of the two powers.

The Fatal Wedding.

New York, Nov. 9.—Mrs Marion O'Donnell Davey, a dressmaker, who has been making the trousseau of Mrs Hasen, died of heart disease last evening. She had been working incessantly for two weeks on the trousseau.

Will Withdraw Troops.

New York, Nov. 9.—In order to avoid the charge of militarism President McKinley, The Herald says, has determined to withdraw from Cuba and Porto Rico many of the troops now in those islands. In Cuba there are now 391 officers and 10,796 men, and in Porto Rico 108 officers and 3,290 men.

FUTURE GOVERNING OF THE TRANSVAAL REPUBLIC.

Lord Salisbury's Speech at the Lord Mayor's Banquet Expected to be of Very Great Importance.

WILL THE PROTECTORATE AGAIN BE RESTORED?

Brilliant Action Outside Colenso—Armored Encounters and Routs the Boers—Troopship Puts Into Port Disabled Latest News From Ladysmith Says That All is Well.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The latest official news regarding the position of Ladysmith is contained in a despatch from General Buller. It covers the period up to Sunday last and indicates that the effect of the sorties made by General White on the previous Thursday and Friday was to disorganize the besiegers to such a to disorganize the besiegers to such a great extent that they were unable to keep up their bombardment, which was suspended for two days—Saturday and Sunday—but was expected to be renewed on Monday. If this expectation was fulfilled Ladysmith has been under bombardment for four days, though it does not appear that the British have much to fear from the Boer artillery, judging by past performances. General White has, however, prepared for all contingencies by removing the non-combatants within his lines to a secure position, and, as it is likely he has followed the usual method of erecting bomb-proof shelters for his men, there is no reason to fear lossesfrom artillery fire.

Indications are that it will not be long before the cordon of Boers around Ladysmith will be broken. The investment is not proving half so formidable as was anticipated, probably owing to the ignorance of the Boers regarding siege tactics, and their inability to bring any consistent method. The long-range guns of General White are evidently holding the burghers at such a distance that their circle of investment is perforce a very thin one, easily pierced. The passage to and fro of armored trains, and the victory of one of them over the Boers near Colenso, reported this morning, is ample proof of this. The despatch of a small body of troops from Estcourt, evidentlytowards Ladysmith, is another illustration, as it indicates an attempt to reinforce the army there, which would not be made except by a large force were the town strongly besieged.

It is stated on excellent authority that Lord Salisbury will this evening interpret obscure passages in the recent speech proroguing Parliament, and that he will distinctly declare that it is the intention of the Government to regard Kruger's ultimatum as a revocation of the treaty, which recognized the independence of the Transvaal after the war of 1881. The effect of this, of course, is to declare the Transvaal a British protectorate, which was its status prior to the conflict which Mr. Gladstone so disgracefully terminated.

A BRILLIANT SKIRMISH.

Estcourt, Natal, Nov. 5.—Details were received from the armored train, which returned from Colenso, to-day, of a brilliant performance. The train, which carred two companies of the Dublin Fusiliers under Captain Romer, sighted, near Colenso, the Boers in considerable force near the line. The Fusiliers immediately opened a brisk fire, which the Boers replied to ineffectively and, as they were suffering loss, they quickly retired out of sight. But as the train cautiously advanced, the Boers were seen moving around on its left flank, their presumed obejct being to take the train in the rear; to avoid this, the train retired. It was then seen that the Boers had no intention of attacking, but were in full retreat over the road and bridge. Immediately a strong detachment left the train and entered the town, while the train slowly advanced to the station. Several volleys at long range were fired on the retreating enemy. The British also succeeded in entering Fort Wylie near Colenso, and brought back four wagon loads of shells, provisions and stores.

LORD SALISBURY'S INTENTION.

London, Nov. 9.—The absence of stirring war news and the rehabilitation in the estimation of the British public of General White, who since his reverse at Nicholson's Nek, certainly appears to have used his central position to successfully strike at different points of the circle of investment, thus restoring confidence in his ability to hold the Boers in check, has permitted public attention to momentarily revert to the political features of South Africa, and conflict is confidently predicted in some quarters.

Salisbury's Intention.

Lord Salisbury, at the Lord Mayor's banquet to-night, will outline the Government's policy in regard to the future government of the Transvaal and Orange Free State, and explain that the references in the Queen's speech to "military operations," not war, and restoring peace and good government to "that portion of my empire" meant nothing more or less than that, in the opinion of the Government, President Kruger, by making war on the Queen, destroyed all claims to independence granted by the convention of 1881 and 1884, and consequently the country had reverted to its previous status and is, theoretically, part of the Queen's dominions.

Foreign Understandings.

As the Associated Press pointed out at the time, the phraseology of the Queen's speech could not be otherwise explained than that at the time of the speech the Republics of South Africa had already ceased to exist as separate nations. But if Lord Salisbury is prepared, at this early stage of the operations to definitley announce his policy of the future, when, apparently, so many problems remain to be solved, both during and after the war, he must have already reached more definite understandings with several of the powers than the public is aware. The Premier's speech, therefore, is awaited with unusual interest, and it seems certain that he will at least be able to announce that the talk of European intervention is groundless.

ALL RIGHT AT LADYSMITH.

London, Nov. 9.—The War Office received the following despatch from General Buller this morning, dated Cape Town, Wednesday, November 8, 11.50 p.m.:

"Colonel Kekewich telegraphs from Kimberley, November 5, that all is well there and that there has been no serious attack yet. A slight bombardment did no damage. Information from Mafeking shows that place was safe October 27. Col. Plumer had a successful engagement near Fort Tuli, October 26.

"General White reports by pigeon post that the wounded and some civilians from Ladysmith have been removed four miles down the railroad, by an arrangement with General Joubert, to a neutral place, to save them from the bombarding.

"Ninety-nine wounded from Dundee have been sent in under a flag of truce. They are all doing well, including the following officers: Col. C. E. Beckitt, Major F. Hammersley, Captain F. Ladam, Lieut. McLachlan, Major Boulthee, Captain Dibley, Lieut. C.N. Pereau, Lieut. C. A. Wortham, Major W Davidson, and Lieut. D. T. Weldon.

"The bombardment was discontinued November 5, but it is expected to recommence November 6."

AN OMINOUS QUIETNESS.

London, Nov. 9.—Beyond the crop of ever recurring rumors, mostly without foundation, there is little news from the front. There is nothing, apparently, to justify the triumphant utterances in the British press. While it is admitted that there is some room for congratulation there is, it is added, also room for grave fear. The announcement yesterday that 30,000 Boers with big guns had left Pretoria on their way to the southern border is said to be merely a ruse to hide the real destination of this force, which it is believed is Ladysmith. Those who are best qualified to express an opinion on the subject believe that the quiescence of the Boers is ominous, and they expect shortly to hear of large accessions to the Boer guns in position and a severe bombardment of the beleaguered camp. The restoration of railroad communication, therefore, is seemingly a matter of the most urgent importance, as, probably, General White's most pressing need at present is a supply of ammunition for the naval guns, of which several truck loads are understood to be at Estcourt awaiting a clear line. It is considered doubtful if this will reach General White in time, as it may be taken for granted that a determined attack will be made on the town in a very few days.

St. Vincent, Verde Islands, Nov. 9.—The British transport Persia with a squadron of the Inniskilling Dragoons, a hospital detachment and munitions of war on board, has been towed here with her thrust shaft broken and other damage done. She was picked up by a tug close to some rocks and was towed twenty-two miles.

MUST PAY A HIGH PRICE.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The morning papers have long accounts of an interview with Dr. Leyds, the special representative in Europe of the Transvaal Government, who argues that the Transvaal has everything to gain by remaining independent and that her mining laws are the most liberal in the world and prevent capitalists from obtaining monopolies. In the course of his remarks Dr. Leyds repeats President Kruger's assertion that if the Republics must eventually belong to England the latter will pay a price for them which will astound the world. The war, to which the Transvaal has been forced Dr. Leyds asserts, has demonstrated to the whole world the courage and chivalry of this little people, which even their enemies do not hesitate to recognize.

TO BE KEPT FROM AFRICA.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—As a result of instructions from the Emperor a military order has been issued to the commanders of districts, in which his Majesty expresses his wish that no Prussian officers be granted leave to go to South Africa. The order adds that everything is to be done to prevent former Prussian officers from taking part in the conflict in South Africa, his purpose being to avoid every appearance of violation on the part of Germany of the strict neutrality which the Emperor says should be observed.

KRUGER AND PRIVATEERS.

London, Nov. 9.—Much has been said regarding the intention of the Transvaal to issue letters of marque authorizing the equipment of privateers to be used against the British. Up to the time of the treaty of Paris in 1856, which put an end to the Crimean war, European nations regarded as regular combatants all pritical craft provided with letters of marque, but at that epoch representatives of the allied nations who had taken part in the war and Russia herself decided that in future maritime powers signatories of the treaty, that is to say, England, France, Turkey and Sardinia, would not recognize letters of marque. Several countries signified their addition to this clause of the treaty afterwards, and at present all the European Governments, with the exception of Spain, have abolished this system of naval warfare. It may be mentioned that Spain during the recent Spanish-American war did not avail herself of her right to employ privateers, so that as far as Europe is concerned this custom of warfare has lapsed. Authorities do not consider that the Transvaal has any right to issue letters of marque seeing that she is not a maritime power, and this view appears to be the correct one. However, the concensus of civilized opinion against privateering forms an unwritten law which President Kruger will not likely contravene for fear of arousing the enmity of Christendom. Besides, he has no seaboard, and consequently no port at which privateers can be refitted, which is another strong argument against his taking any such course.

Tried to Steal $10,000.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 9.—Last night two masked men entered the office of the Kent furniture factory and made a daring attempt to rob the cashier. One of the men, flourished a revolver, jumped over the railing before the latter's desk and made a grab at a pile of $10,000 lying exposed. Before he could get away with it, however, he was seized by two employes and held until the police came. His companion escaped.

JOY IN HASTINGS

Over the Acquittal of Young Anderson at Winnipeg.

When the news from Winnipeg reached Hastings that John W. Anderson was acquitted of the charge of robbing the Molson's Bank at Winnipeg, there was great joy in his native village. Several congratulatory telegrams were flashed over the wires to him. Yesterday evening at a concert in the town hall, when one of the performers made mention of his acquittal the audience rose in a body and gave three lusty cheers and a tiger for Anderson. Afterwards Detective Davis was burned in effigy on the street corner before an immense crowd of spectators, which again cheered for Anderson. Arrangements are being made to give Anderson a warm reception on his return to Hastings.

Generosity Appreciated.

Last evening the members of the 57th Battalion paraded at their armouries and received their annual drill pay. It is understood that Lieut.-Col. Bell, knowing the men would have to wait some time while the pay roll passed through the Militia Department, generously advanced the necessary funds from his private bank account. Member of the corps fully appreciate this generosity, as weeks might have elapsed before they were paid through the regular channel.

Week of Prayer.

The Peterborough Branch of Y.W.C.A. observe the week of prayer, by holding four special services in the Rooms, 163 Brock street, as follows—

Sunday—4.15 p.m., Teacher, Rev. Mr. Armitage.

Tuesday—3 p.m., Teacher, Miss Forsyth.

Thursday—4. p.m., Teacher, Mrs. (Rev). Bastow. Miss Fife will deliver an address on the Y. W. C. A. work in colleges.

Saturday—8. p.m., Teacher, Rev. Mr. Potter.

World's Motto—"Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Let all members endeavon to be present at some of the services, if they cannot attend all.

Literary Note.

The war in South Africa between the British and the Boers is awakening an intense interest in the dark continent, the land toward which the world's immigration of coming years will be directed. Most opportunely comes the announcement that William Harding, New York cable editor of the Associated Press, has a book on Africa nearly ready, entitled "War in South Africa—The Dark Continent from Savergy to Civilization," to be published this month by The Dominion Company of Chicago. Mr. Harding should be eminently qualified to prepare a comprehensive and valuable work on this bubject. Not only has he traveled extensively in the dark continent, but for years all cable information from Africa and the old world has passed through his hands before being given to the American public. The forthcoming volume will contain a full account of Africa from the earliest ages to the present day, including a detailed account of the causes and events of the British-Boer war.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Continuation of Investigation Before Judge Weller.

MR. ROSE GIVES EVIDENCE.

Mr. A. J. Raddon, Government Tester, Gives Expert Testimony.

Star Cement Comes Up to Government Requirements—Some Ensign Cement Comes Up to the Standard, Some Does Not—The Standard is a Reasonable One.

Q.—Do you think that the engineer in the specifications intended to have sand used to fill the voids?

A.—If there was not enough fine stuff in the granite to fill the voids I would certainly say put in sand.

Mr. Rose looked at one of the specimens in court made in the proportion of 9 feet granite, 9 feet sand, and 5 1-2 bags cement and stated that it appeared to be good concrete. It was good enough for sidewalks if it was all mixed like the piece in court. Witness believed the pavement laid by himself as good as the piece in court. Sheehy's pavement made of the same proportions should be just as good if it was properly mixed. One of the pieces of the Water-st pavement produced in court Mr. Rose stated that he had cut it with a chisel in seven places to lift it. The reason that he did so was that he had heard rumors around town that he was smashing the pavement to pieces with a hammer.

THE HOLLOW PLACES.

About the separation of the surface from the base the witness stated either that the surface was put on when the base was too dry or there was too much sand in the base. If Mr. Sheehy used the same proportions as witness did it was likely due to the former cause that the surface was detached. Witness knew from the hollow sound of the crossing at Dr. Halliday's that there was a space between the surface and base. The whole crossing is that way. Where there is a hollow place it can be learned from the sound.

DEFECTS NOT PERMISSABLE.

Q.—You would expect, Mr. Rose, that a man doing 50,000 square feet of granolithic walk in a season might have to do some little places over again?

A.—Well, I don't know. Not if the work was done right.

Q.—Did you ever lay pavement before?

A.—No.

Q.—Where did you get your experience?

A.—Well, I did concrete work on the canal. I calculate that I can do as good a piece of concrete as anybody.

A WAGER SUGGESTED.

Q.—You think your pavement better than Mr. Sheehy's?

A.—Yes, I think it is.

Q.—Are you sporty enough to put up $25 to back your pavement against Mr. Sheehy's, His Honour the Judge to give the $50 to some charity?

A.—I would not make any such bet.

Q.—Then you will not accept my little challenge?

A.—I have no money to bet on it.

Mr. Rose here interposed that he feared he would be late getting back to his work at Burleigh. Mr. Dennistoun stated that Mr. Rose must give the figures showing how he had estimated the cost of his work.

NO PERSONAL CHARGE.

Q.—Are you and Mr. Sheehy good friends?

A.—Yes.

Q.—How long have you known him?

A.—Since he was a boy.

Q.—Do you know that he had some big contracts this year?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You know that he is a man that enjoys the general esteem of the public?

A.—I do not know about that.

A.—You make no charge against him personally?

A.—No.

Q.—And you know no grounds for making a charge against him personally?

A.—No.

Q.—If Mr. Sheehy took wide sidewalks at 14 cents a foot against your narrow sidewalks at 18 cents where would his profit come in?

A.—I don't think there would be much in it. I don't see where it would come in. A 4 foot sidewalk ought to be worth 19 cents.

Q.—Would you mind making some samples for Sheehy as you did for the others?

A.—O, Sheehy is able to make them for himself.

A WARM DEBATE.

Ald. Langford then put some questions to Mr. Rose—

Ald. Langford—When you started this work where did you get your orders?

A.—Mr. Hay told me the proportions were 2 to 1 and 6 to 1 and to go to Mr. Ranney and get the size of the boxes.

Q.—Then you started to work? How much had you put on before I came along?

A.—One batch.

Q.—What did I say to you?

A.—9 feet granite, 9 feet sand and 5 1-2 of cement.

Q.—You stated a moment ago that your memory was rather bad. Now jog it. Did I not tell you that you were not using enough cement?

A.—I do not remember you saying anything of the kind.

Q.—Did you not say to me that Mr. Ranney had told you to use a box of granite, a box of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement? You had in the first batch used only 3 bags. I pointed this out to you and the explanation came out afterwards and it was three bags with half a batch of concrete.

Mr. Rose—There never was any such conversation occurred. If any man says that I used only 3 bags of cement in a batch he tells an absolute falsehood.

Ald. Langford—Did I ever give you any orders on the work?

A.—No. You gave them to Mr. Wolstenholme.

Q.—Mr. Wolstenholme will tell that for himself. Did I ever give you any?

A.—No.

FRAUDULENT ELECTIONS.

The result of the North Waterloo election trial at Toronto, before Justices Meredith and Osler, is, that 20 persons are reported for bribery and two are found guilty of tampering with ballots. The recipients of the bribes, which were proved to have been paid, ought to be disfranchised for a wholesome length of time. As for those who tampered with ballots, their offence is one recognised and a punishment provided for in the criminal law. The offence is really forgery and involves perjury in some cases. In other instances it is the theft of, or destruction of property. On the lowest ground, viewed as a property privilege, a ballot paper is a highly valuable document. The right to cast a ballot has cost some voters heavy sacrifices. The facts of bribery being practised proves ballots to have a monetary value. The destinies of a country may be changed by a small number of ballots, and men may get control of the entire revenues of a nation by manipulating ballot boxes. To secure such a stake, or some office, unprincipled politicians will grovel in the mire of electoral crimes. Manifestly it is a very dangerous thing to hand the government of a country over to men who have won their positions by a mean form of rascality, by absolute crime. These election scandals are a menace to business interests, as they prove that it is feasible to secure by fraud authority to guide the legislation of the country.

The operators recently condemned by Justices Meredith and Osler, secured an appointment as sworn election officials. They had the handling of ballot papers placed by voters in the ballot box. By some "devilish cantrip slight," as Burns says in Tam O'Shanter, they learnt how each ballot was marked. If one was in favour of their party opponent they spoiled it by making a second mark by which it was vitiated. This was done by a small piece of lead pencil fixed under the finger nail by glue, which fixture, though practically invisible, enabled a mark to be made by the person so fraudulently equipped. The trick showed a deliberate intention to commit crime, as the operators had been instructed in the art of fixing these nail-pencils, and of detecting which ballots to so mark as to destroy.

The possibility of so tampering with ballot papers ought not to exist. To avoid the risk is a very easy matter. The ballot in Ontario is manifestly not secret, nor is there open voting. The system allows the ballots to become exposed to certain officials. These officers are appointed by the Government of the day, so that, by such espionage, the authorities are able to hold a whip over the heads of any class of voters they choose to hold in subjection.

Such a system is unmanly, it is demoralizing. It pretends to be the thing it is not, for, pretending to be a secret ballot system it is so arranged as to expose all ballots to the observation of officials who, by it, are able to record how every elector has voted, just as well as if open voting was practised. Beyond the absolute theft of the voter's ballot; the wrong done to the other electors; the fraud practised on the Legislature; and the defilement of a constituency by tampering with ballots, there is declared to be a gross fraud practised upon the party charged with concocting these crimes. "An enemy has done this" is loudly proclaimed by the accused. Certainly no enemy of a political party could do it a fouler wrong than unjustly to fix upon such party the disgrace of tampering with ballot boxes and ballots. Election scandals, which disgrace Canada before the world, will continue while the present hypocritical ballot system of Ontario is maintained as it suggests and facilitates fraud.

THEN AND NOW.

Those who persist in talking about Great Britain's "lust for gold" as the cause of the trouble with the Transvaal might ask themselves what caused British annexation of the Transvaal in 1877.

All that was offered to Britain in 1877 was a bloody war with the Zulus, who were threatening to exterminate the Boers. She took the offer and saved the Boers, believing that it meant the preservation of South Africa for white men's equal rights.

For the same cause Great Britain fights now.

There was no gold then. The gold has counted for no more since, save as it increased the number of white men in the Transvaal to whom equal rights were denied, and to a proportionate extent increased the howl of those who felt hurt.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Boer battle song will be a hard thing for the British to go up against. Here it is—

Wddi hoog nou in ons heldre lug.
Transvaalsche vrijheidsvlag!
Onz vijande nou zijn weggevlug,
Nou blinkt 'n blijer dag.

* * *

Supposing it's true the British were only looking for gold in South Africa, it naturally surprises them to find so much lead.

* * *

Naturally nobody at Kimberley is more anxious things shall not come to a head in an unpleasant way than Cecil Rhodes.

Although the Canadians soldiers went off in the Sardinian, it is to be remembered that they are no sardines.

* * *

Dewey is proceeding according to rule. The engagement at Manila is to be followed by the marriage at Washington.

* * *

Assuming that stuffing the ballot box can be headed off, will a time ever come when stuffing the voters will cease to be a political industry?

* * *

Those guns at Ladysmith with a long range naturally tends to make things hot.

* * *

In his first despatch Sir George Stewart White manfully took the responsibility on himself for the loss of his two regiments, but on further thought he seems to have concluded to blame it on the mules.

* * *

In a letter to the Boston Herald, which was written just before the outbreak of hostilities, the Rt. Rev. Anthony Gaughran, Roman Catholic bishop of Kimberley, has set forth in no uncertain terms that England seldom has a more just cause for a war than for the one she is now waging in South Africa. "The state of things in the Transvaal," writes Bishop Gaughran, "was a scandal to the nations * * * I am not an Englishman, as you know, nor are my sympathies in general with England, but in this case I do believe that England will do credit to our common humanity by forcing a small state calling itself a republic to give equal rights to all.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

An Unpredictable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

An effort is being made to re-organize the Port Hope Agricultural Society, which has for some years been defunct.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

Nothing seems to be said about what Spain is going to do at the Paris exposition. It might at least make a display of mananas.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

INDIANS DON WAR PAINT.

They Attack a Hacienda and Kill One of Its Occupants—Brave Defenders Vanquished.

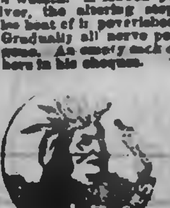
Guaymas, Mexico, via Nogales, Ariz. Nov. 8.—The Yaqui Indians have killed Nettleton, an American, and carried a German into captivty. They have renewed hostilities in the lower Yaqui valley, and the people in the river towns in that section are again on the defensive. A soccial courier arrived to-day with intelligence of the terrible fight between Nettleton, the American, and Rossick, the German, and Indians at Cajame Haciend, near Bacom, last Saturday night. The two men were overseers of the property. At the beginning of the attack, shortly before daylight, they made a brave defense, and used their arms effectively, but the doors of the house were battered down and in the hand to hand battle that ensued Nettleton was shot and clubbed to death. Rossick, although wounded, was spared. After taking all the provisions in sight and their prisoner, the Indians withdrew to the south side of the river. Three Americans have been killed by the Indians since July.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 26 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians, probably through the Phoenicians.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing as rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.



CO BO

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will.

Every bottle of this universal blood-maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evidence disease tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. CO BO, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries life and strength to every tissue, and gives back health when once lurked death. WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican-Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his

Winnipeg, Nov. 8.—At the assizes today, Anderson, formerly clerk in the Molsons' Bank, accused of robbing that institution of $62,000, was acquitted by the jury. THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

BRITAIN RETIRES FROM SAMOA.

Germans Will Take Possession, But England Obtains Exceedingly Valuable Concessions in the South Pacific—Only One Island for Uncle Sam.

London, Nov. 8.—The Samoan question has been settled, and Germany, as was to be expected, has obtained the largest slice of land, though at the cost of extensive concessions to Great Britain in other parts of the South Pacific Ocean. The agreement, officially announced from Berlin will, of course, depend upon the acquiescence of the United States, who, as a solatium, is given the second largest island of the Samoan group—Tutuila—where Germany takes Savaii, the largest, and Opolu, the smallest, and Great Britain relinquishes her rights in the islands altogether. But it must be admitted that she has not done so without a substantial recompense. The two best islands of the Solomon group, which lie due east of New Guinea and northeast of Australia, have been ceded to her and will add two more links to the chain of British stations in the Pacific.

But this is not all. Germany renounces her claim, a shadowy one at the best, to the Friendly Islands, visited by the renowned Captain Cook, and which lie almost south of Samoa, together with the small and isolated Savage Island near them to the east. None of the islands are intrinsically of great value. But they are all in close proximity to the steamship routes between the American Pacific coast and Australia and between Chinese and Japanese ports and Australia, and are therefore of great importance to British commerce. It is quite possible that the silence of Germany regarding the Transvaal war and European intervention may have a great deal to do with her acquisition of the main island in Samoa and a right to do as she pleases in furtherance of her admittedly great interests there.

Troops for Esquimault.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—England does not intend to be taken unawares in any move that may be made in the Pacific as a result of a possible combination of two or more hostile powers against her interests in that quarter of the globe. It is learned that a strong detatchment of marines, whose sailing from England was not announced, will arrive at Halifax to-day or to-morrow, en route to Esquimault, B. C., the strongest British stronghold and naval base on the Pacific ocean. The fortifications at Esquimault are also undergoing considerable strengthening and enlargement, and a large quantity of heavy ordnance has recently been shipped across the continent to be mounted at that fortress. The reason for the strengthening of Esquimalt, it is understood, lies in the possibility that Russia may seize the opportunity of the Boer war to attack England in the east.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it, and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. THE GORDON HIGHLANDERS.

They Have Won Victories in Almost Every Quarter of the Globe.

For the second time in two years the Gordon Highlanders have attracted to themselves the attention of the world for their dash and valor. The first occasion was at Dargai Ridge, on the northern border of India, where their celebrated charge to the bagpipes' tune of the "Cock of the North" saved the day to the imperial forces in their bloody fight with the hill tribes in Chitral. The second occasion was at Elandslaagte, October 21 last, when they led the charge against the Boers. The Highlanders lost in that bloody charge over 100 men in killed and wounded, but they broke the ranks of the Dutch and blazed the way for another British victory.

Their Military Career.

The Gordon Highlanders are justly famous in British military annals. Their origin is due to the Duke of Gordon, who raised the regiment among the Highland Scotch in 1794. That year they received their colors at Gibraltar. Four years later they participated in the Irish rebellion. They were then sent to Holland, where they did effective work. It was there that the Gordons conquered Egmont-on-Zee, and fought and won a battle in which both sides used only the bayonet.

Their next duty was in Egypt, where, on the bloody field of Mandora, under Sir Ralph Abercrombie, they received the sphinx emblem on their standard and the word "Egypt."

They were praised repeatedly by Wellington and their colors bear the names of nearly all the Penninsular battles. At Coruna the Gordon Highlanders carried Sir John Moore off the field, and the officers of the regiment wear black cord on the collars of their tunics to this day in memory of that fatal field.

At Waterloo.

At Quatre Bras the Gordons lost their gallant Col. Cameron, and at Waterloo they were in a great measure responsible for the defeat of the French. Their valor at that time was the subject of many pictures, and the Gordon Highlander was looked upon as a conspicuous hero in that memorable encounter. The Highlanders were cut down to 200 men by the murderous fire, but they charged in their old style a French column of more than 2,000 men. As they broke into it the Scotch Grays, a famous Scottish cavalry regiment, dashed up to their support. The Gordons grasped the manes and the stirrups of the charging cavalry and were dragged into the midst of their enemies, shouting the cry, "Scotland forever!" and by this charge the French column was completely broken up and scattered. The brotherly feeling which began on the field of battle at that time still exists between the two organizations, and the Gordons are known in the English army as the "Scots Grays' wives."

After the Peninsular the regiment served in Jamaica, where many officers and men died of yellow fever. They arrived at the front in the Crimea the day after Sebastopol fell, the Russians, the wags said at that time, having heard that the Gordons were coming.

They saw no war service after that until 1878, when they took part in the Afghan war. They lost many men in the battles of Cabul and Kandahar, and it was in this campaign that Maj.—now Gen. Sir George—White and Capt.—now Lieut. Col. —"Dick" Cunyngham won the Victoria Cross. In 1881 the regiment lost many members on Majuba Hill, and after that the Gordons became the first battalion of the Seventy-fifth Regiment.

As Part of The 75th.

Distinguishing themselves at Mysore and Seringapatam, the Seven-fifth began their glorious record. Buffeted about as they were, and afterwards attached to the Dorsetshire Regiment, they served in every part of the empire. In the Indian Mutiny three of their members gained the Victoria Cross, and before Delhi so great was the slaughter that the Seventy-fifth was led to the assault by a sergeant and a corporal. Taking part in the Relief of Lucknow, they covered themselves with glory before the walls of that beleaguered town, and by their gallantry through the Mutiny won for their colors "Delhi," "Lucknow" and the Royal Tiger, superscribed "India." In 1881, the Seventy-fifth was the first regiment to land in Egypt, taking part in the charge of the Highland Brigade at Tel-el-Kebir. They served with brilliancy—particularly at El Teb and Tamai, throughout the Soudan campaign and the Nile expedition of 1884-'85. Moving to Ceylon, the Seventy-fifth was soon again in India. They served with distinction in the Chitral campaign, taking Malakand Pass with a brilliant charge and proving their valor at Dargai Ridge.

The Gordon Highlanders are not now so characteristically Scottish, save in uniform, as formerly. A large percentage of the regiment is Irish, while England is also represented in its make-up. At one time, indeed, the Seventy-fifth Regiment—originally a Scottish regiment—owing to the lack of Scottish recruits dropped the kilt entirely and reverted to the dress of the infantry of the line. In 1881 they again adopted the kilt.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Barnsdale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellison's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the air was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored climes.—Andrew Carnegie in North

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wus when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with kerr or somethin will be spi'led. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit if I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hundred and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hundred and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine hosses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticklar on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral persession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell follerin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they flung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he was comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wus worth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wasn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist sared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I was, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let themselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I was, and so wuz Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint?"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half-used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

HEROINES OF PEACE.

When we read stories of the terrible Spanish Inquisition of the olden times, it seems as if the tortures they depict were almost beyond the invention of the most depraved and fiendish mind; and yet here in our own enlightened land and in this Nineteenth Century of Civilization, thousands of tender women—our own sisters, mothers and wives—suffering from some unnatural weakness of the delicate organism of their sex, are daily undergoing an almost equally terrible, physical anguish and martyrdom.

"It seemed as if there was an iron band around my head and it was being twisted tighter and tighter all the time," a New York lady said in trying to describe her terrible sensations.

"I could not walk across my room without suffering dreadful pains," said another lady, Mrs. May E. Jones, of 520 Madison Ave., Ypsilanti, Mich., in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "I was troubled with female weakness. I had suffered for two years when I began taking your medicine but now after taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I am free from pain. I do all my housework and walk where I please—thanks to Dr. Pierce's medicine."

"It is the only medicine that relieved my terrible headaches," said Mrs. R. P. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., Ohio. "In very truth it is the only medicine ever invented that delicate and ailing women can positively rely upon to give them complete and permanent relief."

No other remedy was ever devised that so thoroughly rejuvenates the entire nervous system of women; healing and curing all weakened and diseased conditions of the feminine organism and restoring womanly strength and completeness. It is the only proprietary remedy ever devised for this one special purpose by an educated and eminent physician, a specialist of world-wide reputation in this particular field of practice. No woman need or ought to allow her whole nature, physical and mental, to be undermined by such ailments when by writing to Dr. Pierce she may obtain professional advice free of charge.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

DISMISSED WITH COSTS.

Mr Ash's Case Against the Methodist Church Dismissed.

At the non-jury assizes opened at Cobourg on Wednesday before Judge Meredith, a case that claimed considerable attention was one left over from the fall assizes in September, being an action brought against the Methodist church by Mr Ash, for reinstatement and compensation for loss of salary, etc., consequent upon his being located by resolution of the Bay of Quinte Conference, thus giving him a standing similar to that of a local preacher in that church. Among representatives of the Methodist clergy present were Dr Galbraith, Dr Griffin, Dr Carman, Toronto, general superintendent of the Methodist church ; Rev W R Young, Port Hope, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference ; Rev T W Jolliffe, Colborne ex-president of that conference ; Rev S J Shorey, Peterborough ; Rev Caleb Parker, Napanee ; Rev C E McIntyre, Belleville ; and Rev D N McCamus, Cobourg. The counsel for the plaintiff were E Guss Porter, Belleville and J J C Abbott, Trenton, and for the defence, Dr Maclaren, Toronto, and Mr Toronto, and Mr McLaughlin, Lindsay.

A number of prominent ministers were summoned as witnesses, but were not called.

After hearing the arguments of the counsel, his lordship dismissed the case with costs.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

Q.—Can you say that I hired Mr. Wolstenholme ?

A.—You sent him there.

Q.—Can you state that you ever applied to me for anything you did not get ?

A.—I told you I wanted a barrel and I never got it.

Q.—Did I not tell you that Mr. Hay was authorized to supply all such things ?

A.—I don't remember you saying any such thing.

Q.—Did you not ask me to assist you to get work for the town ?

A.—No. The only job I asked you for was the work around the fountain in the park.

Q.—Did you not tell me you would take $1.75 a day to go on the town work ?

A.—No. I never asked any work from you and I never got any from you.

Q.—You are a bricklayer ?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Where have you been working this last week or ten days ?

A.—At Burleigh, building a pier.

Q.—For whom ?

A.—The Government. Clem Gordon came for me and Mr. Rogers sent me up.

Judge Weller—If Sheehy used the same proportions as you, 9 feet of granite, 9 of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement, his work should be as good as yours unless there was some inefficiency in the manner of doing the work ?

A.—Yes.

This concluded the evidence of Mr. Rose.

Mr. A. J. Raddon, cement tester and clerk of the estimates in the Trent Canal office, town, was the next witness sworn, when Mr. Geo. Rose left the stand at the pavement investigation on Monday afternoon. On the Government work they use a number of different kinds of cement. The Star cement comes up to the standard of strength required. Of the Ensign cement some samples have come up to the standard, some have not. This standard is a reasonable one. Mr. Hay had asked witness if he had made any tests of Ensign cement. Witness stated that he had and offered figures. Mr. Hay replied that he would see them another day and that he had got information elsewhere. Ensign cement was being used on the pavement at that time, at least, witness saw Ensign bags.

Mr. Raddon also stated that he had been asked by Ald. McWilliams to see some pieces of concrete made up. These were in court. A block made with Ensign cement burst open by being drilled. When Star cement was used it had to be plugged as well. Witness judged that the concrete made of Star cement was superior to that made of Ensign. Witness stated that he had been asked by Ald. McWilliams to look at the crossings which had been opened on Water-st. The concrete was not as good as the witness had expected to find it. It did not appear to have a proper bond and contained too much sandy material. Mr. Raddon described his specimens in court, referring to some as made "according to specifications" and others as made according to the same proportions as the walks. They were made at Mr. Rose's house. Witness considered sand a detriment as added to granite in the surface of a pavement.

To R. F. McWilliams witness stated that he had been asked by Ald. McWilliams to make these blocks of cement. Ald. McWilliams had assured him that he wanted everything done as fairly as possible. By request he made them according to the town's specifications and also as it was done on the contracts. A second lot had to be made in order to get it the same thickness as the pavements that the comparison might be perfectly fair. Witness believed that Ensign cement was largely composed of ground sand.

The investigation adjourned till Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The investigation regarding the pavements was resumed at the Court House. Mr. A. J. Raddon of the Trent Canal office, was still in the box.

To Mr. McWilliams—Mr. Raddon expressed the opinion that Star cement made a much stronger job than the Ensign. He also believed that a mixture of 3 of granite to 1 of cement made a much stronger and better wearing job than one in which sand was used and less cement put in.

BY MR. DENNISTOUN.

Mr. Raddon told Mr. Dennistoun in cross-examination that he had had no experience with large bodies of cement. His work was making tests. He never knew of broken stone and cement being used without the addition of sand. The tests for Ald. McWilliams were the first he ever made without sand. He had never considered what were the proper propositions for granolithic sidewalks. The specifications of the Government for the walk around the post office, Mr. Dennistoun pointed out, called for a concrete bed composed of 1 measure Portland cement, 3 measures sand and 6 measures broken limestone. This called for cement in the proportions of 1 to 9.

Mr. Sheehy's mixture was 1 to 6 or 1 to seven. Witness supposed that the Government engineers were competent men. Witness had spent several hours in assisting in the making of the specimens of pavement in court. Specifications for granolithic pavements varied very greatly and it was almost impossible to tell what mixtures were the best or worst.

Mr. F. Brownscombe, town treasurer, was next witness. He produced books and statements in court. Mr. Edwards questioned him regarding the cost of the work done under the supervision of Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Rose. Mr. McWilliams objected that a full statement of the costs had been asked for at the last Council meeting and as it was not yet prepared Mr. Brownscombe could not give the cost exactly. Mr. Dennistoun then questioned regarding the George Rose contract. Witness stated that he has charged to this work labor $1,244, sand, stone, and gravel $374, cement $1,228, granite $354, sundries $53. Witness was not sure that all the items had come in yet. He did not know that town teams worked on this job. There had been no charge made in the account for any stone from the town yards. Witness did not know the number of feet in Mr. Rose's contract. Mr. Dennistoun also questioned regarding the work done under Mr. Bartlett. The cost on that work as charged by the town treasurer is as follows—Stone and gravel $[illegible], cement $289.22, lumber and tools $51.67, labor $234.36 Mr. Bartlett gives $72.73 as the cost of the granite. The treasurer had no returns.

Mr. F. Bartlett, who gave his main testimony a few days ago, was then put in the witness box and his cross-examination was resumed by Mr. Dennistoun. Mr. Bartlett stated that he had found three hollow places on his own contract on Dalhousie-st. There was a more decided separation of surface and base than was apparent in the parts of Mr. Sheehy's work taken up. In some of the latter a part of the base adhered firmly to the surface. Witness took up some of Mr. Sheehy's work where it adjoined his own. It appeared to be very fair. There was a good bond in the base. There was nothing special to call for any condemnation.

Q.—You were the inspector on Mr. Sheehy's contract last year. How did you get along with him ?

A.—Very well.

Q.—How did you find him on that work ?

A.—O, very fair. I found him fair and reasonable.

Q.—You did not find him dishonest ?

A.—No.

Q.—How long were you over him ?

A.—Two or three months.

Witness stated that he had not examined Mr. Rose's work closely and could not compare it with Mr. Sheehy's.

Q.—What do you say with regard to the contract price of 13 96-100 (that being Mr. Sheehy's price) for the work done by you on the south side of London-st ?

A.—I would think that with the same amount of work as I did there it would be rather cheap. I do not think Mr. Sheehy would have any great snap. I think he would have to do very close calculating to make a cent out of it.

Mr. Edwards—Did you find any difference in the setting of the base where you used Star cement and where you used Ensign ?

A.—Apparently none.

Alderman Langford put a few questions to Mr. Barlett regarding the start of the work on the George-st. contract, chiefly as to whether Ald. Langford had given the contractors orders as to what proportions to use. Ald. Langford stated that he told the contractors what proportions Mr. Sheehy was using but stated also that the engineer must settle the matter. Mr. Bartlett's remembrance was that Ald. Langford told the contractors to use the same proportions Mr. Sheehy used.

The session adjourned for noon.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Fashionable Wedding at Bobcaygeon on Tuesday Last.

On Tuesday morning, the immediate relatives of the family, and a few intimate friends, gathered at the residence of Mrs. C. R. Stewart, Bobcaygeon, to witness the marriage of her daughter, Arabelle Stewart, to Arthur James Briggs, of Suspension Bridge, N. Y.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father O'Leary, of Fenelon Falls, parish priest. The bride was a sweet picture of modest beauty and grace as she appeared in her bridal veil and orange blossoms, supported on her father's arm, and carrying a shower boquet of bridal roses. The gown was of white satin, trimmed with pearl passimenterie, the corsage being an artistic creation of chiffon and pearl. The bridesmaid was Miss Wilhelmina Bonnell, of Bobcaygeon, who was attired in pink, and carried chrysanthemums ; the maids of honor were little Teresa Galbraith and Jessie Southby, neices of the bride, each gowned in white, with trimmings of pink and white, carrying boquets of pink and white carnations. The groom was supported by Mr. F. Myers, of Suspension Bridge, N. Y.

After the impressive ceremony was concluded the party were entertained by the genial host and hostess in a most royal manner, with a very luxurious wedding dejeuner. At the close of a very tempting "bill of fare," toasts were drunk to the prosperity and happiness of the bride and groom, to the bridesmaids, the host and hostess, the clergy, guests, and absent friends. Each was responded to in a hearty manner, and no happier party ever separated than the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Briggs.

Many presents were received by the bride as mementos of her wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Briggs left by boat for Lindsay, where they took the train for a honeymoon to Rochester, after which they will reside at Suspension Bridge, N. Y.

The party are deeply grateful to Mr. Mossom Boyd for his kindness in giving his yacht, the Calumet, for the purpose of conveying them to town. The Times adds its best wishes to those of the friends.

A PRETTY WEDDING AT APSLEY.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated in St. Stephen's Church, Chandos, on Nov. 7th, when Miss Jessie Lucretia Ellerton was married to Mr. John W. Doxsee, the Rev. Canon Harding, of Apsley, officiating.

The ribbon work on the bride's dress, which was of cream cashmere with satin trimmings, was perfectly exquisite, that on the front of the overskirt especially—being a scroll design with lover's knot for foundation. The slight train, emphasized the superb figure of the bride giving her almost regal perfection. The bridesmaid was Miss Florence Carsom of Port Hope and the groomsman Mr. McColl, of Apsley.

The presents were very numerous, handsome and useful.

Mr. and Mrs. Doxsee gave a reception in the evening which was attended by over fifty guests. The happy couple take up their residence in Glen Alda after a short tour.

Slaughter of Deer.

About 8,000 licenses have been issued this season, all told, to hunters, 3,000 being settlers licenses, and 5,000 hunters. At this fearful rate the poor deer will soon become extinct.

REPUBLIC MINES.

Republic, Washington, is proving to be the most phenomenal camp in the world. In two years has produced the Great Republic and Mountain Lion Mines considered the equals of the celebrated Le Roi at Rossland, B.C.

The Green Cheese claim is situated in the centre of the Republican camp. Engineer's report shows that there are three ledges running through the claim. Assays have been obtained as high as $[illegible].

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 13th inst., and it is with pleasure I avail myself of the opportunity of referring to Mr. R. E. Cresswell, one of your graduates, who is now in our employ. He is a young man possessed of marked ability. He is especially careful and accurate in all of his office work, thus manifesting very careful and systematic drilling and being fitted for such duties far above the average clerk. WHITE FLAG FIRED UPON BY TREACHEROUS BOERS.

Unarmed Refugees With Flag of Truce Crossing to the British Lines Are Saluted With Cold Shot.

WELCOME NEWS IN BULLER'S LATEST DESPATCH

Bombardment of Ladysmith is Not Effective, and the Town is Abundantly Provisioned for a Siege—Officers of Buller's Staff Reach Cape Town.

London, Nov. 10.—Cheering news comes from Ladysmith, which is still holding the Boer commandos in check. It now begins to look as if General Joubert had missed the tide which leads on to fortune, for it is evident that relief is so near at hand that the Boers have little chance of capturing the city. It is about two weeks since the Boers appeared in force near Ladysmith, and their attempts to capture the town have not appeared very formidable for the simple reason that siege operations are not covered in the Boer military handbook. The time during which Ladysmith might have been silenced has passed. Troops will be arriving at the Cape and forwarded to Durban in a constant stream within the next few weeks. One troopship is already well on its way to Durban, which is less than a day's journey from the beleaguered garrison. Inside of a week there will be gathered at Durban a force sufficiently strong to break through the Boer lines.

General White who appears to be making remarkable and unprecedented use of the pigeon post, yesterday reported to General Buller, that the bombardment of his position was still going on without serious harm, that his entrenchments were daily growing stronger, and that he has an ample supply of provisions. Nothing more favorable could be said, and there is not the least doubt that he will easily hold out until reinforced, unless the unforeseen should happen. The absence of all reference in the despatch to the Belgian report of another serious British reverse, is sufficient proof of its inaccuracy.

Upon the testimony of General Buller, the British commander-in-chief in South Africa, the Boers have been guilty of one of the blackest acts of treachery attributable to a civilized nation. To fire upon a flag of truce under which unarmed refugees are being conducted to a place of safety, might be excusable in untutored Kaffirs or Afridis, on the ground of ignorance but in people who have signed the Geneva convention and are supposed to be conversant with the most elementary rule of warfare and humanity, nothing but the severest condemnation can be uttered. Such actions as these have always paved the way for reprisals of a terrible nature, and it must be admitted that the British in their hour of victory would have a considerable show of right on their side in exacting harsh retribution from the commando which was responsible for so inhuman an act. The official despatch does not record fatalities among the refugees, and it is to be hoped that none were caused.

Lord Salisbury's speech at the Guild Hall banquet last evening has had a peculiar effect throughout Great Britain and probably throughout Europe. His Lordship's words interpreted more than any utterance since actual hostilities occurred the position of England towards South Africa and the rest of the world. The tone of calm confidence and dignity visible in the Premier's speech has had a most reassuring effect in times when adverse criticism of British war plans and talk of foreign interference have impressed weak spirits with the idea that the present is an epoch of national danger. Lord Salisbury said in effect; "We are friendly with Germany; we are friendly with the United States; we are justly at war with the Transvaal; no outside interference will be tolerated." Read between the lines, his speech hints to Europe the possibility of a triple, or at least a dual alliance against any power with sufficient temerity to interfere in Africa.

A CASE OF BLACK TREACHERY.

London, Nov. 10.—The British War Office has received from General Buller the following despatch; "Cape Town, Thursday evening, Nov. 9.—Have received by pigeon post from General White to-day the following;

"The bombardment at long range by heavy guns continues daily. A few casualties are occurring, but no serious harm is being done.

"The Boers sent in to-day a number of refugees from the Transvaal under a flag of truce. A flag of truce from Ladysmith met them outside the pickets. When the party separated the Boer guns fired on it before it reached our pickets.

"Major Gale, of the Royal Engineers, was wounded to-day while sending a message.

"The entrenchments are daily growing stronger and the supply of provisions is ample."

ANOTHER TRANSPORT ARRIVES.

Cape Town, Nov. 10.—The British transport Moore, having on board the officers of the staff of three divisions of the British army corps on its way to South Africa, arrived here at 9.30 o'clock this morning.

TO FREE GENERAL WHITE.

London, Nov. 10.—With the arrival at Cape Town of the British transports Roslyn and Moore, to be followed by a continuous succession of troop-laden ships, the real campaign in South Africa may be said to have commenced, and the fact that the former was ordered to proceed to Durban, Natal, forthwith, is said to indicate either an entire change or at least a modification in the plan of advance.

It seems that General Buller's first move will be to free General White, thus somewhat departing from the earlier plans credited to him of advancing through the level country of the Orange Free State and Southwest Transvaal. It has been apparent for some days that the situation at Ladysmith could not be indefinitely prolonged, and it is understood information has reached the Government to the effect that the quiescence of the Boers will shortly be changed by the arrival of the siege train from Pretoria into a determined attempt to deliver a telling stroke. This, it is added, led General Buller to prepare a counterstroke and endeavor to push the Boers back by a direct attack. Such an operation, if attempted, will necessarily entail great expenditure of life, as during the month the Boers have occupied Northern Natal, and have fortified most of the passes and other positions suitable to their style of fighting.

One very serious passage in General White's message gives the first official confirmation of the statements of Boer treachery, which there has been a disposition, hitherton, to discredit, but which must unfortunately now be accepted as at least partly true.

With the additional division announced by General Wolseley at the Lord Mayor's banquet yesterday evening, General Buller's forces will aggregate about 95,000 men by Christmas.

BOMBARDMENT RENEWED.

London, Nov. 9.—The Colonial Office has received a telegram from the Governor of Natal, giving a copy of the pigeon post message received by the Premier from the commandant of the Natal Volunteers at Ladysmith. It is as follows; "Ladysmith, Tuesday, Nov. 7.—I sent you, November 3, by native messenger, a report of the engagement of that day, but I am not sure if it reached you as the messenger has not returned.

"Major Taunton and Sergt. Mapeson of the Natal Engineers were killed. Captain Arnott of the Border Mounted Rifles was wounded. Nine troopers were wounded, all slightly, and are doing well.

"There has been nothing important since the hospital was removed to a spot on the railway, three miles south.

"All was quiet on Sunday and Monday. The enemy renewed the bombardment to-day, but no damage has been done."

ATTEMPTS HAVE FAILED.

London, Nov. 10.—Bennett Burleigh, the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Pietermaritzburg, says;

"Estcourt, Pietermaritzburg and Ladysmith are all safe for some time to come. Owing to the fact that Ladysmith lies low, and the Boers, unluckily, have been permitted to occupy Mount Bulwan and other surrounding big hills, attempts to open up heliographic communication have proved a failure."

A cablegram from Durban, dated November 8, states that the warships Thetis and Terrible have arrived there. They will probably land guns which will be sent to Pietermaritzburg and Estcourt. An attempt will be made to send a battalion with guns to Colenso, and even as far north as Ladysmith.

A BRITISH SIEGE TRAIN.

London, Nov. 10.—The War Office is mobilizing a siege train, composed of 14 6-inch howitzers, eight 5-inch, and eight 4-inch guns, with travelling carriages, and 15,000 rounds of Lyddite and cordite shells. The 6-inch guns will have a range of 10,000 yards. Eleven hundred and thirty-six officers and men supplied with 25,000 round of small-arm ammunition, will accompany the train.

The armament is now being issued from Woolwich, and part of it has already been forwarded to Devonport for shipment to South Africa.

This will be the first employment of a modernized siege train by an European army; and the progress of the reduction of forts by lyddite shell fire, a preliminary to storming by infantry, will be watched with interest and curiosity by all professional soldiers.

MORE GORDONS SAIL.

Liverpool, Nov. 10.—Enormous crowds in the streets and about the docks here bid farewell yesterday to the first Battalion of the Gordon Highlanders, Dargai heroes, in which a son of General White is a lieutenant. The presence of Lady White and her daughter increased the enthusiasm.

SHOT BY ACCIDENT.

Ebenezer Martin Loses His Life Near Lake Couchiching by the Discharge of a Rifle.

Barrie, Ont., Nov. 10.—Word has been received here of a sad shooting accident near Lake Couchiching. Ebenezer Martin and two other farmers were driving towards the deer hunting grounds with their loaded rifles in the rig with them. While the rifles were being shifted a little, one of them was discharged, the ball passing through Martin's head, boring a large hole in his temple. He fell from the buggy and died two hours afterwards, never having regained consciousness.

Rural Corps in Luck.

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—After the Cabinet meeting of yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier left for Quebec and Arthabaskaville. The uniforms ordered for 1,000 men in the expectation that a second contingent would go to the Transvaal will be issued to rural corps to be used at next summer's camps.

THE PREMIER SPEAKS

About the War and Britain's Foreign Policy Generally

WEAK ATTACKS THE STRONG

Such is Salisbury's Comment Upon the South African Campaign.

No Interference Will Be Tolerated, and None Likely to Be Offered From Any Nation in the World. The Commander-in-Chief Praises Boers' Bravery.

London, Nov. 10.—Lord Salisbury was received with the utmost enthusiasm at the Guild Hall banquet last evening, when he spoke about the Transvaal war and England's foreign policy in general. He said:

"Perhaps you think I am sanguine in saying that on the Continent of Europe we have no hostility to fear. There is undoubtedly a certain acerbity of tone among the writers for the foreign press, but I do not believe that affects the peoples of foreign nations. I am quite certain it does not affect their Governments; and I will say that I have noted, as one of the cheering symptoms of the present time, the happy relations existing between the United States and ourselves.

Samoan Question.

"Samoa is not in itself a very important matter, but it was important because it constituted a subject of difference between ourselves and a nation whose good-will we prize very highly.

"The agreement is somewhat complicated; but, roughly, it may be said that the Germans have great interests in this island, because they have invested large amounts in its cultivation and because they have constructed a great commerce of which they are proud. The islands, therefore, are of value to them. To us, on the other hand, islands are generally only valuable when they furnish good harbors. Upolu furnished a very bad harbor. Well, in these circumstances, we were glad to accept a renunciation of the treaty claims and rights of Germany over another island, Tonga, where there is an admirable, an inimitable harbor. We took the harbor, and Germany took the territory, in which for many reasons, the Germans are interested.

"I believe we have arrived at a very remarkable phenomenon—an agreement which is agreeably pleasant and advantageous to both powers; but this is interesting particularly because it indicates that at the present moment our relations with the German people are all we could desire."

About the War.

"The great subject that interests all of us," continued the Premier, "undoubtedly is this war, adorned with so many splendid acts of heroism and skill, but saddened by so many losses.

"It has been often said, especially abroad, that we are a strong nation attacking a weak one, but so long as the principal part of our forces is separated by an interval of five or six weeks from the field of action, it would rather be true to say that we are a weak nation fighting a strong nation. Elements of distance are vital and essential in this matter.

"It would have been nothing to the purpose to issue proclamations for reserves some weeks earlier. For what was the cause of the war, and what was the cause of the ultimatum? It was not because of any demand we had made. It so happens that at the moment the ultimatum was issued we had withdrawn our demands, and there were no demands before the Transvaal Government. It was because we had taken measures to increase the amount of our forces in South Africa. But if that had been done a few months sooner, exactly the same result would have taken place. The moment you had shown signs of raising your force to an equality with the force opposed to it, that moment the ultimatum would have been issued and war would have begun. Cheers.

The Real Evil.

"It is not, therefore, right to say that there was not adequate military preparation. The evil dates farther back—it dates to those unfortunate arrangements in 1881 and 1884, by which we deliberately permitted a community obviously hostile to enjoy the unbounded, unlimited right of accumulating munitions of war against us. Year after year an accumulation of munitions was made, which could only be directed against us. Hampered by these arrangements, it was impossible that we should avoid the interval of trial and danger necessarily to intervene between the moment when our forces could accept contest and appear upon the field.

Troops are Arriving.

"That interval has nearly passed. Our troops are beginning to arrive. Foreign nations have complimented us upon the calmness with which we have received the intelligence of occasional checks. Whatever strategy there might be, we are well aware that the beginning of our conflict with the Boers must be marked by a retirement of our troops from positions they are not strong enough to occupy. It is necessary that they should wait for sufficient reinforcements. I do not attempt to forecast the future. I only say that my faith in the British soldier is unbounded, and I am deeply gratified to feel that he is in the vigorous and sagacious hands of General Buller."

"What we desire is equal rights for all men of all races, and security for our fellow-subjects and our Empire. The hour for asking by what means these results can be obtained is not yet come, but these are the objects and the only objects we seek. We do not allow any other consideration to cross our path. I do not doubt we shall so arrange that the issue of this conflict will confer good government upon the district where it raged."

No Interference.

The Premier went on:

"I have seen it suggested—and it seems to me a wild suggestion—that the other powers will interfere with this country, and in some form or other dictate to those who are concerned in it as to what its upshot should be. Don't let any man think it is in that fashion the conflict will be concluded. We shall have to carry it through ourselves, and the interference of anybody else will have no effect upon it. Cheers. In the first place, because we would not accept that interference, and, in the second place, because we are convinced that there is no such idea in the minds of any Government in the world."

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Lord Wolsely said—"Every day applications are received from volunteers in all parts of the Empire who wish to be sent to the front. I am proud of the gallant soldiers, volunteers, who are all on guard. We have hard work before us, for our foe is brave, and it is no mimic warfare in which we are engaged. When one reads of the work which our local forces in Natal have done in the past few weeks, one must deem them worthy of standing side by side with the best regulars. We at present have only mobilized one army corps, consisting of 53,000 men, of whom 44,000 are already on the Cape. To-day orders have been sent to mobilize another division, and if called upon by the Ministers to mobilize another army corps, we are quite prepared to do so."

OPPOSE WHEATON'S LANDING

But Filipino's Volleys are Without Effect Owing to Excitement—Only Two Men Were Wounded.

Manilla, Nov. 10.—General Wheaton's expedition arrived off San Fabian Monday night, but the surf was too high to permit the landing of the troops in small boats. On Tuesday morning the expedition approached Lingayan, a suburb of Dagupan, which has a sheltered harbor with high sand dunes stretching from the water to the town. The Bennington Helena, Manila, Callao and Samar shelled the town and the beach for an hour with the full strength of their batteries, but there was no response, nor was there visible any sign of life. The troops were landed in boats, five steam launches each towing four boats. When these approached the shore and the troops began to land, a long line of insurgents rose from the sand and poured a heavy volley over the heads of the soldiers, following this with a rapid fusillade. The insurgents were excited and fired high, few of their bullets striking the boats. Two men, however, were wounded. The companies were formed and ordered to lie down in the sand. They gave the insurgents a few volleys and then charged, driving the enemy with a rush.

The Filipinos had laid behind the dunes during the bombardment, the shells plowing through the sand and doing little, if any, damage.

The gunboat Manila brought the news that when she left General Wheaton, with his entire force of 2,700 men, was marching eastward.

HOT TIME IN PARIS.

Scenes at the Traitors' Trials—Several Persons Removed.

Paris, Nov. 10.—The Senate, sitting as a high court, resumed to-day, calling the names of witnesses in the conspiracy cases, which led to violent scenes.

President Fallieres vainly attempted to preserve silence and some of the witnesses had to be removed by the ushers. When M. Montell's name was called, the tumult increased. There were loud cries of "Vive Guerin!" "Vive Deroulede!" "Abase les Juifes!" while from outside the Senate could be heard the strains of the "Marseilles."

A witness who thundered "Vive Deroulede!" "Vive l'Armee!" was arrested by order of M. Fallieres, amidst the protests of the other witnesses.

Finally, partial order was restored, and the persons arrested were released.

M. Falliers then read the conclusion of council, who held that the Senate was incompetent to hear the case.

The session was afterwards suspended. During the suspension of the sitting, a newspaper vendor named Rimbart, one of M Guerin's witnesses, violently assaulted another witness, whom he accused of being a police agent. The municipal guard seized Rimbart, who drew a revolver. He was with difficulty incarcerated.

Martin for Saskatchewan.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 10.—Hon. Jos. Martin is mentioned as a probable candidate for Saskatchewan at the next Dominion election.

House to Meet in January.

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—It was learned on reliable authority yesterday that the Dominion Parliament will be summoned to meet early in January.

Battleships as Tax Collectors.

Barcelona, Nov. 10.—The merchants here continue to refuse to pay to their taxes, and the Government is about to send the Cadiz squadron to this port. The battleship Numancia is expected to arrive here on Monday next.

Important Gambling Decision

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Judge Wurtele gave a decision to-day in the Court of Queen's Bench, deciding that all betting on horses off the race course was really and absolutely gambling. The defendant in the case, a man by the name of Higgins, ran an institution known as the National Horse Exchange, where bets were made on horse races. Judge Wurtele said that while betting at the ring side could not be considered illegal, yet betting where it was separated from the pleasure of seeing the actual race was nothing but mere gambling. Higgings was fined $50 or one month.

TWO MEN DROWOED?

Very Mysterious Occurrence at the Locks Bridge.

GEORGE SMITH'S DEATH.

But Some Doubt as to Whether or Not a Second Man Lost His Life.

It Would Appear, However, That it Was Not a Double Drowning—A Very Mysterious Occurrence—A Diligent Search Fails to Find Trace of Another Body.

A very mysterious drowning occurred yesterday morning at the locks. The drowned man is George Smith, formerly agent of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, and more recently with the Excelsior Insurance Company.

Mrs Carr, the aged wife of the man who looks after the swing bridge, saw Smith, who ran across the bridge and down to the water, where there was a man sitting in a canoe, which was in a sinking condition. She says that Smith jumped in the bow of the canoe, and the canoe seemed to drift down stream, until it sank. She says she distinctly saw the two men. She ran screaming for help and her husband, who is also very old, appeared upon the scene. He says he saw only one man, Smith, who was struggling in the water with his hands splashing above his head. Carr threw a rope to the drowning man, but he failed to grasp it, and sank. While Mrs Carr was still calling for help, Warren Hunter, of Otonabee, came along, and ran around by the locks and succeeded in catching the unfortunate man by the hair and pulling him on the boom. Life was extinct.

Smith's hat was found, but there was no signs of the canoe or the other man, although diligent search was made. Mr. Wm. Collins and Mr. Robert Howden made a thorough examination of the river bottom with poles and grappling irons. It is thought that Mrs Carr, who is over 80 years of age, was mistaken, although it is said that a farmer from Otonabee saw a man coming down the river in a canoe, and that when near the bridge the canoe upset, throwing the occupant into the water. He says he saw a man from the town side rush down to the river to help the canoeist struggling in the water. In spite of this story, which agrees with that of Mrs Carr, diligent search fails to find another body, or indeed any trace of canoe or paddle Family troubles is said to have preyed considerably on his mind. Only the day before he appeared in the police court on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, to which he pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs.

He had not been to his home, which adjoined his office on Water street, since Tuesday morning, and was last seen by his step-son, at 10 a m yesterday. This was at Bowman's hotel, the step-son having gone down there to deliver a letter to his father. It must have been shortly after this that he left in the direction of the locks, for it was about eleven when the accident occurred. It was about one o'clock that the news of the sad affair was broken to his wife, who was greatly prostrated by the shock.

It transpires that the letter the stepson delivered contained Smith's discharge from his situation, and it is possible that this, added to previous troubles, precipitated the rash act that ended his life.

SHOT AN UNFAITHFUL PARTNER

Tragic Shooting Affair at Calgary May Result Fatally.

Calgary, N. W. T., Nov. 9.—A tragic shooting affair took place here last Saturday, which may have very serious results. Some months ago Mr and Mrs A T Harris, a young couple from Moncton, N B, came to this place to live. Harris formed a partnership with George Gorin, and the two worked up an extensive commission business. Las. Saturday Harris drove out to a pigeon shoot, returning in about an hour's time and went over to Gorin's bachelor apartments, where he found his wife secreted with Gorin. In his rage Harris fired at Gorin with a revolver and the bullet perforated the latter's intestines in nine places. The men then clinched and were only separated after a severe struggle. Gorin is in a very critical condition at present. Harris is the son of a well-known Moncton capitalist, and Mrs Harris is the daughter of John Archibald, who at one time was chief engineer of the Intercolonial Railway.

Big Copyright Case.

London, Nov. 9.—The decision of a lower court giving the London Times a copyright of its reports of Lord Rosebery's speeches has been reversed, on the appeal of a publisher, Lane, the Appeal Court holding that a reporter has no copyright of the report of speeches giving not only ideas but words in which ideas are expressed.

The Times has decided to appeal the case to the House of Lords.

The Work of Wreckers.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 10.—Michigan Central train No. 310, the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton limited, northbound, was wrecked near Vienna, Mich., about 12 miles from Toledo, last night, smashing four of the cars and the engine and injuring twenty-one persons, none of whom, it is thought, fatally. It is stated that the work is that of train wreckers.

LYDDITE.

Lyddite, the explosive against the use of which General Joubert is reported to have protested to General White, is the most destructive known explosive. It is made by treating carbolic with nitric acid. This produces picric acid, which is a familiar thing to chemists, but picric acid in its ordinary form is so explosive that it cannot be safely used. In the manufacture of lyddite, picric acid is subjected to a special process which without interfering with its terrible explosive power, makes it safe to handle. This special process is a secret owned by the British government.

Lyddite is the most destructive explosive that can be handled with safety by its user. Weight for weight, it is from five to seven times more destructive than nitro-glycerine, and from forty to fifty-six times more powerful than the best gunpowder.

The lyddite is not used to discharge guns, but as an explosive inside the shells fired from them. The horrible force of the explosion of the shell can be imagined.

It is not probable that General Joubert made any such protest as reported. The use of any explosive is recognized to be perfectly legitimate in warfare.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

In the London Times of recent date is published a summary of the latest returns of the British army (white troops only).

By this it appears that the effective strength is 225,627.

The strength of the first class of the Army Reserve, which a recent call has shown to be available in full number, is 78,798.

The army reserve is composed of trained soldiers under middle age, really as effective as the active army ranks.

It will be seen that with the full reserve called out to take the places of men sent to war, Britain can put into South Africa, 78,798 soldiers without reducing by one man the strength of the forces she had anywhere in the world.

ENQUIRY INTO ONTARIO PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

The new Premier of Ontario, the Hon. G. W. Ross, and his colleagues, have taken a step which entitles them to commendation. In speaking of the Public Accounts of Ontario we have on several occasions suggested their being examined and reported upon by a committee of expert accountants familiar with the financial operations of governments and other public bodies, or large mercantile firms. We have advised this course, as it seemed to us bordering on absurdity for a discussion to be prolonged year after year as to whether the Province of Ontario but the surplus or no surplus question was the one over each successive Provincial Treasurer, or, that such surplus was a myth, as the Opposition asserted.

Manifestly such a problem was wholly beyond the capacity of ordinary members of a Legislative Assembly to solve. There were other points chronically in dispute, but the surplus or not surplus question was the one over which, for many years, the battle raged with more fury than knowledge or wisdom. Into the fray there plunged, every Session, numbers of members on both sides of the Legislative Assembly whose knowledge of accounts would not enable them to earn a living in a business establishment.

One of the most honest, as he was also one of the ablest critics of the Ontario Accounts, who is now more more troubled with mundane affairs, confessed to us, that his endeavours to get at the real position of affairs, as regarded the great Surplus problem, made him sick. Yet there is nothing in the estimates of a government to puzzle any clear-headed accountant, though, we must admit, that such accounts are not infrequently at stated as to sicken any one who delights to find orderliness, clearness, frankness, and intelligence, displayed in statistical statements. The most fruitful source of muddle in accounts is, an absence of a distinct grasp of this fact, that accounts have only two sides, debit and credit. There is no middle term in accounts. There may be items in suspense, items not classified, items not mature, but, whatever may be their nature as contingencies, they must be enrolled as either of a debit or credit character, either assets, or liabilities. Unless then the mind of a critic of public accounts is quite clear on this vital point he may go on quoting figures till Doomsday, and all the time be floundering about like a man in a dense fog, unable to take a straight course to the haven of a demonstrated result. The fact that every member of the Ontario Assembly decided whether the Province had a surplus of several millions, or that no surplus at all existed, according to his political views on other matters, was enough to show how near the discussion on the question bordered on the farcial. The Ross Government has appointed a commission of bankers and financiers to examine the books and accounts of the Treasury department, who will be asked to report on the bookkeeping methods, the statements, the investments, and the assets and liabilities of the Province of Ontario. The report of this commission will be awaited with great interest, and, no doubt it will pass a final judgement on the great Surplus question, which has elicted more irrelevant and muddled speeches than any subject ever discussed by a Legislative Assembly.

The Commissioners appointed for the above audit are—Mr. B. B. Walker, General Manager Bank of Commerce; Mr. Angus Kirkland, Manager Bank of Montreal branch, Toronto; and Mr. John Hoskin, Q.C., President of the Toronto General Trusts Company, whose report will command universal confidence.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The army under Sir Redvers Buller when it has reached South Africa, will be the largest purely British army with which Great Britain has ever begun a war. To the Crimea Great Britain sent 26,000 infantry, sixty guns, and about 1,000 cavalry. During the Waterloo campaign she had little over 30,000 British troops, and even that included the "German Legion," which was then reckoned among them. At Waterloo itself, she had only 15,000 British infantry. During the Tel-el-Kebir campaign she sent to Egypt a little over 30,000 men.

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

How They Do in Lindsay.

The Rathbun Company sent a letter to the Council asking to have the books of the Lindsay agency examined, in accordance with the by-law granting exemption. The firm had employed 99 men on an average for six months of the present year. This is not the way things are done in Peterborough. A concern secures exemption on the plea of employing a certain number of hands and expending so much in wages. Exemption is granted, and so far as the Council is concerned, no one knows whether the conditions have been lived up to. And yet some people say we have a "business" Council.

Beauty is Not Skin Deep

And it requires a healthy skin, a glorious colour, and a bright, clear eye.

Beauty is but the outward sign of inward and spiritual grace—Happiness or inward and spiritual grace is but the resultant of a genuinely healthy condition of the system. To be healthy requires a perfect digestion, that the food eaten may be properly assimilated for the body's nourishment. Hutch tablets, for dyspepsia, assist digestion, promote the secretion of the gastric juices, render assimilation effective, and being slightly cathartic, clean the entire system. The condition of a person's mind affects his, or her, health, and inversely the state of a person's health bears on one's mental condition. This is particularly the case with indigestion. Take Hutch tablets, secure good health, a happy, bright mind, keenly alert to passing events, and if of the female persuasion, a glorious complexion, or of the male, a good clear skin—with rich, ruddy blood.

Ten Hutch ten cents. None such as Hutch. One gives instant relief. Obtained at all first-class drug establishments, or by Mail from the Woodward Medicine Co., Limited, 11 Colborne Street, Toronto.

MURDEROUS BURGLARS

While Defending His Property John Vascoe Was Shot

ROBBER FATALLY WOUNDED

Nemesis Swift and Fateful Step Pursues the Burglars.

McIntosh and Williams Raid Varcoe's Store in Toronto, and Shoot Him When Disturbed—One Seriously Injured by a Fall, the Other Shot on the Street.

Toronto, Nov. 9.

John E Varcoe, a grocer, who carried on business at 182 Queen-st. east and lived over his store, was cruelly assassinated about half-past one o'clock this morning by two burglars, who were disturbed and resisted while ransacking and robbing his premises. Both burglars were captured, one after being chased and fatally shot by Police Constable Dixon, of No. 2 division. The other was so badly injured by a fall from a window to the concrete sidewalk below that he lay stunned until he, too, was secured. The event was so sudden and tragical that it formed the topic of general conversation to day and the scene was visited by thousands.

Nine in the House.

Last night, after the close of business, the regular occupants of the house retired as usual. There were nine people on the premises: Mr Varcoe, who is murdered; Mr Al. Varcoe, a brother; Frank Armstrong, who manages Mr Varcoe's store on Shuter street; Noel Thomas, an employee; Mrs Armstrong, who kept house; her two daughters, Miss Loak, a lodger, and little Meta, the six year old daughter of Mr Varcoe.

Al. Varcoe, Armstrong and Thomas occupied a room on the first flat; Mr Varcoe and his little daughter were in a room on the top flat, and the ladies were in other parts of the same. The first intimation of trouble was when the two burglars, who are Henry Williams and James McIntosh, were heard by the three men on the first flat. All was dark, of course, and when one of the occupants demanded who was there, the two invaders entered the room and theatened to shoot any one who would create a disturbance. They also demanded money, and on being told that none was there they asked where the boss was. One of the three said he was upstairs, whereupon one remained with drawn revolver to restrain the trio below while his accomplice crept quietly upstairs to the upper storey to attack Mr Varcoe.

Varcoe Shot.

His little daughter awoke and screamed, and Mr Varcoe was then told to lie still or he would be shot. The commotion had the effect of drawing the lower burglar up to the aid of his partner, and together they proceeded to search Mr Varcoe's pockets. For a short time he lay still, but finally he leaped out of bed and attacked the pair. Both fired and the unfortunate man received two bullets in the groin. The murderers dashed downstairs to escape. The ladies had, of course, been aroused by the deadly combat, and great confusion reigned. Williams and McIntosh made for the window overlooking the store door, smashed the large pane of glass which forms the lower half, and were in the act of crawling out upon the ledge when Thomas dealt Williams a terrible blow with a chair which hurled him to the pavement, a distance of nearly 15 feet. He alighted on his head and received severe injuries, which incapacitated him so far as any attempt to escape was concerned.

Pursuit of McIntosh.

McIntosh, unharmed, darted out on the ledge, which is about 18 inches wide, ran along it several yards and then lowered himself quickly until he hung by his hand. He held a 38 calibre Smith and Weston revolver in the right hand, and before he dropped he trusted himself to the left arm alone and with the right he fired at Constable Dixon, who had in the meanwhile arrived on the scene and was directly below him. Dixon stepped behind a telephone pole and waited for his man to drop. McIntosh fell, regained his feet and dashed eastward, cutting across the road in a diagonal direction towards the hotel on the corner of Queen and Sherbourne streets. Dixon was after him and only a few feet away. Once, twice, thrice he fired at the flying burglar, and just when the fugitive had reached the second door below Queen street on the east side of Sherbourne-st., Dixon fired a fourth shot, which struck the burglar in the right hip, penetrated his bowels and turned down his left leg, whence it was subsequently extracted by the doctors. Dixon leaped on his man, wrestled his big revolver from him and took him to the patrol box. An alarm was sent in, and on the arrival of the patrol wagon the prisoner was taken to the police station, but was later on removed to the General Hospital.

New Policy by two Emperors.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The Berlin correspondent of the Galois says the interview at Potsdam yesterday between Emperor William and the Czar resulted in decisions of the highest importance which will shortly have considerable consequences in modifying the policy of the two powers.

Will Withdraw Troops.

New York, Nov. 9.—In order to avoid the charge of militarism President McKinley, The Herald says, has determined to withdraw from Cuba and Porto Rico many of the troops now in those islands. In Cuba there are now 391 officers and 10,796 men, and in Porto Rico 108 officers and 3,250 men.

JOY IN HASTINGS

Over the Acquittal of Young Anderson at Winnipeg.

When the news from Winnipeg reached Hastings that John W. Anderson was acquitted of the charge of robbing the Molson's Bank at Winnipeg, there was great joy in his native village. Several congratulatory telegrams were flashed over the wires to him. Yesterday evening at a concert in the town hall, when one of the performers made mention of his acquittal the audience rose in a body and gave three lusty cheers and a tiger for Anderson. Afterwards Detective Davis was burned in effigy on the street corner before an immense crowd of spectators, which again cheered for Anderson. Arrangements are being made to give Anderson a warm reception on his return to Hastings.

Tried to Steal $10,000.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 9.—Last night two masked men entered the office of the Kent furniture factory and made a daring attempt to rob the cashier. One of the men, flourished a revolver, jumped over the railing before the latter's desk and made a grab at a pile of $10,000 lying exposed. Before he could get away with it, however, he was seized by two employes and held until the police came. His companion escaped.

Hon. J. R. Stratton at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—Hon J R Stratton arrived here this morning on his way to South Renfrew. He will leave for the riding to-night and will address a couple of meetings there.

Hon G W Ross is expected here to-night and will speak a Renfrew to-morrow. Mr Stratton, who has many friends at Ottawa, was the recepient of numerous congratulations to-day on his recent appointment to the Cabinet and his election afterwards by acclamation.

HON. GEO. D. ALDEN, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the beatenest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fire department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lotchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Wal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Wal all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

MILLBROOK.

Latest Epitome of News From Our Southern Suburb.

Intense interest is manifested by our numerous patriots over the British Boer war in the Transvaal, there enthusiasm having risen to such a pitch that Col. Deyell has been obliged to send to the Minister of Militia for an extra supply of enlistment papers, as the ones received were all filled out and returned an hour after arrival. But most of them were rejected on account of the small contingent taken from this vast Dominion. But we are still living in hopes that if the second one is called they will be among the lucky chosen to fight under such a noble cause and protect the interests of our glorious empire.

Mrs. Robert Cunningham left Monday to visit friends in Tonawanda, U. S. A.

A number of our young people drove out to Fraserville Monday evening to attend the fowl supper and grand concert to be given under the auspices of Fraserville L. O. L., No. 46. Among those from town we noticed Messrs. Wm. Lang, Robert Touchburn, Jno. Bullied, J. C. McMahon, W. O'Brian, Thos. Nattrass, Jno. Howard, N. McBrien, F. J. Homer, A. Irwin and Misses Nellie Irwin and Lily Clarke and your correspondent. Upon arriving at Fraserville Mr. N. McBrien told the driver to halt at Hotel De Monaghan, as he wished to bathe his eye, having in some unknown manner got some gravel in it in a interesting dispute with Fred Horner in reference to the seige of Ladysmith. After Mr. McBrien had bathed his eye in a satisfactory manner they proceeded to the Orange Hall, when a sumptous repast was partaken of and in which Mr. Thos. Nattrass took advantage by helping himself to a whole goose besides all the other delicacies, which were to numerous to mention. Alex Irwin and Willie O'Brian acted as ushers for the charming belles of Peterborough till they were apprised of the fact that their escorts were in the alley securing the tickets. They then adjourned to the church, but to their astonishment found all the seats had been taken except the standing ones which were soon filled. When the chairman arose and announced that an extensive programme was to be rendered, and that he would first call on Reynolds Brothers for some instrumental music (which was rendered admirably). He then called on R. H. Holland, Port Hope, who made a very appropriate speech as well as some impressive remarks on the present war. But upon returning to his programme, again, found most of his talented ones were absent and so had to call on some Millbrookites and Peterboroites to help him out. A duet was given by Messrs. J. C. McMahon and Robt. Touchburn entitled "Dear Louie is The Prettiest Girl I know." The instrumental music given by John Howard and patriotic song by one of Gough's clerks gave rise to much enthusiasm. Mr. N. McBrien brought down the house by his praiseworthy comic song, "My girl lives on Bank Street, But its at Home We Meet," and peace was only restored after John Smith had been awakened by Geo. Trotter, who claimed to be one of the Irish Fusiliers. The merry party arrived home early Tuesday with the exception of N. McBrien who waited for the mid-day train.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (4, 267).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

> the mournful crocodile
> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

THE BANQUE VILLE MARIE.

Judge Wurtele Gives Judgment on a Technical Point.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Mr. Justice Wurtele gave judgment this morning in the case of Wm. Weir, president, F W Smith, director, and F X Lemieux, accountant, of the Banque Ville Marie, who are accused of having furnished the Government with a false statement of the bank's standing. On behalf of the defendants Mr. Donald McMaster, Q. C., had entered demurrers to the indictment, but His Honor this morning held that the indictment though ungrammatical was good in law and disallowed the demurrers. The accused and E. Lictenbein, vice-president of the bank, were arraigned and pleaded not guilty. The court allowed a separate trial in each case and that of Wm. Weir, the first to be taken up, was fixed for the 15th inst.

HE PAVING CONTRACTS

ontinuation of Investigation Before Judge Weller.

AN EXPERT'S EVIDENCE

ichael and Patrick Lavery in the Witness Box

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

When the pavement investigation resum on Wednesday afternoon, Major H. Greenwood, engineer employed by the ernment on the Trent Canal, was in e witness box and was examined by . Edwards regarding the proportions concrete used by the Government. The portions run from 1 of cement with of other material to 1 of cement to of other material. 1 to 10 is about general proportion. In some of the ts the witness had seen Ensign cement wed as high a tensile strength as ar, in other cases not half as great. ey get good concrete with 1 of cement 10 of other material. For the coping surface of locks, etc., they use no stone t a mortar of sand and cement, proportions varying from 2 parts to 1 to 2 parts 1. The sand and cement finish gives a ooth surface.

Witness looked at the specimens of concrete in court but stated that they were t old enough to warrant any decided inion. In concrete three or four weeks the stones should break rather than e cement if the mass were broken. The ece taken from the crossing near Dr. alliday's appeared to have too much nd. There should be more stone in it. od concrete should not break off in abs. Witness had seen crossings open on Water street. A couple were good. nother was very bad. The sand and cement adhered but not firmly. There not enough large gravel. itness saw only a small area open, 1 cement to 6 or 7 of gravel direct from pit the speaker believed would conin too much sand to make a strong base.

Q—What would you say as to 9 cubic granite, 9 cubic feet sand and 5 2 cubic feet cement as proportions for surface.

A—I should say it would fill properly. have been accustomed to using a larger portion of cement for surface finish. would consider the proportion of cement ather weak.

MR. McWILLIAMS EXAMINES.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams next examined witness. Mr. Greenwood stated t in the Government work they aim at having not more than 25 per cent. sand in the mixture. More sand eakens it. Broken stone strengthens concrete mixture. 1 of cement to 6 gravel without the addition of broken one would not be a strong concrete. itness would not use such proportions. cement is considered to be weak than Star cement. In composition is only half Portland cement and the her half is sand. Ensign cement is alled "Silica cement."

Q—The specifications call for Portnd cement. Is this Silica cement Portnd cement?

A—If I were the engineer I would not sider it as Portland cement.

Q—What do you think of 2 parts of granite with 1 of cement for a ixture?

A—I believe it would make a strong position if the voids could be filled p. The addition of a large proportion sand would not give as good a wearg surface.

The witness stated that the sand he seen being used in the pavements the streets was composed partly of limestone. It was not all granite sand. came from the same pit as the sand that was used on the canal and contained considerable limestone. The gravel used for the walks contained, said the witness, a great deal of sand. The fine sand would make a weaker mixture. Mr. Greenwood did not believe that the gravel used would fulfil the specifications calling for not more than 20 per cent. of sand. He judged from appearances that there might be 40 per cent. of sand in it. Witness thought 18 of granite to 9 of cement superior to 9 of granite, 9 of sand and 5 1-2 of cement. Even coarse granite would trowel if sufficient cement were used.

Mr. Greenwood stated that he had inspectors over the contrete work on the canal but he examined every day or so to see that the proportions are right, going over it with the inspector. He did not think the contractors could use different proportions for more than a few days without his finding it out. They could not be using wrong proportions for a week without his finding it.

In answer to a question Mr. Greenwood stated that if he had ordered a private work done in the proportion of 2 of granite to 1 of cement and if it had been done in the proportions that the town's work was actually done, he would not have taken it off the workman's hands.

The witness judged that the manner in which the pavement at Dr. Halliday's separated when broken showed either inferior workmanship or inferior material.

If 2 feet of granite and 1 of cement were used and would not trowel 2 feet of sand would be enough to bring the mixture to the proper proportion.

Mr. Dennistoun next questioned the witness. Mr. Greenwood stated that on the canal for surface finish they sometimes used 3 parts of sand to 1 of cement. 9 feet granite, 9 feet sand and 5 1-2 of cement would be better than 2 boxes of sand with 5 1-2 of cement.

Q.—The crushed granite does not require as much cement as the sand?

A.—It might require just as much but one of granite and one of sand would require less cement than the 2 boxes of sand.

The most northerly crossing or driveway on Water-st was the only one that the witness would characterize as utterly bad. Their appearance might have been injured by the way they were opened but it was not the effect of the hammer that caused the unsatisfactory appearance in this north crossing. The fact of sand being found at the top of the base is not evidence that the rest of the base is not properly composed of stones, as the sand or mortar comes to the top when the concrete is rammed.

Q.—Did you ever notice that on both the barrels and bags of Ensign cement there is the label "Portalnd cement?"

A.—I never noticed it.

Q.—Is it not possible that some engineers might call Ensign cement, Portalnd cement?

A.—I don't think it is sold as Portalnd cement.

Mr. Dennistoun read the Government specifications for the pavement around the post office and Mr. Greenwood stated that both base and surface were apparently of about the same richness as the proportions used by Mr. Sheehy in all his work.

Concrete work is really a new work in engineering. Witness believed that granolithic pavement was also in considerable of a state of experiment. Good engineers differ as to the best pavement. They might differ as to the amount of sand that would be absorbed by crushed granite.

Witness had not examined the pavements other than at the crossings and was not able to give any opinion as to the general character of the work. The defects at the crossings might be due to not sufficient use of water or not enough mixing. The defects might be due to carelessness in work and would not be sufficient to condemn the whole part of the work.

JOS. PARRINGTON.

Joseph Parrington was called and sworn. He was a workman under Mr. George Rose on the pavements. Witness did the mixing, used 9 feet granite, 9 of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement. Witness was with Rose when crossing were opened on Water-st, also opened one crossing on Rose's Hunter-st contract. Rose's work was harder than any of Sheehy's crossings except two. A number of the Water street crossings shelled off. The base appeared to be soft.

The investigation adjourned until Thursday morning.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Jos. Parrington was again in the witness box and was cross-examined by Mr. Dennistoun. Witness stated that when Mr. Rose opened the pavement built by himself on Hunter-st. he used a three pound hammer and a point. On Mr. Sheehy's work he used a larger one, about six pounds in weight. On Wednesday they tried to open the crossing s with a hammer. If they did not break with the hammer they were drilled with the point. There were some crossings that seemed soft, that is, the hammer would leave its mark in them.

JOHN CARROLL.

John Caroll was next sworn. In reply to Mr. Edwards he stated that he was a finisher on Mr. Sheehy's contracts.

Q.—Were you present when the first batch was made on Mr. Sheehy's contract?

A.—I was present when the first batch was made in the big box. A small box was used first by Mr. Ranney but it was not satisfactory. This was for the top dressing. This smaller box was used until Mr. Ranney got a larger box, which was used afterwards.

Q.—Is this the same box that was used on all the work?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What was put in this big box to make the surface finish?

A.—Two boxes of granite were used the first time. I do not think any sand was used this time. A box of cement was also used.

Q.—How many bags did it take to fill the box?

A.—I do not know.

Q.—Did you fill it?

A.—I helped to.

Q.—Was it filled up level.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Was this mixed with the two boxes of granite?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the result?

A.—I did not finish on that batch and cannot say.

Q.—Was more than one batch made in these proportions?

A.—I cannot say.

Q.—Was there a change made.

A.—Yes, Mr. Ranney said to put in some sand. I think it did not seem satisfactory and he said to put in some more sand. I saw a box of sand put in while Mr. Ranney was there.

Q.—What else was put in?

A.—A box of granite and 5 1-2 bags of cement, I think.

Q.—Do 5 1-2 bags of cement fill the box?

A.—I do not know. I helped to fill it but do not know how many bags it took.

Q.—Was Mr. Ranney there when the box was first filled with cement?

A.—Yes, he was standing on the platform and could see them filling it. I don't know whether he saw how many bags it took.

Q.—Was any surface laid before this big box was used?

A.—Yes, but I cannot tell how much.

Q.—What did you do with the bags in filling the box?

A.—I threw them on the platform.

Q.—Did you remove any of them?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you see any removed?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you hear any talk among the workmen about the removal of bags?

A.—No.

Q.—Could bags have been removed without you seeing it?

A.—I don't know sir.

Q.—What about the surface?

A.—The surface was, I think, improved by the addition of sand. The granite finish seemed rough. Mr Ranney seemed to think the sand made it better.

The witness was not present when the second measurement of the box was made near Westlake's livery stable. He knew nothing of that measurement. He had never heard any discussion among the workmen of any bags being removed. Witness did not know that any advantage was being taken of the town in the matter of the proportion of cement. He did not know what the specifications called for.

Mr. Edwards questioned regarding what proportions were used in the base but the witness knew nothing of that part. He had never seen any careless work.

MR. McWILLIAMS QUESTIONS.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams questioned the witness. He asked regarding the proportions of the small box used for measuring the surface finish before Mr. Ranney had the larger box made. The witness had a very hazy idea of its size. It might be three feet long and perhaps two feet wide. He thought the larger box was about fourt feet long.

Q.—As a matter of fact it was three feet long?

A.—I do not know.

Q.—Who was present when this large box was filled the first time with cement?

A.—Lavery and I were filling and Mr. Sheehy and Mr. Ranney were present looking on.

Q.—Are you sure it was filled up?

A.—Yes. We just carried the bags over and dumped the cement into the box. I threw the empty ones on the platform just by. I suppose Lavery threw his empty ones there too. I am pretty sure he did.

Q.—You know that 5 1-2 bags of cement would not fill the box?

A.—I don't know anything about it, sir.

Q.—You know that they do not fill the box?

A.—I do not, sir.

Q.—You know that the box was not filled?

A.—I don't know anything of the kind, sir.

Q.—You swear you didn't remove any bags in this first batch?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you didn't see Lavery removing any?

A.—No.

Q.—And youself, Lavery, Mr. Ranney and Mr. Sheehy were the only ones there?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you do the finishing on the first batch?

A.—No.

Q.—Then you don't know it was rough?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any trouble with Mr. Ranney?

A.—No. Mr. Ranney never found fault with my work. I was simply doing surface work?

The witness said that sometimes the base had to be left over night and the surface added next morning. The concrete base was sprinkled with water according to Mr. Ranney's directions. Witness was shown the slab taken from crossing near Dr. Halliday's and could not account for the separation of surface and base. Mr. Sheehy gave no orders regard-

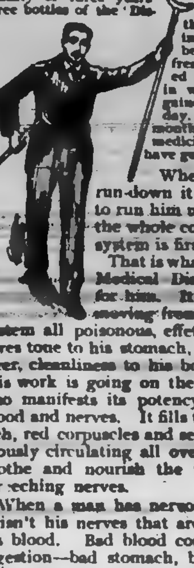
The debility of David Duggins has been completely cured.

David Duggins lives in the town of Jones, Ohio County, Kentucky. From there he writes:

"When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I had nervous or general debility of three years' duration. I took three bottles of the 'Discovery.' During the time I was taking it my sleep became more refreshing and I gained fifteen pounds in weight, and also gained strength every day. It has been six months since I took the medicine and I still have good health."



When a man gets run-down it is hard work to run him up again unless the whole condition of his system is first changed.

That is what the "Golden Medical Discovery" does for him. It begins by removing from his digestive system all poisonous, effete matter. It gives tone to his stomach, activity to his liver, cleanliness to his bowels. While this work is going on the "Discovery" also manifests its potency through the blood and nerves. It fills the blood with rich, red corpuscles and sends them vigorously circulating all over the body to soothe and nourish the tired, abused, ach eching nerves.

When a man has nervous prostration it isn't his nerves that are wrong. It's his blood. Bad blood comes from bad digestion—bad stomach, bad liver, bad kidneys. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will put all these organs in good order. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol in any form. It is entirely free from opium and other narcotics and contains neither sugar nor syrup which are injurious to some stomachs. Without any of these ingredients it retains its pleasant taste and healing qualities in any climate and under all conditions.

Don't let a careless or dishonest medicine seller cheat you out of your health by giving you a substitute.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day, is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Quieting
VS.
Irritating Food
TRY
Grape-Nuts

This seems to demonstrate the fact that a largely vegetable diet inclines to quiet the nervous system, where, on the contrary, a died composed largely of flesh is ultimately irritating, particularly to one confined mostly to mental work.

Grape-Nuts was placed on the market for the use of brain workers. It is a concentrated nourishing food, containing in its make up minute particles of phosphate of potash obtained from the fine grains. This, when combined as nature combines it in the human body with albumen, makes the gray matter of the brain and the nerve centres; therefor, the use of Grape-Nuts supplies the brain worker with steady renewal of the daily losses from his employment. Grape-Nuts do build brains, as can be demonstrated by ten days or two weeks use. There comes a steady feeling of independence and strength.

The question of properly selected food is the question of the day, and the individuals who give this question their care and attention, will become best fitted to make a success of life. Grocers sell Grape-Nuts food.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

ing the finishing. The men obeyed Mr. Ranney.

NEVER TOLD MR. RANNEY.

Mr. Dennistoun stated that Mr. Ranney had told in his evidence that a man named "Carr" (presumably Carroll) had told him that 5 1-2 bags of cement filled the box. Witness stated that he never told this to Mr. Ranney as he did not know how many filled the box.

MICHAEL LAVERY.

Michael Lavery was next sworn. He worked on the first Sheehy contract but not during the first few streets. He believed that finishing had been done before he started. Witness started in to mix the finishing materials but the first of these materials had been made before he started. Witness did not know who mixed the first batches.

Mr. Lavery—I was present when Mr. Ranney's big box came. Mr. Carroll and I measured it. We filled it with cement and then filled it twice with granite. This was under the direction of Mr. Ranney. He was present when the boxes were filled and was standing on the platform when it was filled with cement. Mr. Carroll and I emptied the sacks of granite in. I did not count them as Mr. Ranney was standing by with a book in his hand. I threw the empty bags down on the platform and one may have fallen off the platform.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Ranney counting the bags?

A.—I thought he was counting them as they went in. I saw him looking at the empty ones but thought he was just picking them up. I did not notice counting them.

Q.—Did you remove any of the bags?

A.—No, sir. It never entered my head to remove them.

Q.—Did anyone remove any of them?

A.—I saw nobody but Mr. Ranney.

Q.—Did anyone ask you to leave them down so that they could be counted?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever hear it mentioned in Mr. Sheehy's presence how much cement it took to fill the box?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—How did 5 1-2 bags of cement come to be used?

A.—Mr. Ranney said "you put in a box of granite and a box of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement and do that all the time," and I did it.

Witness swore that in mixing for the crossings or driveways he used 5 bags of cement instead of 5 1-2 to make them greater.

Lavery was not on the work when the second measurement was made near Westlake's. He did not work on the first contract below Presbyterian church.

Q.—Did anyone suggest to you that you should use less cement?

A.—No, sir. I did what Mr. Ranney told me. He was present at most of the mixings.

Q.—Did Mr. Ranney find any fault with you with regard to your mixing?

A.—He. He never found any fault with me.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

The witness was then cross-examined by Mr. R. F. McWilliams—

Q.—You state you measured the box Mr. Ranney bought. What was its size?

A.—About 3 1-2 feet square. I cannot remember exactly. We did not measure with a rule. We filled the box.

Mr. Dennistoun here raised the point that Mr. McWilliams was not entitled to cross-examine this witness.

Mr. McWilliams—How could you tell when the box was full?

A.—Mr. Ranney used a straightedge.

Mr. Dennistoun stated that Mr. Ranney had stated in his evidence that he did not use a straightedge, that the cement was on the platform when he saw it.

Q.—What did you do with the bags when you filled the box?

A.—I threw them on the platform.

Q.—Did you do anything else?

A.—I kicked them off with my foot. I never laid a hand to them. I don't know how many bags there were.

Q.—Can't you say roughly?

A.—No, I can't.

Q.—Did Mr. Sheehy count the bags?

A.—No.

Q.—Did Mr. Ranney?

A.—Not unless he saw them when they were going in. He stood there with a book and pencil.

Witness swore that there was no sand in the first batch but in the second one there was one of granite, one of sand and 5 1-2 bags of cement. Carroll had sworn there were intermediate batches where a less quantity of sand than a boxful was used.

Q.—Who told you to use a box of granite and a box of sand?

A.—Mr. Ranney.

Q.—Did not Mr. Sheehy?

A.—No. I never consulted Mr. Sheehy at all. He left it all to me and Mr. Ranney. Mr. Ranney and I hadn't a word except in one case where Mr. Ranney thought too much water was put in a batch of surface material.

Q.—I am informed that there was talk among you men about having fooled Mr. Ranney regarding the number of bags. Is that true?

A.—No. There was no such talk. I never fooled Mr. Ranney.

NO INSTRUCTIONS.

Mr. Dennistoun—What instructions did Mr. Sheehy give you men about the job?

A.—None. We got them from Mr. Ranney.

Q.—Was there any suggestion from Mr. Sheehy about fooling the town or the inspector or using more gravel or less cement?

A.—No. None, sir.

PATRICK LAVERY.

Patrick Lavery was the next witness. He was a mixer of concrete for the base of the Sheehy contract. He used a box of gravel and 4 bags of cement, as instructed by Mr. Ranney.

Q.—You heaped the box of gravel too full, Mr. Ranney says?

A.—I stopped when he stopped me. I stopped when the box was full. I had never a word with Mr. Ranney.

Q.—Mr. Ranney has stated that you would not obey him, that you over-filled the box?

A.—I would like to see him here. He did not tell me that. He was quite satisfied with me.

Q.—Did Mr. Sheehy ever give you instructions about saving the cement?

A.—He did not.

A.—Who did the mixing with you?

A.—I don't know. It would take a philosophy or whatever you call it to tell their names. They were all Italians. There was scarcely a white man in the crowd. (Laughter.)

Witness—The concrete, as far as I know, was mixed pretty good. I did my share good.

Witness also mixed for the finish for the first contract. He got instructions to use 5 1-2 bags cement, a box of granite and a box of sand. Witness also said he was present when the measurement of the box was made near Westlake's. Lavery said "the box was filled when I was there. Mr. Ranney also was present. I can't tell you how many bags it took. I did not know that a count was being made of the number of bags. Mr. Ranney also told me that he wanted it filled. A partner of mine named Carroll helped me to fill it. The bags were thrown down beside Mr. Ranney. I saw him counting the empty bags. He said he counted seven. As soon as the box was filled I went away about my business. I threw the bags right at Mr. Ranney's feet. He gave instructions to leave them there. I took no bags away. I saw no bags taken away. I heard of no bags being taken away. I never heard any talk of having fooled Mr. Ranney in any way. That same day Mr. Ranney told me it took seven bags to fill it. I said "are you going to put the seven bags in Mr. Ranney, or the five and a half?" He told me to go on using the 5 1-2. This was the same day as the measurement.

Q.—Did Mr. Ranney ever find fault with you?

A.—No. He told me he was well satisfied with the work I did for him.

THE SECOND CONTRACT.

Witness swore that he worked under Mr. McFadden on Mr. Sheehy's second contract. There was only one time he had dispute with Mr. McFadden. "Tom McFadden approved of the work I did on the walk." There was only the one time that he tried to put in too much sand.

BY MR. McWILLIAMS.

To Mr. McWilliams witness stated he was a brother of Michael Lavery, the preceding witness. Mr. Sheehy had never talked to him regarding his evidence.

The investigation adjourned for noon.

Wound Made by the Policeman's Bullet Induces Peritonitis.

He Died Without Disclosing His Identity A Quantity of Stolen Property Found in His Possession—A Family Black Sheep.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—McIntosh, the murderer of J E Varcoe, is himself dead, having succumbed at the General Hospital this morning at four o'clock. The wound made by the policeman's bullet induced peritonitis There is a general feeling that this turn of affairs has simply taken the job out of the hangman's hands, as there has seldom been a more cruel murder or a clearer case than the present

Up to the present no news relating to the burglar's identity has been received. When the doctors wished to operate on him yesterday he resisted violently.

The affair has resulted in a ridiculously undignified squabble over the inquest which is being held by Coroner Arthur Jukes Johnson at the General Hospital this afternoon. Dr Greig, who attended the dead man at the time of the shooting and who was expected to take the inquest has been elbowed out and has not even been asked to participate in the post-mortem examination. The General Hospital authorities appear to be mixed up in the mess, and this morning actually refused to say whether McIntosh was dead or not.

A despatch from Ottawa says: "The gold badge of the Ottawa Rough Riders which was found in possession of one of the murderers evidently belongs to Mr Fred Carling, as he had such a badge stolen on the night that the safe was blown On that night Mr Fred C Chittick saw two men standing near the brewery a few minutes before the robbery took place. Mr Chittick got a good view of one of the men, and he thinks he can identify him. Messrs Carling and Chittick are going to Toronto to-night with the Rough Riders, and Chief Powell will have them go to police headquarters to see if they can identify either of the prisoners."

Inspector Stark has received from J F Carling of Ottawa, son of Hon John Carling, a letter corroborating the despatch concerning the Rough Riders badge and a lady's gold watch and chain. These formed part of the contents of the safe in the Carling Brewing Company's branch office, blown to pieces about two weeks ago

Chief of Police Baillie of Kingston, has also sent a despatch to the Detective Department here asking if an envelope addressed to the Bajus Brewing Company, Kingston, and a silver dollar with a monogram on one side had been found on either of the prisoners. A reply was sent that such articles had been found in McIntosh's pocket.

This makes it almost a certainty that these men were concerned in the numerous safe-blowing cases in Ottawa, Kingston, Montreal and other eastern points Inspector Stark is much gratified that the burglars were brought up so sharply here, as it has an undoubted influence in keeping others of this class away from Toronto

McIntosh died without disclosing his identity. When near his end he showed signs of a willingness to divulge his right name and address, but a sudden change came over his mind, and and he exclaimed:

"No, it's information you're after!" He inquired after a certain priest who lives Montreal. His last words were:

"It's a brute," referring to the bullet wound in himself.

FIGHTING FOR OPEN DOOR.

Object Behind Samoan Treaty—Great Epoch Making Expected to Close the Century.

New York, Nov. 11.—Special—The Post's London correspondent, cabling to-day, says:—Those who have opportunities of learning the minds of the British Ministers have been quitely and sagely smiling this week over what seems to them the petty, huckstering spirit in which the Samoan deal has been treated in British continental and section of the American press.

A diplomat of wide experience, whose innate radicalism has in the past brought him into open conflict with statesmen of Salisbury's political faith was asked if he thought England came badly out of the Samoan deal?

"Well," he replied, "I have not thought much of that, and it really matters very little. When we made ourselves impregnable in Fiji, Samoa lost direct concern for us. We stayed on there, partly out of sentimental reasons, for which, if you like, you may say that Robert Louis Stevenson's splendid sympathy was in a measure responsible, but chiefly because we felt that by staying there we could give effective help to our greatest friend, the United States, when inevitable reaction came of the triparite bungle. We have now Secured That End.

so out we go, and on terms which on the whole are fair to England, and what in the present Imperialistic state of mind of the people of the Empire is far more important, on terms commendable to our Australasian partners. But the Samoan deal, is after all, a mere bagatelle. What really matters is the stupendous fact which lies behind it, and of which it is the first outward and visable sign."

"Are you thinking of South Africa and Delagoa Bay?"

"Not at all," he replied. "We settled the South African question, as far as European diplomacy is concerned, long before the Samoan question became acute and as for Delagoa Bay, that bargain with Germany and Portugal was struck and committed to paper last summer. The world will know the terms of that bargain when it suits Anglo-German diplomacy and not a moment before. Salisbury and Von Buelow are not the type of statesmen who want to throw a fresh apple of discord into the apple of Europe at a moment like this. For all practical purposes Delagoa Bay is England's and will remain so. No, it is not in South Africa you must seek an explanation of the Samoan deal, but in the far east, and in those two wonderful words, 'Open door.'"

DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE LAMENTS.

London, Nov. 11.—At a banquet in the city of London, yesterday the Duke of Cambridge, speaking on the war, said; "We ought never to have allowed ourselves to be in the position in which the outbreak of war found us. I could cry over the valuable lifes which might have been spared had we been better prepared."

It is said General Buller never expected to commence the campaign before Christmas, and it now looks as though this will be the case. Certainly no artillery can reach Durban before November 14, and, without additional guns, an advance from Estcourt would be impossible.

A KINDLY ACT.

Minister of Railways Saved a Ragged Tot From Being Crushed at Quebec.

Moncton, N. B., Nov. 12.—Passenger Agent Lambkin, of the Intercolonial, tells the following incident of the crush on the departure of the contingent from Quebec. Hon. A. G. Blair and Hon. W. S. Fielding were pushing their way through the surging masses when suddenly a feeble cry was heard near by exclaiming in mournful tones, "I have lost my little sister." Mr. Blair felt something holding on his knee, and, looking down, saw a little girl not more than five or six years old, being crushed by the excited crowd. The minister picked the little ragged tot up and placed her on his shoulder. He appealed to the crowd to let him through, and his noble act was greatly admired and a passage was promptly opened for him and his charge. He took the little one to a house near by, where he left her in safety. In the rush he got separated from Mr. Fielding.

"The Brightest Jewel."

London, Nov. 11—Lord Aberdeen, speaking at Scarborough, referred to Canada as the 'brightest jewel in the British crown, destined to take a still higher part in the Imperial Government,' and pronounced an increase in the brotherhood, not only between Canada and Great Britain, but between Canada and the United States.

GREAT BATTLE FOUGHT, BOER FORCE REPULSED!

The Entire Boer Force Under General Joubert Attack Ladysmith and Are Driven Back With Overwhelming Loss.

COL. KEITH-FALCONER KILLED IN A SKIRMISH.

He Headed a Reconnaissance in Force Over the Orange River Brigde and Was Shot in a Skirmish—Last of Buller's Army Corps Leaves.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Special.—A despatch from Cape Town announces that a tremendous battle has taken place at Ladysmith. The entire Boer force under General Joubert, concentrated between Ladysmith and Colenso, attacked General White's position yesterday morning at sunrise. The movement was not unexpected, however, and as the enemy appeared, the outposts fell back and gave the alarm and the whole available force prepared to repel the attack. The naval guns were brought into action and did fearful execution among the advancing Boers, who rushed onward with reckless bravery despite their awful losses. As they came within range, the Maxim guns opened fire, and made such havoc among them that they were forced to retreat in disorder. Then the retreating Boers were charged and cut down by several squadrons of cavalry, who pursued them beyond Colenso. The engagement lasted two hours. British loss 200 killed and wounded, which was comparitively light, as the Boer's loss was estimated at 2,000, besides a large number taken captive.

Pretoria, Nov. 7.—The bombardment and attack on Kimberley started this morning.

Durban, Natal, Nov. 8.—A large force of men and guns from the British first-class cruiser Terrible has started for the front.

Brest, France, Nov. 11.—Rumors are in circulation here that a British transport has foundered off the Island of Ushant, on the coast of Brittany.

London, Nov. 11.—It is officially announced that the troopships Yorkshire, Lismore Castle and Aurania have arrived at Cape Town with 3,676 troops. The first two steamers immediately proceeded to Durban. It is supposed the Aurania's troops will be landed at Cape Town.

London, Nov. 11.—A Cape Town despatch says;—Kimberley is threatened with famine. A message from there says the inhabitants are allowed only eight ounces of food per day. Cecil Rhodes labors indefatigably to keep up the spirits of the inhabitants. He has given several "famine luncheons" at his hotel and goes daily to the defences to encourage the men.

London, Nov. 11.—The War Office has received from General Buller the following despatch;

"Cape Town, Friday Night, Nov. 10.—A reconnoitering force from the Orange River had a skirmish with the enemy to-day about four miles east of Belmont. Casualties, in the Northumberland Fusiliers, Colonel C. E. Keith-Falconer, killed; Lieut. F. Bevan and H. C. Hall wounded; in the North Lancashire regiment, Lieut. C. C. Wood and two privates wounded. This is the only report to hand."

The War Office has also received the following from General Buller;

"Cape Town, Friday, Nov. 10.—The following message has been received from Colonel Kekewich.. 'Kimberley, Monday, Nov. 6.—The wounded are progressing satisfactorily. Two unarmed natives have been shot by the Boers at Alexandersfontein. The conservancy post to the south of the Kimberley reservoirs has been missing since November 4. It is supposed to have been captured by the Boers, Browne, of Beaconsfield, having ridden beyond the barriers yesterday, is missing. It is supposed he was captured. The situation otherwise unchanged.'"

London, Nov. 11.—The telegraph lines have been cut south of Aliwal North. The railroad tracks at Myburg have have been torn up by the Boers.

London, Nov. 11.—A Cape Town despatch says that messages from De Aar Junction report a large British camp there preparing for a division that is to march to the relief of Kimberley and Mafeking.

London, Nov. 11.—Advices received at Cape Town from Maseru, in Basutoland, say that the natives continue loyal to Great Britain. They have refused to harvest the orange crop which is rotting on the ground.

Gibraltar, Nov. 11.—The British cruiser Furious left for Madeira on patrol service yesterday. The transport Mount Royal, with company service corps and 2,353 mules, left at noon for the Cape. The cruiser Romola and the torpedo boat destroyer Earnest arrived at Malta to join the Channel fleet.

ROUSED THE BRITISH PUBLIC

Chicago, Nov. 11.—The Record publishes the following special to-day; The pigeon post message received yesterday by General Buller from General White reassures the public here considerably. According to it, the Boer bombardment at Ladysmith is not harmful and provisions are ample for a long siege. There is no reference to ammunition but it is hoped this does not mean that the supply is exhausted. The most interesting passage in the message is the first official and authentic report that the Boers are firing on the flag of truce. This coupled with allegations that similar attacks were made on the wounded in the Gordon's reference to the battle at Elandslaagte, has roused public feeling for hitherto General Joubert received high credit for the consideration he had shown British officers and men that had fallen into his hands. It is obvious that it should be the desire of both parties to migate the horrors of war as far as possible, but the present case of firing on the white flag is so objectless that it was hoped that it was don under a possible misconception. On the other hand, it is pointed out that similar acts on the parts of the Boers undoubtedly took place in the war of 1880-81.

Boer Chances Fading.

It is believed that when the troops arrive in Durban. Buller's first move will be to free White; thus somewhat departing from the earlier plan credited to him of advancing through the country of the Orange Free State and South-western Transvaal. Every day now lessens the chances of the Boers in Natal, and if General White can hold out until Buller attacks the Boers in the rear, the campaign will be practically over as far as the offensive of the Boers is concerned. Should Buller decide to relieve White, his advance would inevitably be contested inch by inch, by the Boers, and the loss of life would be terrible.

The calling out of the new division, to which reference was made yesterday, will probably end the mobilization of more troops, so that a second army corps will not be called except in remote contingencies of complications with other powers. The forwarding of a siege train with 30 howitzers and 15,000 round shell is thought to indicate the besieging Pretoria, though it may merely mean the intention to equalize the disparity of the Boer fifteen pounders against the British heavy artillery.

Irish Flag Incident.

So much discussion has been aroused by the flying of the Irish flag by the second battalion of Dublin Fusiliers, and the first battalion of the famous crack Irish regiment, the Connaught Rangers, formerly the 88th regiment, on their march from Cork to Queenstown to embark for Africa, that there is talk of investigation by Parliament when it meets.

Such a display a year ago would have been declared treason, but the military authorities overlooked it on this occasion. A band of Rangers played a Fenian march and all the men in both commands wore badges of green. The green flag with an uncrowned harp was, however, a decoration most enthusiastically cheered.

Under other circumstances such a display would have been the cause of charges of treason at once..

The Fusiliers were 1,830 strong, and the Rangers 897. With them sailed a detachment of Royal Engineers and some of the artillery and medical corps. The Rangers have a brilliant fighting record having served with marked distinction in the Egyptian and Zulus campaigns and Afghan war. They hailed with demonstrative and noisy enthusiasm the chance to win fresh glory in Africa.

LAST INFANTRY BATTALIONS GO.

London, Nov. 11.—The last infantry battalions under orders for South Africa left England to-day, and the last of the Hussars also sailed, leaving the Household Regiment the only cavalry still to be despatched, and, last, but not by any means least, the First Battalion of the howitzer artillery has started. Great things are expected of the howitzer battery, of which there are only three in the British army. These five-inch breech-loaders are claimed to be of a superior character, and are expected to be particularly serviceable in removing the Boers from the hills. The entire absence of news of any importance from Ladysmith is having its effect on the nerves of the country, and the references in the censured despatches of abnormal losses heighten the anxiety. It is pointed out that the absence of serious news in such despatches as have been received from General White proves nothing, for the General is not likely to send anything unpleasant or indicative of anxiety by pigeons which are so liable to fall into the hands of the Boers. There are signs that the greater part of the Boers are Concentrating

between Ladysmith and Colenso, but the stories are so contradictory that it is impossible to assert this absolutely. If true, it is pointed out that, while it cuts off Ladysmith, the risk to the Boers is also great, for it will give General White a great chance to intercept their retreat when Lord Methuen's division advances from the southward, unless, in the meanwhile, General Joubert succeeds in crushing the beleagured garrison That the latter is completing preparations for a series of desperate attacks on General White's position is not doubted, and heavy fighting may be heard of at any moment. General White's force is it asserted, must be enduring a daily ordeal which will hardly improve their fighting efficiency, and the danger of the shortness of ammunition looms up largely.

THE KAISER'S VISIT.

Elaborate Programme Drawn Up for Emperor William's Reception—He Will Meet all the Notables.

London, Nov. 11.—Europe is now agog with rumors of diplomatic activity and alliances that may be effected. As a result, the relations of the European powers seem to be rapidly assuming a new phase. This, doubtless, is not a little due to the fact that in nearly all the recent international negotiations the United States has been a factor. The forthcoming visit of Emperor William to Queen Victoria is regarded as capping the climax of British diplomatic success, and the feeling of satisfaction at this state of affairs is not in the slightest degree marred by any feeling of jealously over the Emperor's recent meeting at Posdam.

An elaborate programme has been drawn up. Upon the arrival at Portsmouth, Nov. 20, of the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the Emperor, Empress, their two sons, and others on board, it will be met by the British special service squadron, and it is said the Emperor, wearing the uniform of a British admiral, will be received by the Prince of Wales, similarly attired, and the Duke of York. After the salutes and a review the party will go direct to Windsor, staying there five days. Thence the Emperor will go to Sandringham for two days, and will there meet Lord Salisbury, Mr Balfour, Lord Roseberry, Mr Chamberlain, Lord Wolseley and other notables. The remainder of His Majesty's visit will probably be spent at the Duke of Devonshire's seat at Chatsworth, and in shooting in Scotland, the imperial party returning to Germany via Leith on the Hohenzollern.

BRITAIN APPRECIATES IT.

Canada's Offer of a Second Regiment The Full Reply.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—In declining to accept a second Canadian contingent, Hon Jos. Chamberlain cabled to Lord Minto as follows:—

"Your Ministers' generous offer to send without delay a second contingent for service in South Africa has received the attentive consideration of the Secretary of State for War and his military advisers, but they regret that under existing circumstances they are unable to accept it. The offer, will, however, be borne in mind and Her Majesty's Government will have no hesitation in availing themselves of it should events make it desirable to do so. Her Majesty's Government attaching great importance to this fresh proof of Canadian sympathy and good-will, and desire to express their grateful appreciation of it."

This cablegram from Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto also quells the martial spirit of Lieut Col. Domville. "Please inform Lieut. Col. Domville that Her Majesty's Government appreciates his kind offer to raise a cavalry regiment for service in South Africa, but do not propose to avail themselves of it."

"LOADS OF GOOD THINGS."

Pathetic Death of an Inventor Whose Dreams Were Not Realized.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—John Rourke, 60 years old, died here very suddenly of heart failure. He was known as "the inventor," having perfected a gasoline engine after years of self-denying labor. Reference to this engine is made in letters found in his room written to him by relatives in Toronto, and, it is thought, a rich promoter in Grand Rapids, Michigan, was about to push the invention.

Rourke held that it was he who got Duffy's malt liquor manufactured and that he worked for Duffy at $12 a day. Just before his death in the lodging house where he lived, the old man's face brightened and he smilingly said:

"I'm going to give you all a grand supper," he said, rubbing his hands gleefully at the bright prospects in store for him.

"We'll have loads of good things to eat and drink"—

The old man put his hand to his heart and died with the unfinished sentence on his lips.

M'CLEARY LOSES HIS LIFE.

Toronto Citizen Accidentally Shot While Handling a Rifle.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—A despatch from Orillia states that John McCleary, aged 32, of Toronto, met with a fatal accident at Moon River yesterday. He had been out with a hunting party and while handling a loaded rifle in a boat accidentally discharged it, the bullet crashing through his abdomen. Dr. Thompson, of Waubaushene, who was in the immediate neighborhood, reached the unfortunate man in twenty minutes and did everything possible to save his life, but without avail. Coroner Beaton, of Orillia, decided that an inquest was unnecessary, as no blame could be attached to any one. The remains were sent to Toronto to-day the certificate being signed by Drs. Thomson, Leask and Richey.

Attempt Upon a Bank.

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—About one o'clock this morning an attempt was made to rob the Ottawa Bank on Wellington street. The burglar in prying open a window broke a pane of glass, and in this way some of the clerks who were in the building were able to give the alarm. The policemen were soon on the spot, but no trace of the burglar could be found.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Contractor Sheehy Repudiates All Responsibility.

COUNCIL TO BE NOTIFIED

That He Will Not Recognize the Five Years' Guarantee Provided.

He Protests Against Alleged Unfair Treatment—The Whole Matter Will Resolve Itself Into a Big Lawsuit.

When the pavement investigation was resumed on Thursday afternoon. Mr. H. S. Greenwood was present and went into the box to state that he had found out and believed that the makers termed and advertised Ensign cement as Portland cement. Mr. Greenwood made this statement because on the preceding day he stated that he did not think Ensign cement was known as Portaind cement, Portaind being called for by the specifications.

Frank Lawless, finisher on Mr. Sheehy's contract then took the box. He stated that he did not see the first batch of surface finish mixed but he applied it. It did not work well, the spaces between the granite not being filled up. I told Mr. Ranney and he put in half a box of sand with a box and a half of granite and it seemed to work all right.

Witness stated that he was finisher on the pavement laid seven years ago around the corner where the Bank of Toronto now is. This was built with too much granite. As a result a heavy dryer had been put on and this scaled off in winter. At that time it was thought the more granite the better.

Returning to the contract, witness stated that he knew afterwards that a box of sand was used instead of half a box. He did not know when this was made. His business was simply to lay the material supplied him. The work done was, the witness stated, about the same as the work done last year. It seemed to be satisfactory to Mr. Ranney.

Q.—Is the work here this year properly done?

A.—Well, in some places.

Q.—And in some places it is not?

A.—Well, there are some hollow places. We found these in the work we are doing on Dalhousie-sts. There also we found some loose places in the crossings.

Q.—Have you used sand before

A.—In Napanee we used all sand and cement. In Ottawa we used 2 of granite with 1 of cement, the granite being much finer than you have here. There also we laid a second grade of pavement made of 2 boxes of granite, 1 of sand and 1 1-2 of cement.

Witness stated that the finish of the work here was done better in Ottawa. There they rushed it.

As to the surface finish being too thin, witness stated that [illegible] ways filled to the top of [illegible] had seen places where the base was filled too high. In some of [illegible] they scraped the concrete d[illegible]

There was one place in Ottawa [illegible] two blocks of pavement had [illegible] sound. The surface was not bonded to the base. It was torn up and [illegible]

Witness also worked as finisher on the Evans and Langford contract and on the Bartlett pavement on London-st. The work was the same on the Evans and Langford contract as on the Sheehy contract. On the Dalhousie-st. pavement being laid, 7 bags of cement [illegible] used. There is no apparent difference. The granite used in Ottawa was finer than that furnished to Sheehy and Evans and Langford.

When the mixture in the first batch on Water-st. did not work well the witness spoke to Mr. Ranney about it and the latter told witness that he would have to speak to Mr. Ranney about it.

QUESTIONED BY MR. McWILLIAMS.

Witness stated that comparing the two Ottawa mixtures, viz. 2 of granite to 1 of cement and 2 of granite, 1 of sand, and 1 1-2 of cement, most people thought the former preferable but the workmen thought the latter just as good. What the workmen got in Ottawa was called screened granite and made good work with half its own quantity of cement. The first lot of granite received by Mr. Sheehy was too coarse to use without sand. Some of it would be over an inch in dimension. Witness could not tell what it was like afterwards as it was mixed with sand. There was also coarse granite on the Evans & Langford contract. Witness thought the substitution of half a box of sand for granite would make the first granite supplied to Mr. Sheehy work all right with the cement. To decrease the proportion of cement and increase that of sand weakens the work in both ways.

In answer to questions witness described the pavements laid on London-st. He thought the proportions of 2 of granite to 1 of cement made the better pavement of the two. Of course the granite was finer than that what he saw on Mr. Sheehy's work.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

The witness stated to Mr. Dennistoun that every town seemed to have different specifications for granolithic walks. Mr. Sheehy paid the witness $1.25 per day.

GEORGE WRIGHT.

George Write swore that he was a laborer and had been working for the Light and Power Co. He had to dig a trench under the Water-st pavement on the east side just about Hazlitt's house to lay a small pipe. About four inches below the surface of the pavement and on the inside he opened the pavement and coal cinders came out. They appeared to be loose. The hole is still open.

Mr. Edwards here suggested that it might be well for the court to view this place. Judge Weller stated that he might after hearing the evidence take a look at this and other places under discussion.

To Mr. McWilliams the witness stated that he did not see any one working with tools at this place.

Mr. S. Belcher was then asked by Mr. Dennistoun to go into the box. He had seen this place mentioned by Mr. Wright. The concrete at the opening seemed to be well set though not as well packed as the witness would like. He had also seen

A WORTHY FOEMAN.

General Joubert is a large-minded and humane man. His kind treatment of the wounded British that have been taken prisoners, his touching letter to Sir George White referring to the death of General Symons, and his message of sympathy to Lady Symons, indicate that, whatever the character of the average Boer may be, the Boer commander is essentially a gentleman.

It is well known too, that Joubert is a man of liberal and progressive views, and has been opposed to the oppressive treatment which the outlanders have received at the hands of the Boer oligarchy. He has been for years Kruger's most powerful political opponent; the one standing for liberal policy and fair treatment of all residents in the Transvaal; the other for liberal policy and fair treatment of all residents in the Transvaal; the other for restriction, coercion and oppression. If Joubert, instead of Kruger, had been at the head of affairs, this war would never have taken place.

Although he has inflicted a defeat upon British troops, Britons should have no feelings of resentment or bitterness against him. Joubert is a patriot. The South African Republic is his country, and it is his duty to fight its battles with all the ability and energy which he is capable of putting forth. And there is no doubt that he will. In him we should recognize an able, a brave, an honorable and a magnanimous foeman, whether in triumph or defeat.

A Pathetic Poem.

Written by the Funeral Editor of this great family journal on the demise of an acquaintance who had imbibed too freely in his day and time, with apologies to our readers—

"A widow lady called one—
She said, with bended head,
'Did you see it in the paper
That John at last was dead?'
Unto that widow lady
I very sadly said—
'No, ma'am—I did not see it
That John at last was dead.'

"She took the paper in her hand
(I think 'twas on a shelf),
And said—'Put on your spectacles
And read it for yourself.'
'I left my spectacles at home,'
With much regret I said—
She answered, 'I will read you then,
How John at last is dead.'

"She read for half an hour,
Then laid the paper down,
She said—'That last drink killed him
The day we went to town.'
Then to that widow lady,
With bitter tears I said—
'If he had left his dram alone
Your John would not be dead!'"

There are thirteen stanzas of it, but we draw the line at three verses. We have reduced the salary of the Funeral Editor with a caution that if he ever attempts anything of this nature again we will have him discharged.

HUNTERS OUT.

A large number of hunters are off looking for the wild deer. Not many have been reported as having been shot yet, although it is said that deer are plentiful.

Among those who are away from this neighborhood are Messrs. W. H. Casement, J. F. Lillicrap, and Dr. J. R. Fraser, who are hunting at Jack's Lake.

Messrs. A. J. Kidd, C. D. Crawford, A. Hendren, R. Crawford, J. English and W. White, at Deer Bay.

Messrs. Levi Payne, L. Spry, Mark and Frank Edwards are at Paynesboro, Stony Lake.

Messrs. J. C. Balsdon, M. L. Strickland, R. Richardson, C. Balsdon and H. Wannamaker at Turtle, Bass and Silver Lake.

Messrs. J. Holmes and T. Gordon will hunt at Cedar Lake, and Mr. E. X. Fortier will hunt with Mr. J. E. Kearney on the Burleigh Road.

Large numbers of hunters from a distance are passing through here daily going north.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

A distinguished looking gentleman wearing a white plug hat and brown kid gloves, passed through town yesterday. It is understood that it was none other than the President of the Lime Juice Club. He put up at Bro. Spiritual Munroe's, and was in close communication for the afternoon with Bro. Holmes. Particulars later.

PERSONAL.

Miss Bedford, of Campbellford, is the Minnie Young of Young's Point, were in guest of Mrs. John Dinwoodie.

Miss McFarlane of Lovesick, and Miss the village on Monday.

Mr. Robert Dixon of Warsaw was in the village on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown of North Dummer, were in the village on Tuesday, visiting Mr. William Matthews.

NOTES.

Miss Munroe delivered a missionary address in the Methodist church on Monday evening.

The anniversary of the gunpowder plot was celebrated in the village by the small boy, when "Kruger" and "Tarte" were burned in effigy. This should not have been permitted.

The Sons of Scotland held their regular meeting in the Sons of England Hall on Thursday evening.

WESTWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Dr. Oliver, of Mimico, arrived here last week and assumed the practice of Dr. McNaughton. Dr. Oliver is highly spoken of, and appears to be a worthy successor to Dr. MacNaughton. We wish him success.

There was a great gathering in the Town Hall on the occasion of Dr. McNaughton's banquet. Over 250 persons were present and after the dinner, dancing was indulged in until daylight. Dr. McNaughton carries with him to Brockville the hearty good wishes of the entire community.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign.—Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

To Be Sung With the National Anthem.

Dear Sir,—In churches where "God Save the Queen" will be sung next Sunday the following additional verse may be found useful. Your readers might cut it out and put it in their Prayer Books for future reference.—Your truly, Hector N. H. Jeff.

All Saints' Day, 1899.

In time of our distress
Be present, Lord, to bless!
Make us thy care,
When cruel foes invade,
Be Thou, O God, our aid;
On Thee our trust is stayed;
Lord, hear our prayer.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

THE PREMIER SPEAKS

About the War and Britain's Foreign Policy Generally

WEAK ATTACKS THE STRONG

Such Is Salisbury's Comment Upon the South African Campaign.

No Interference Will Be Tolerated, and None Likely to Be Offered From Any Nation in the World—The Commander-in-Chief Praises Boers' Bravery.

London, Nov. 10.—Lord Salisbury was received with the utmost enthusiasm at the Guild Hall banquet last evening, when he spoke about the Transvaal war and England's foreign policy in general. He said:

"Perhaps you think I am sanguine in saying that on the Continent of Europe we have no hostility to fear. There is undoubtedly a certain acerbity of tone among the writers for the foreign press, but I do not believe that affects the peoples of foreign nations. I am quite certain it does not affect their Governments; and I will say that I have noted, as one of the cheering symptoms of the present time, the happy relations existing between the United States and ourselves.

Samoan Question.

"Samoa is not in itself a very important matter, but it was important because it constituted a subject of difference between ourselves and a nation whose good-will we prize very highly.

"The agreement is somewhat complicated; but, roughly, it may be said that the Germans have great interests in this island, because they have invested large amounts in its cultivation and because they have constructed a great commerce of which they are proud. The islands, therefore, are of value to them. To us, on the other hand, islands are generally only valuable when they furnish good harbors. Upolu furnished a very bad harbor. Well, in these circumstances, we were glad to accept a renunciation of the treaty claims and rights of Germany over another island, Tonga, where there is an admirable, an inimitable harbor. We took the harbor, and Germany took the territory, in which for many reasons, the Germans are interested.

"I believe we have arrived at a very remarkable phenomenon—an agreement which is agreeably pleasant and advantageous to both powers; but this is interesting particularly because it indicates that at the present moment our relations with the German people are all we could desire."

About the War.

"The great subject that interests all of us," continued the Premier, "undoubtedly is this war, adorned with so many splendid acts of heroism and skill, but saddened by so many losses.

"It has been often said, especially abroad, that we are a strong nation attacking a weak one, but so long as the principal part of our forces is separated by an interval of five or six weeks from the field of action, it would rather be true to say that we are a weak nation fighting a strong nation. Elements of distance are vital and essential in this matter.

"It would have been nothing to the purpose to issue proclamations for reserves some weeks earlier. For what was the cause of the war, and what was the cause of the ultimatum? It was not because of any demand we had made. It so happens that at the moment the ultimatum was issued we had withdrawn our demands, and there were no demands before the Transvaal Government. It was because we had taken measures to increase the amount of our forces in South Africa. But if that had been done a few months sooner, exactly the same result would have taken place. The moment you had shown signs of raising your force to an equality with the force opposed to it, that moment the ultimatum would have been issued and war would have begun. Cheers.

The Real Evil.

"It is not, therefore, right to say that there was not adequate military preparation. The evil dates farther back—it dates to those unfortunate arrangements in 1881 and 1884, by which we deliberately permitted a community obviously hostile to enjoy the unbounded, unlimited right of accumulating munitions of war against us. Year after year an accumulation of munitions was made, which could only be directed against us. Hampered by these arrangements, it was impossible that we should avoid the interval of trial and danger necessarily to intervene between the moment when our forces could accept contest and appear upon the field.

Troops are Arriving.

"That interval has nearly passed. Our troops are beginning to arrive. Foreign nations have complimented us upon the calmness with which we have received the intelligence of occasional checks. Whatever strategy there might be, we are well aware that the beginning of our conflict with the Boers must be marked by a retirement of our troops from positions they are not strong enough to occupy. It is necessary that they should wait for sufficient reinforcements. I do not attempt to forecast the future. I only say that my faith in the British soldier is unbounded, and I am deeply gratified to feel that he is in the vigorous and sagacious hands of General Buller."

"What we desire is equal rights for all men of all races and security for our fellow-subjects and our Empire. The hour for asking by what means these results can be obtained is not yet come, but these are the objects and the only objects we seek. We do not allow any other consideration to cross our path. I do not doubt we shall so arrange that the issue of this conflict will confer good government upon the district where it rages."

No Interference.

The Premier went on:

"I have seen it suggested—and it seems to me a wild suggestion—that the other powers will interfere with this country, and in some form or other dictate to those who are concerned in it as to what its upshot should be. Don't let any man think it is in that fashion the conflict will be concluded. We shall have to carry it through ourselves, and the interference of anybody else will have no effect upon it. Cheers. In the first place, because we would not accept that interference, and, in the second place, because we are convinced that there is no such idea in the minds of any Government in the world."

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Lord Wolseley said—"Every day applications are received from volunteers in all parts of the Empire who wish to be sent to the front. I am proud of the sailors, soldiers, volunteers, who are all on guard. We have hard work before us, for our foe is brave, and it is no mimic warfare in which we are engaged. When one reads of the work which our local forces in Natal have done in the past few weeks, one must deem them worthy of standing side by side with the best regulars. We at present have only mobilized one army corps consisting of 53,000 men, of whom 44,000 are already on the Cape. To-day orders have been sent to mobilize another division, and if called upon by the Ministers to mobilize another army corps, we are quite prepared to do so."

COPPER SHARES.
LARGEST DIVIDENDS. SAFEST INVESTMENT.

Boston & Texas Copper Company.

CAPITAL STOCK $2,500,000.
250,000 Shares. Full Paid and Non-assessable.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

HON. EMERY M. LOW, President.
Manufacturer (Mayor), Brockton, Mass.
GEORGE W. RUSSELL, 1st Vice-President.
Paper Manufacturer, Boston, Mass.
JAS. M. WHEATON, Secretary.
EDW. B. ROBINS, Treasurer.

H. F. BARNES, Manufacturer, Lowell, Mass.
JOHN A. SULLIVAN, Counsellor-at Law, Boston.
CHAS. O. BRIGHTMAN, Contractor and Builder, New Bedford, Mass.
PRESTON R. MANSFIELD, Treasurer Abbott M'f'g Co., Dedham, Mass.
HON. GEO. D. ALDEN, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

Battleships as Tax Collectors.

Barcelona, Nov. 10.—The merchants here continue to refuse to pay to their taxes, and the Government is about to send the Cadiz squadron to this port. The battleship Numancia is expected to arrive here on Monday next.

Important Gambling Decision

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Judge Wurtele gave a decision to-day in the Court of Queen's Bench, deciding that all betting on horses off the race course was really and absolutely gambling. The defendant in the case, a man by the name of Higgins, ran an institution known as the National Horse Exchange, where bets were made on horse races. Judge Wurtele said that while betting at the ring side could not be considered illegal, yet betting where it was separated from the pleasure of seeing the actual race was nothing but mere gambling. Higgins was fined $50 or one month.

The Work of Wreckers.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 10.—Michigan Central train No. 310, the Cincinnati Hamilton and Dayton limited, northbound, was wrecked near Vienna, Mich., about 12 miles from Toledo, last night, smashing four of the cars and the engine and injuring twenty-one persons, none of whom, it is thought, fatally. It is stated that the work is that of train wreckers.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians, probably through the Phoenicians.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

OPPOSE WHEATON'S LANDING

But Filipino's Volleys are Without Effect Owing to Excitement—Only Two Men Were Wounded.

Manilla, Nov. 10.—General Wheaton's expedition arrived off San Fabian Monday night, but the surf was too high to permit the landing of the troops in small boats. On Tuesday morning the expedition approached Lingayan, a suburb of Dagupan, which has a sheltered harbor with high sand dunes stretching from the water to the town. The Bennington Helena, Manila, Callao and Samar shelled the town and the beach for an hour with the full strength of their batteries, but there was no response, nor was there visible any sign of life. The troops were landed in boats, five steam launches each towing four boats. When these approached the shore and the troops began to land, a long line of insurgents rose from the sand and poured a heavy volley over the heads of the soldiers, following this with a rapid fusillade. The insurgents were excited and fired high, few of their bullets striking the boats. Two men, however, were wounded. The companies were formed and ordered to lie down in the sand. They gave the insurgents a few volleys and then charged, driving the enemy with a rush.

The Filipinos had laid behind the dunes during the bombardment, the shells plowing through the sand and doing little, if any, damage.

The gunboat Manila brought the news that when she left General Wheaton, with his entire force of 2,700 men, was marching eastward.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican-Record and Miss Elizabeth Foster has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $600 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

HOT TIME IN PARIS.

Scenes at the Traitors' Trials—Several Persons Removed.

Paris, Nov. 10.—The Senate, sitting as a high court, resumed to-day, calling the names of witnesses in the conspiracy cases, which led to violent scenes.

President Fallieres vainly attempted to preserve silence and some of the witnesses had to be removed by the ushers. When M. Montell's name was called, the tumult increased. There were loud cries of "Vive Guerin!" "Vive Deroulede!" "Abase les Juifs!" while from outside the Senate could be heard the strains of the "Marseillies."

A witness who thundered "Vive Deroulede!" "Vive l'Armee!" was arrested by order of M. Fallieres, amidst the protests of the other witnesses.

Finally, partial order was restored, and the persons arrested were released.

M. Falliers then read the conclusion of counsel, who held that the Senate was incompetent to hear the case.

The session was afterwards suspended. During the suspension of the sitting, a newspaper vendor named Rimbart, one of M. Guerin's witnesses, violently assaulted another witness, whom he accused of being a police agent. The municipal guard seized Rimbart, who drew a revolver. He was with difficulty incarcerated.

SHOT BY ACCIDENT.

Ebenezer Martin Loses His Life Near Lake Couchiching by the Discharge of a Rifle.

Barrie, Ont., Nov. 10.—Word has been received here of a sad shooting accident near Lake Couchiching. Ebenezer Martin and two other farmers were driving towards the deer hunting grounds with their loaded rifles in the rig with them. While the rifles were being shifted a little, one of them was discharged, the ball passing through Martin's head, boring a large hole in his temple. He fell from the buggy and died two hours afterwards, never having regained consciousness.

Rural Corps in Luck.

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—After the Cabinet meeting of yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier left for Quebec and Arthabaskaville. The uniforms ordered for 1,000 men in the expectation that a second contingent would go to the Transvaal will be issued to rural corps to be used at next summer's camps.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A CHAPTER ON DREAMS.

Some Great Disasters That Were Foreshadowed by Them.

Strange and inexplicable as it may seem, it is an undisputable fact that dreams do foreshadow or denote disasters, and such cases are of much more frequent occurrence than is generally supposed.

An extraordinary instance was brought to light at an inquest held at Birmingham, England, four years ago, on the body of a girl who was found drowned in a canal near Spring Hill, in that town. She had been away from home on a visit to her aunt, and as she did not return, her absence was reported to the police.

The night after hearing of the girl's disappearance the aunt dreamed that she was on the bank of the canal referred to, and that while passing along she rippled the body with her umbrella, on which the body of her neice at once rose to the surface. Next morning she visited the spot that had figured in the dream, and, finding the police dragging another portion of the canal, she suggested that they should try the part she had dreamed of. This they at once did, with the startling result that the body was immediately brought to the surface.

The sensational Dreyfus affair was last year productive of a similar dream during M. Zola's presence in London. One night Miss Vizetely, daughter of the well-known publisher, whose guest the famous French writer was at that time, dreamed that she was in the fortress that formed the prison of Henry, one of the notorious characters in the affair.

On the floor she saw a man lying in a pool of blood, the spectacle somehow seemed to make her feel glad. Next morning she related her dream to her father's guest, and a short time afterwards newspapers were brought in announcing the suicide of Henry. It then transpired that while the lady was dreaming of it the rash act was actually being committed.

Not long ago there was a fatal shaft accident at a colliery at Grisley, Derbyshire, England. It happened on a Monday, and the night before a collier employed in the pit where the disaster took place had a dream. In this he was horrified to see the cage in which the miners descended to their work dash down from the top to the bottom, killing all the men.

The dream made him feel quite ill, and waking his wife, he related it to her. She persuaded him not to go to his work in the morning, and very fortunately, too, for an accident did happen, and to the very cage by which he would have gone down the shaft.

There was a less satisfactory sequel to a somewhat similar dream which came to light at the inquest on the three men killed a short time ago by the fall of stone in the Kelloe Pit. One of the victims, named Davison, lived with his mother, who the night before the accident dreamed that she saw her son brought home lifeless. She implored him not to go to work next day, but he lightly replied that if he had to be killed it might as well be that day as any other. And that day it was, as foreshadowed in his widowed mother's dream.

Between four and five years ago a Benhar miner, of the name of McFarlane, disappeared from his home, all efforts to trace him proved fruitless. A day or two afterwards a brother-in-law of the missing man fell asleep and dreamed that he saw his lost relative in a certain part of the Almond Water, several miles away.

On learning this, the searchers proceeded to the spot and soon found footprints in the snow, following which they came upon the body of the man standing upright in the water, which was frozen all round him. The dream that denoted this disaster caused quite a sensation in the neighborhood.

Imagine a woman dreaming that she was going to be murdered, and the manner in which the foul deed was to be done! Such was the experience of Mrs. Eggleston, of Antelope Valley, Mono county, California, whose dream was fulfilled to the letter a few days later.

A week or so before the event took place she told several neighbors she had dreamed that, as she was about to open the oven door in her kitchen one morning, a man named Watkins suddenly appeared with a knife in his hand and stabbed her several times.

The neighbors were rather pertubed at this, and when the poor woman was found dead in her house, wounded in the manner indicated, a short time afterwards, her dream was brought back vividly to their minds. The man who had figured in it as the assassin was at once apprehended, and his guilt was proved up to the hilt.

A case arose too, out of the recent holiday season. A young man, resident of King's Lynn, was drowned while bathing at Scarborough, where he was spending his vacation. Two or three nights before, his sister at home had a dream in which she saw him drowning, and so real did it seem that she woke up with loud cries. It affected her so much that next day she wrote to her brother entreating him to exercise the greatest care.

"You need not tell me—I know he is drowned!" was the remark with which she astonished the police when they went to apprise her of the sad occurrence.

Some eighteen months since news reached New York of a terrible dynamite explosion which had taken place in the Coney Mine, near Skykomish, a day or two before. It resulted in the death of two men, one of whom was named Robinson. At the time of the accident the latter's young wife was asleep in bed at the house of her parents at Renton, several miles away. Just at the moment that it took place she had a most realistic dream, in which her husband was killed in an explosion at the mine.

Awaking in great agitation, she aroused her mother and related what she had seen in her sleep. The old lady essayed to reassure her, but nothing would convince her that her husband had not been killed, and in the midst of her lamentations a messenger arrived to apprise her of the accident.

Last year an engine driver, named Edward Jones, fell off his locomotive at Wrexham, England, and was killed. It was disclosed at the inquest on his body that the night before the accident the unfortunate man's wife dreamed that this event had taken place. To ease her mind she got up and went to the works to ascertain whether he was safe. She found him all right then, but shortly afterwards when she had returned home the accident took place and her strange dream was fulfilled.

A similar experience recently befell the wife of a Leed's cab proprietor. Among her friends was an old lady of 80 of the name of Higgins, and a few nights after paying her a visit she dreamed that her friend was dead.

This induced her to take the first opportunity of seeing the old lady again, and next morning she proceeded to the house in which her friend resided alone. Getting no response to her repeated knocks, she summoned one of the old lady's relatives, who, with a doctor and a policeman, forced the door and found the aged occupant dead in her bed room.

A remarkable instance of a dream that denoted disaster occurred in Paris in connection with the death of a well-known English gentleman jockey, who was killed there by a fall from his horse.

According to his own testimony, a confidential friend of the unfortunate man was troubled with a very disquieting dream the night before the accident took place. In it he saw a horseman wearing a cherry-red coat, which was his friend's particular color, crushed to death by a fall.

Much impressed by this singular occurrence, he mentioned his dream to several friends next morning, but not one of them would regard it in at all a serious light. Before long, however, it had been fulfilled to the letter, and the skeptics changed their views.

All the foregoing instances are strictly authentic, and conclusively show that there are some things dreamed of in our beds which cannot yet be accounted for by our philosophy

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

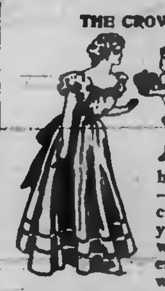
The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Versus Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," mused the angry tragedian; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and



THE CROWN OF LOVE.

What does love mean and how much happiness does it bring to the average woman? To be a sweetheart, a wife, a mother—this is called the crown of womanhood; yet there are crowns which bring only misery and pain to the wearers.

Can any woman who suffers with constant dragging, wearying, life-sapping ailments be happy? Does not her crown of womanhood become a symbol of martyrdom rather than of happiness?

If ailing women realized how surely Dr. Pierce's wonderful "Favorite Prescription" would restore them to complete health and the perfection of queenliness, there would be more coronets of joy set upon brows now crowned with misery.

"I had female trouble for eight years," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 822 East College St., Jacksonville, Ill. "For three years I suffered continually. Words cannot express what I suffered. I sought relief among the medical profession and found none, until induced by kind friends to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I commenced taking this medicine I weighed ninety-five pounds. After taking 'Favorite Prescription' I was built up until now I weigh one hundred and fifty-six pounds—more than I ever weighed before.

"I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had internal inflammation, a disagreeable drain, bearing-down pains in the lower part of my bowels, and such distress every month, but now I never have a pain—do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman. Thanks to your medicine. I never forget to recommend it to all suffering women. I consider myself a living testimonial of the benefits of your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

Any woman may write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the utmost confidence. He will give her case careful consideration and send her a letter of common-sense, professional advice free of charge.

If your head aches, the trouble is pretty sure to be constipation. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will cure you.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

Joint Stock Company to be Formed With Ample Capital.

A meeting of the creditors, prize-winners and friends of the Central Exhibition Association was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday last. The chair was occupied by Mr. Geo. W. Fitzgerald, President of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society. There was a fair attendance, very few, if any, townspeople being present outside the newspaper representatives and ex-Mayor Yelland.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting, and called upon Mr. W. J. Green to read the financial statement.

Mr Green read the statement in detail, by which it appears the Society owes in the neighborhood of $4,600 with assets consisting of a lease of the show grounds and buildings, which probably cost $3,000, and are valuable only for exhibition purposes.

Mr. Geo. E. Elliott, one of the directors, stated that he was in favor of paying 100 cents on the dollar. There was only two ways by which this could be done. One was to take up a subscription, to which all friends of the Society should be asked to contribute, and borrowing the balance, and the other plan was to form a Joint Stock Company. Of the two, he was in favor of the latter. He thought 500 shares of $10 per share could be sold—300 in town and 200 in the country—and this would give them a capital of $5,000. With the money they could purchase the ground, pay off all obligations, and commence anew.

Mr. George W. Bennett, a director, was in favor of going on. It would not do to let the Society die. He thought something could be done in securing aid for the funds of the Society in town.

Mr Dawson Kennedy thought a Joint Stock Company the only possible plan. It was a scheme that would commend itself to the citizens of both town and county. People who had stock in the Society would have a personal interest in helping the show along.

It was finally decided to open a stock book, which was done on the spot, most of those present subscribing for one or more shares.

A meeting is to be held on Friday next, when arrangements will be made to organize the company.

THE CITIZENS' BANQET.

Details Concerning Next Thursday Evening's Function.

A large number of applications have been received for tickets of admission to the banquet which is to be tendered to Hon J R Stratton, M.P.P., on Thursday evening next by the citizens. The committee are anxious to have all applications received as early in the week as possible in order that seats may be provided for and no disappointments result. The pleasing feature introduced for the first time in Peterborough, of inviting the attendance of the ladies is being well received. Each gentleman procuring a ticket is entitled to tickets for two ladies without extra charge. Seats are arranged for the ladies in the gallery and on raised platforms on the main floor. Light refreshments will be served to them during the progress of the banquet and while the toasts are being proposed. Tickets of admission may be procured from any member of the following committee: His Worship Mayor Davis, Hon Chairman; Robert Fair, Hon Secretary; James Kendry, M.P., Peter Hamilton, J J McBain, Richard Hall, Peter Campbell, R C McHarrie, E S Davidson, W G Ferguson W H Moore, A P Poussette, Q.C., Wm Caldwell, M D., W D Parker, R M Dennistoun, D O'Connell, Adam Hall, H LeBrun, C B LeAllister, A J Gough, A G Parker, T D Moher, M.D, W H Hill, Wm Hamilton, jr. ON TO OTTAWA.

Farmers, Re Drowned Lands, Decide to Invade the Capital.

Another meeting of the farmers living along the banks of the Otonabee in the townships of Monaghan and Otonabee was held at the Council Chamber Saturday afternoon to discuss a long-standing grievance, the damage done their lands by the holding back of the water by the Government works at Hastings. The attendance was large, Mr Wm Eyres occupying the chair, and Mr W J Hall acting as secretary.

After considerable discussion a motion was put that advice be secured from one of the prominent lawyers of the Dominion. A few voted for it, not so many against it, but a great many refused to vote, being evidently unwilling to bear any part of the expense incurred.

Mr Dawson Kennedy moved that a committee be sent to Ottawa to present the case to the Government, the actual expenses to be paid pro rata by the farmers.

The motion was carried.

A suggestion was then made that all land owners go down to Ottawa to press the claim. This met with approval, a resolution giving it effect was carried, provided a satisfactory rate could be obtained.

A number of those present paid $1 each towards the fund necessary to carry on the agitation.

The deputation will go down early in the coming session.

Peculiar Accident.

Mr. Arthur Copp, of Havelock, who has been working on the C. P. R. near Sharbot lake all summer, met with a peculiar and serious accident on Thursday afternoon last. He was in the act of taking a handcar off the track, when he heard an explosion and felt himself hit in the right wrist. He was of the opinion that he had been hit with a rifle bullet until some section men who had run up to him, cried out that he was also hit in the right leg. Looking at the limb, Mr. Copp then realized that it was no rifle bullet that had hit him, but that a dynamite cap had exploded in some manner. His leg was terribly mangled about the knee, a large hole being torn among the muscles. His wrist was badly injured and the fingers of both hands were covered with wounds from fragments of the cap. How the accident occurred is a complete mystery. Mr. Copp states that he was not aware of any caps being in his pockets and the linings of the pockets are uninjured. He was brought up to Havelock on the early express, and is doing nicely.

EASY GOOD. EASY BAD.

Discovers a Difference.

"I was led to accuse coffee of being the cause of the difficulty by reading about Postum Food Coffee. Since using Postum, I have been singularly free from any of the ailments mentioned.

"It is easy to make good Postum and easy to make bad. The difference is in the boiling. I send you herewith a list of friends that would be benefitted by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee. Kindly send them information on the subject." G. H. L. Nelson, Principal, School No. 2, Greenfield, Ind.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

the cinders mentioned but would find no fault with this as all the specifications of many places call for a layer of cinders or ashes. Wherever a trench is dug up to the foundation of a pavement the foundation is sure to fall in. To Mr. McWilliams the witness stated that this hole was over 3 1-2 inches below the pavement level and not 4 inches as the last witness stated.

Mr. Belcher also stated to Mr. McWilliams that he had drawn up the specifications calling for "Portalnd cement of approved quality" and had refused to allow the use of Ensign cement.

A STRONG PROTEST.

There was not witnesses present for examination and Mr. Dennistoun, rising, stated that he wished to make a protest and wished to have it given the greatest publicity, and notice thereof would be given to the Town Council. Mr. Sheehy had built his sidewalk and had given his bond for a term of five years. Up to date, said Mr. Dennistoun, we have heard of fifteen or twenty openings being broken, punched and excavated without Mr. Sheehy or his sureties being given any notice. This being the case Mr. Sheehy and his sureties refuse to be responsible for the pavement after the way in which he has been treated by the town. Mr. Sheehy has received no notice that the engineer was not satisfied with the crossings. Yet Mr. Sheehy was the man who should have been notified if any alteration was to be made in the pavements. If he had been notified and had refused to make the alterations the town would have been justified in doing the work and charging the contractor with the cost. This was not done. On this account Mr. Sheehy and his sureties repudiate all liability for the sidewalks. There is another ground of complaint. The town or some persons acting for the town has dug trenches under the pavement so close to the surface that the foundation must fall in. The town has broken and smashed the pavement without giving Mr. Sheehy any notice of its intention and has ruthlessly dragged the fragments into court to confront Mr. Sheehy with them as evidence. Besides standing within his strict legal right in this matter Mr. Sheehy felt hurt that he as a citizen of standing and well known in the town had been treated in this way.

Adjournment took place till Friday

WITH THE HUNTERS.

Wonderful Record of a Number of Local Sportsmen Last Week.

A party consisting of Messrs. Thomas Parker, captain, Charles Butcher, Fred Doughty, Samuel Currier, Harry Starr, Thomas Welsh, Robert Mills, Frank Johnston and Albert Mitchell returned on Saturday. The camp was located on Hell Island in Big Gold Lake, and the hunt lasted for six days. The deer fifteen in number were in W. J. Doughty's Water street warerooms on Saturday.

•• • ••

Messrs. H. LeBrun, R. C. McHarrie and W. D. Parker, who went up on Wednesday to visit the Morrow-Kingan hunting at Ketchum lake, returned Saturday. Mr. E. A. Peck, who was one of the party, also came down. Messrs. McHarrie, LeBrun and Parker did not go for deer but simply to get a few sniffs of the purest ozone on earth, which can only be found on our back lakes. They decided that they would spare the deer and devote their exclusive attention to partridge. After adjusting their compasses, and procuring all the game bags to be found in camp in which to carry home the product of the chase, they sallied forth. The result was very disappointing. Our special artist secured a snap shot of the result of their combined efforts, which we reproduce herewith. It is not known which of the three enthusiastic sportsmen did the shooting, each modestly endeavoring to give the credit to the other. The Morrow-Kingan party had six deer when these gentlemen left for home. Two of these were taken Friday morning before they left, Mr. Ritchie getting one and Mr. Peck dropping the other one. Both were fine bucks.

•• • ••

The Gold Lake Hunting Club had secured twelve deer, but the report does not say how many more. By the time however, they got telling it, in the back parlor of the Snowden House, the number will have increased at least three fold. At last accounts the guard on the buttermilk tank had been doubled. This was deemed advisable as the contents is getting low. Mr. Snowden, who is ever foremost in anything that is likely to advance the interests and promote the prosperity of the club, put his ear on the bung hole and detected an empty sound, hence the precautions above noted.

•• • ••

The editor of the g.f.j. returned Saturday from a short gunning expedition to Spaulding's Bay. He made his headquarters at Bowman's hotel, enjoying himself immensely. He reports game rather scarce just now, although suckers are plentiful in the neighborhood. This is no joke.

Doubly Afflicted.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr Waren C Guthrie, Emily, in the great bereavement which has befallen him in the death of his wife which took place on Friday. Mr Guthrie had been ailing for about two years, and the dread disease, consumption, finally did its work. Mrs Guthrie was beloved and respected by all who knew her. The remains were interred in the Omemee cemetery yesterday, Sunday, and were followed thither by a very large number of sorrowing friends and acquaintances. A little over a month ago Mr Guthrie lost a 16 months old baby boy.

Died at Lambton Mills.

Mr Daniel Cahill, father of our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr Thomas Cahill died at Lambton Mills on Friday. The deceased gentleman was 93 years of age, and his demise was not unlooked for as he had been in ill health for several months. Mr Cahill left Saturday morning for Lambton and brought the remains to Peterborough for interment. The funeral took place from Mr Cahill's residence, yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended.

DUMMER.

The many friends of Mr William J Little of Hall's Glen, will regret to learn of his rather sudden demise, which sad event occurred at his home, lot 27, concession 3, Dummer, on Friday night last. Mr Little, who was in his 49th year, was one of the most promising, and well-known farmers in the township. He had been in his usual health until recently and death is supposed to have been caused by heart trouble. Deceased was twice married, his first wife being the widow of the late Isaac Seagrove, of Lakefield, who predeceased him about ten years ago. Mr Little's second wife was a Miss Dewart of Dummer, who with one son survives him. Deceased was a prominent member of the Methodist church, and in politics a Liberal. The funeral took place on Sunday to Warsaw cemetery.

AGUINALDO NOW SURROUNDED

Insurgents are Suffering from Disease, Lack of Food and Medicines.

Manila, Nov. 13.—General Young is supposed to have reached San Nicolas, about thirty miles east of Dagupan, but his wagons are far behind.

Colonel Hayes has captured Aguinaldo's secretary, and Major Coleman is in Carranglan, with an escort of 173 Boldmen, on his way to the Province of Neuva Vizaya.

The son of General Llaneras and his family are prisoners. The General barely escaped.

The correspondent of the Associated Press with General Young telegraphs from San Jose that Aguinaldo did not escape to the northeast. He and his army, the correspondent adds, are surrounded. His last orders to the Filipino commander at San Jose were to hold San Jose and Carranglan at all costs.

The recent encounters were too one-sided to be called fights. The insurgents are mortally afraid of the Americans, however strong their position. They make but a brief and feeble resistance and run when the terrible American yell reaches their ears, whereupon the Americans pursue them and slay many.

The moral effect of the news that 60,000 troops are on their way here has been unquestionably great.

The insurgents are suffering more from disease than the Americans, owing to poor food, lack of medicines, and filthy hospitals, with the result that there is great mortality among them.

General Lawton has intercepted a telegram from an insurgent captain to a Filipino General reading: "How can you blame me for retreating when only 12 of my company were able to fight?"

Fatal Freight Wreck.

Pittsburg, Nov. 13.—A double-headed Pittsburg & Lake Erie freight train of fifty-five loaded coal cars crashed into the caboose of another train at McKee's Rocks last night and piled the wreckage up high. Three men were in the caboose. One of them was taken out dead, another had one foot crushed and both legs broken, and a third was so badly injured that he may die. By some it is thought that another man, unknown, probably a tramp who was stealing a ride, was also killed and that his body will be found when the wreckage is cleared away. The accident is blamed by the trainmen on the negligence of the flagman of the train that was struck.

Differences More Acute.

BADEN-POWELL'S BOLD DASH AT THE ENEMY.

Boers Surprised in their Trenches Outside of Mafeking and Driven Off With Bayonets.

AN ATTEMPTED BOER ASSAULT EASILY REPULSED.

Troops Arrive Rapidly at Cape Town. A Great British Victory Reported at Ladysmith. The Troops Proceeding to Delagoa Bay. A Helping Hand Will Soon be Extended to General White.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The War Office this morning publishes the following despatches received from General Buller;

"CAPE TOWN, Sunday, Nov. 12.—The following reports have been received from Colonel Baden-Baden Powell; 'Mafeking, Monday, Cot. 30.—All well here. Enemy apparently shy of attacking. Now closing to invest us. Are to-day destroying railway two miles north with dynamite. Shelling continued. Doing very little harm.

"'Tuesday, Oct. 31.—Enemy attempted assault to-day on Cannon Kopje and southeast corner of town. Attack most brilliant, notwithstanding hot shell fired by the British South African police, under Walford. Enemy lost heavily. Our casualties, five killed and five wounded. Killed;—Captains 'Hon. D. H. Marsham, Fourth Bedfordshire; C. A. Petchell, Third Kings Rifles; a sergeant-major and two troopers. Wounded;—Five non-commissioned officers and troopers—all British South African police.'

CAPE TOWN, Sunday, Nov. 12.—The following is from Nicholson; 'Buluwayo, Sunday, Nov. 5.—The following is from Baden-Powell; Mafeking, Wednesday, Oct. 25.—All well here. Enemy still shelling. We made successful night attack on his advanced trenches last night, getting in with bayonets. Our loss six men of the Protectorate regiment killed, nine wounded, including Captain Fitz-Clarence, Third Royal Fusiliers, and Lieut. Swinton. Enemy's loss unknown, but considerable. Enemy have vacated signal hill and laagered two miles northeast of town and two miles southeast.'"

London, Nov. 13—The position of affairs around Mafeking is made much cleared by a batch of official despatches bulletined by the War Office this morning. It appears that Colonel Baden-Powel, who on Oct. 25th was being shelled by Commandant Cronje's force, with not much success, followed White's plan at Ladysmith, though with happier results, and making nocturnal sorties upon the advanced trenches of the Boers, came to such close quarters that the bayonet was used, probably with deadly effect. That the British force was thus able to surprise the Boers is a testimony to the brilliancy of their leader, and the value of the training in frontier warfare, which enabled our men to beat the enemy at their own style of warfare. Such a success could not, of course, be obtained for nothing, and six of Powell's force were killed and nine wounded. The effect of the onslaught seems to have been the falling back of the Boers to position situated respectively two miles to the northeast and two miles to the southeast.

After this engagement the Boers evidently hesitated to take the offensive again, and for five days did nothing. On October 30th, however, their courage having returned, they closed in again towards the town, and having destroyed the railway two miles to the north, probably with the object of preventing the arrival reinforcements from that direction, renewed their bombardment with no greater effect than at first. Following this a determined effort was made on October 31st by the Boers to the southeast to take the town by storm. Colonel Baden-Powell describes the attack as a most formidable one and indicates that the enemy advanced bravely under a tremendous fire from the South African police, only desisting after heavy losses. The English losses were five in killed and five in wounded.

It is evident that the Boers are realizing the importance of capturing Mafeking and Kimberley before reinforcements which cannot be long delayed are forwarded by General Buller. The Boer generals plainly perceive that no time is to be lost and wish to make use oftheir men held in check at those places to resist the invasion of their southern border.

So far as Natal is concerned the boot will soon be on the other leg. Instead of Ladysmith being invested by the Boers the latter will find themselves in danger of being attacked both in front and flank. Troopships which arrive at the Cape are constantly being despatched to Durban and thence to Pietermaritzburg or Estcourt. Within a week a sufficiently strong force will have assembled south of Ladysmith to relieve that place should it be placed in serious danger. The Boers have now two alternatives. Either they must attack and subdue General White within seven days—an impossible attack—or run the risk of being caught between the relieving column and the besieged force, and compelled to give battle on disadvantageous terms or fall back over their border. The next few days will probably for this reason be a season of much activity among the Boers all around the compass, for it is their last chance.

The British victory of Thursday last, reported from Ladysmith by native runners, should be taken with the greatest reserve, there being no official confirmation.

GASCON SENT TO DURBAN.

London, Nov. 12.—An unofficial statement is published that the Gascon, soon after her arrival at Cape Town, left for Durban and Delagoa Bay. The Gascon carries the 2nd Coldstream Guards, the line of communication, the staff and details.

SAILED FOR DURBAN.

London, Nov. 12.—The British transport Hawarden Castle has sailed from Cape Town bound for Durban. The Hawarden Castle has the 2nd Royal Irish Fusiliers on board.

FRENCH STEAMER BROUGHT TO.

Lorenzo Marquez, Delagoa Bay, Nov. 9.—The French steamer Coddobe has arrived here. When several miles out she was signalled by the British third-class cruiser Magicienne and as the Cordoba did not obey a blank shot was fired across her bow. After her manifest had been examined she was allowed to proceed.

ANOTHER COMMANDO RAISED.

Pretoria, Nov. 6.—The Standard and Diggers' News says that it is expected that another commando will leave for the front to-day. A large number of the burghers have been commandered and some have volunteered. The commando will be under a brother of General Jan H. M. Kock, who was wounded and taken prisoner by the British and afterward died in the hospital at Ladysmith.

The house-to-house visits in the Central district continue. All neutrals who have not volunteered will be commandered for police service. Those who are eligible are expected to report for duty. The penalties imposed for failure to comply with the order to report are heavy fines, and for persistent disregard of the order offenders will be expelled from the State.

FATHER MATHEWS RELEASED.

Pretoria, Monday, Nov. 6. — Father Mathews, chaplain of the Irish Fusiliers, who was captured at the battle of Nicholson's Nek, has arrived here. He complains that though General Joubert promised he would be permitted to return to the British camp he was taken to Pretoria. The Secretary of War released him two days after his arrival and he was permitted to leave. He reports that the prisoners are well cared for.

BRITISH VICTORY REPORTED.

London, Nov. 13.—A special despatch from Durban, Natal, dated Thursday, Nov. 9, evening says; "Native runners who have just arrived here report that the Boers suffered a severe defeat at Ladysmith this morning. The Boer guns were silenced after four hours' fighting, during which the Boer losses were heavy. No details have been received."

THE ORIENTAL ARRIVES.

London, Nov. 13.—Advices received here to-day announce that the British troopship Oriental, with 75 officers and 1,218 men on board, has arrived at Cape Town. The Oriental has on board the 1st Royal Welsh Fusiliers and the 6th Brigade staff.

THE HAND OF GOD.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 13.—At the Philgrim Baptist church last evening Rev. James Rea preached an interesting and eloquent sermon from the topic, "Livingston's Lefe and the Boer's brutality." In the present war between the Boers and Britain, Rev. Mr. Rea sees the hand of God reaching out in chastisement to the Boers for their atrocious crimes of the past. "These Boers," said the minister, "would murder the parents, make slaves of the children and then in their homes would have family prayers, after which they would gloat over their devilish deed." He believes that God is now preparing to punish them for their crimes.

THE SITUATION IMPROVES.

London, NNo. 13.—The simultaneous attacks on Ladysmith, Mafeking and Kimberley, which were opened on Thursday, manifest recognition byt he Boers of the fact that every day lessens their chances of a successful onslaught on any one of the three British strongholds. General Joubert's chances of reaching Pietermaritzburg can be said to have vanished. This is already reported to be admitted by Col. Schiel, the German officer commanding the Boer artillery, who is supposed to have been largely the author of the Boer plan of campaign and who in an interview is alleged to have said; "The Boer intention was to have captured Pietermaritzburg and then to dictate terms. But the hope of accomplishing this must now be abandoned."

Situation Improves.

There is no doubt, that, from the British point of view, the general situation in Natal is rapidly improving. Nearly eight thousand troops reached South Africa during the last forty-eight hours, and by the end of the week from 4,000 to 7,000 more will be added to the British strength in Natal. These will probably be pushed forward to Estcourt, bringing the British force there up to 10,000 men and making a general attack on Ladysmith by General Joubert very hazardous.

As the cavalry and artillery belonging to General Methuen's division will not have arrived by then, the advance from Estcourt may be delayed.

Help in a Week.

But, if it is deemed essential to open communication with the beleagured town at the earliest possible moment, General Methuen, it is believed, may decide to replace the regular cavalry and artillery by the Natal and Outlander mounted forces and the naval guns in which case it is claimed, it ought to be possible to re-occupy Colenso and stretch out a hand to General White by Monday, though, it is added, the course to be followed by General Methuen must be necessarily dictated entirely by official knowledge of General White's position and resources, and the experts hope General Methuen will be able to await the concentration of the whole division before advancing, and thus have a better chance of dealing a telling blow at General Joubert's main army, which, it is asserted, will be caught between two British forces and compelled either to fight a general action or retire.

United States Friendship.

In the course of a speech at the Walter Scott Club banquet Friday night in proposing the toast to literature, U. S. Ambassador Choate said: "Truly your country and mine are connected by bonds of sympathy that were never stronger and closer than they are at this very hour. I can assure you that Lord Salisbury's generous and cordial words at the Lord Mayor's banquet yesterday will meet with a quick and hearty response beyond the Atlantic.

"It has been said by a great thinker that 'Peace hath her victories, not less renowned than war'; and this ironclad friendship which now prevails between the two kindred nations is her latest and greatest victory. It means peace not merely between your country and mine, but amongst all the great nations of the earth; and it tends, by advancing civilization, to promote the welfare of the whole human race."

An Expert's Reasoning.

The military expert of the London Times, in his editorial summary of the Transvaal, draws the following deductions;

"Good news has been received to the effect that the first transports chartered by the Government for the conveyance of the army corps and the cavalry division to South Africa had arrived at Cape Town.

"The Roslyn Castle carries about [illegible] officers, and about 1,000 non-commissioned officers and men, and is in itself a welcome addition to the forces now at the Cape, but of course the main significance of the arrival of this vessel lies in the fact that it is but one of the twenty-five transports despatched from this country between October [illegible] and October 24, both dates inclusive. It goes without saying that the remaining twenty-four transports will not make such a rapid passage as the Roslyn Castle, which is a comparatively new and fast ship. But in any case we are now within a measureable distance of the influx of reinforcements into South Africa which will materially alter the situation.

WOUNDED ARE DOING WELL.

London, Nov. 13.—The Colonial Office to-day gave out the following extract from a telegram received from the Governor of Natal; "Lieut. Letheridge, of the Rifle Brigade, who was dangerously wounded Nov. 7 at Ladysmith, Lieut. Nisbet of the Gloucester Regiment, and the wounded prisoners at Pretoria are reported by a refugee to be doing well.

THE SKIRMISH AT BELMONT.

London, Nov. 13.—The War Office this morning, issued the following official despatch from Cape Town, dated Sunday, November 12, noon, describing the action in which Col. Keith Falconer and Lieut. C. C. Wood, of the North Lancashire Regiment were killed;

"Colonel Gough, at Orange River, reports that during the reconnaissance of 15 miles to a point nine miles west of Belmont, on November 10, the officers of the patrol first came out of Boer position taken up a great semi-circular ridge standing out into a plateau. They endeavored to make the Boers develop their strength by demonstrating with two squadrons of the 9th Lancers and a field battery on the left wing, with one and one-half companies of mounted infantry in the right wing, and with artillery in the middle of the plateau with infantry fire. The enemy began by firing at our cavalry from a gun at the north end.

"As the cavalry, in open order, began to circle around them, the hills seemed full of sharpshooters. The mounted infantry endeavored to outflank the enemy left in order to discover the laager, coming under a heavy and unexpected fire from a few skirmishers.

"Our guns fired several apparently effective shots, but the enemy did not respond, having withdrawn with the wounded. The enemy did not fire on an ambulance.

"Colonel Gough withdrew his force after a demonstration lasting three hours, and returned to camp the same afternoon near Orange river.

"The guns and a few horses were brought in by rail. The wounded were sent to Orange river by rail immediately after the action. The enemy's strength appeared considerable, apparently 700, with one gun, under David Libbe and P. Van Der Merwe."

Lieut. Wood a Canadian.

Lieut. C. C. Wood, of the North Lancashire Regiment, was a native of Halifax, N.S., and a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. His father, Captain J. Taylor Wood, was commander of the Confederate cruiser Tallahassee—a vessel that performed many daring exploits during the American civil war—and was a grandson of Jefferson Davis, and was a great grandson of President Zachary Taylor, of the United States. Capt. J. Taylor Wood has resided in Halifax since the close of the civil war, and is chairman of the Pilot Commission of Halifax. Lieut. Wood is the first graduate of the R.M.C. to lose his life in battle.

THE CHIEF NURSE.

Montreal, Nov. 13.—Miss W. E. Hibbard, who has been appointed chief nurse of the hospital ship Maine, which is being fitted out by American women in England for service in South Africa is a Canadian, and is well known in Montreal, where her relatives live. Miss Hibbard is a graduate of the St. Catharines Hospital school. During the Spanish American war she was chief nurse at Camp Cuba Libre and at Savannah.

ANOTHER MONTREAL BLAZE.

The Damage Was Heavy and Firemen Had a Narrow Escape.

Montreal, Nov. 13.—A four storey biscuit and candy factory on Notre Dame street, owned by Viau Brothers, and Trotter's storage warehouse, a large stone building in the rear, were totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The fire started at eight o'clock in the morning and the damage is estimated at $300,000. Viau Brothers, whose loss is $200,000, have insurance for half that amount. They employed over 200 hands. Chief Benoit and several firemen were caught in the alleway, and had to fight their way out through the flames. Fireman Pelletier was badly burned about the face and body and had to be taken to the hospital.

Five Indians Killed.

Flagstaff, Arizona, Nov. 13.—Deputy Sheriff Hogan and three white men tried to arrest a Navajo Indian accused of horse stealing Saturday near Walnut station. The Indian and five of his friends resisted. Five of the Indians were killed and the sixth wounded. Hogan was shot three times but lives. One of he posse was killed and another wounded.

TAFFEY BY THE TIMES.

Friendship of Britain and the United States Calls Forth an Editorial.

London, Nov 13.—The Times referring editorially this morning to the speech of United States Ambassador Choate, at the annual banquet of the Walter Scott Club in Edinburgh, Friday evening, said:—

"The American people are generous enough to like us better for being proud and glad of their sympathy than for having given them our own. So now the English people, amid the chorus of depreciation and abuse from the continential press, find in the hearty approbation of a great free nation, encouragement and strength of a kind which even ironclads cannot supply."

Proceeding to discuss the bearings of the Samoan agreement, the Times remarks :—"Both the English and American people will remember that in the very nature of things Germany can never be the friend of either in quite the same sense as they are, and ought increasingly to become friends of one another."

TO SAVE THE HOMESTEAD.

New York Comes to the Relief of the Parnell Family.

New York, Nov. 13.—Tammany Hall, has guaranteed $10,000 to pay the mortgage on the Parnell homestead in Wicklow, Ireland. Recently $5,000 was raised at a mass meeting here. A brother and invalid sister of Charles Stewart Parnell are living at the homestead. They are to have the use of the property as long as they live. When they die the place is to be converted into a Parnell memorial and museum. If the subscriptions show a surplus above the amount needed to pay of the mortgage that surplus is to be expended in erecting a statute of Parnell opposite the general post office in Dublin.

NOT SETTLED YET.

The Anti-Ritualist Controversy—Some Recalcitrant Clergymen.

New York, Nov. 13.—The correspondent of the New York Sun, cabling from London, says :—Although the Archbishop's decision at the Lambeth Conference against the use of incense and portable lights is generally obeyed in London, three of the forty-six offenders are still recalcitrants. The Bishop of London has informed them that they must forthwith abandon their practices, or he would suspend them for two years. The recalcitrants refuse to reveal their intentions, one remarking that Bishops do not always carry out their threats. There are signs elsewhere that perhaps there will be sufficient ritualistic opposition to force Mr Balfour to fulfil his promise at the next session, to deal with the question legislatively if the disciplinary efforts of the Bishops are not effective.

Future of Tutuila.

New York, Nov. 13.—The plan for the future of Tutuila, the Samoan island that falls to the United States under the agreement reached with Great Britain and Germany, are being considered by the Administration. The Herald says the future government of the island will depend altogether upon Congress, owing to the fact that when a naval station has been established it will be under the com- of an officer of high rank, and it has been suggested that a naval government might be instituted similar to that which has been put in operation at Guam by Captain Leary. The Navy Department officials desire to make Pago Pago impregnable, defended by many high power guns and equipped with machinery and men to dock and repair the largest class of warships.

Surrender of Parades.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Both the State and Navy departments have received reports concerning the surrender of Parades at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, yesterday. The State Department despatch is from Minister Loomis at Caracas and is as follows :—"After eight hours' fighting Castro's army took Puerto Cabello this morning. Killed and wounded aggregate 300; surgeons and hospital corps from foreign cruisers attending wounded. Local facilities inadequate. Castro holds every port and place of consequence in Venezuela."

Found Dead in Bed.

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 13.—Mr J Wilkinson, formerly a resident of Gravenhurst, and who has been working here for the C P R for the past few months, was found dead in his bed at the North Bay Hotel, where he had been boarding. He was a married man, his wife living in Huntsville at the present time. An inquest will be held to-day.

Foul Play Suspected.

London, Nov. 13.—The body of a man believed to be James Rowe, a well known character to the local police, was found in a shallow creek on Adelaide street about six o'clock last night. Foul play is suspected, and an inquest will be held.

Result of a Prize Fight.

New York, Nov. 13.—Harry Appel, the prize-fighter lies at the point of death at the Norwegian hospital suffering from a concussion of the brain as the result of his fight with Jack Fox at the Pelican Athletic Club, Brooklyn, Saturday night. The injury was not the result of a blow but of an accidental trip which sent him heavily to the floor.

ENGLAND AND THE POWERS.

A London correspondent, Oct. 28, notes that while French, German, Austrian and especially Russian journals joined in one wild howl against England, Englishmen quietly smiled during the whole session of Parliament. And so far as might goes, England can afford to smile. They see their naval department sending a great army 6,000 miles over seas, and that without disturbing the traffic of a single steamship line. They see the British Parliament, with practically unanimity and without needing to add one penny to present taxation, vote $50,000,000 to pay the bill. They see each British colony sending its contingent to the front at its own expense, and almost angry because it is not allowed to send more. They see England, such is her command of the cables of the world, switch all Europe off from telegraphic contact with half of the African continent, and all the while her navy remains unfettered, practically with steam up, to maintain supremacy on the seas.

This is the situation as nine out of ten Englishmen see it at this moment and the spectacle of England's armed power is reflected in the quieter tone of official messages from Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg. It is true, these inspired messages seem to say, that we have our own view of the rights and wrongs of this South African war, but it is pure journalistic imagination to talk of "combined European intervention." "France," says an official pronouncement from the Quai d'Orsay, "has no ground or desire for any intervention at present." Russia is most probably in the same position, Germany is the only power directly concerned in the matter, and as Germany is England's avowed ally, and the Kaiser will in a few weeks be England's guests, European intervention may be dismissed as out of the question.

Will England, then, cancel the mobilization of her fleet now in mysterious progress at her dock-yards? Not at all. The British Government remain supremely distrustful of Russia's intentions in the Persian Gulf and at Pekin, and of France's intentions in Morocco, and they do not mean to be caught napping.

MODERN WARFARE.

The advance of scientific knowledge is having its effect in the conduct of a campaign as well as in every other phase of human activity. Mere brute strength and even personal bravery are not such potent factors as they once were in the stern arbitrament of war. Strength and courage along with all other manly qualities must exist in the soldier, but to these must be added for the purposes of modern warfare, especially in the case of the officers, a great deal of scientific knowledge.

The tremendous destructiveness of modern artillery is the factor which will have greatest effect in deciding a contest. It is not so much the army with the strongest battalions of infantry or cavalry that will win in future battles; but the army with the greatest number of batteries of artillery, if they are equipped with the most deadly guns. Take as an example of this the new field gun in use in South Africa which can fire twelve aimed shots a minute, each shot carrying 200 bullets which weigh 42 to the pound. The tube in which the bullets are encased has a time fuse attached to it which ignites the powder in the tube, thus discharing it at the time for which it has been set. These bullets scatter over a space of twenty-four yards. The guns have a killing range of 5,500 yards. Every shot from one of the guns is equal in destructiveness to a discharge from 200 rifles, if they are fired in volley.

With such weapons as these, it may be that modern warfare will, in the future, become little more than an artillery duel. We can imagine the time when the two armies will stand five miles apart and without ever coming to closer quarters fight a decisive battle. Hence, that [illegible] which goes into war with the best artillery may be expected hereafter to come out the victor.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

General White is still holding his own at Ladysmith, and appears to have made two successful sorties, though there is yet no official confirmation of these engagements. In fact, the war office is maintaining a sphinx-like silence in regard to everything.

The latest important development is that, while a large Boer army is holding General White at Ladysmith, and has cut off his communication, while others are investing Kimberley and Mafeking. The Boers have suddenly appeared in force at four other points on the Orange river and have seized four of the five railway bridges. The Orange river is the southern boundary of the Orange Free State, and it was by that route, it was reported, Buller's army was to advance. The number of Boer troops now in the field is evidently much larger than was expected.

A DISASTROUS FIGHT.

Story of the Bloody Battle at Majuba Hill Won by the Boers.

The South African struggle has led to many references to the last war with the Boers, in which there was no more disastrous point, from the British standpoint, than that at Majuba Hill. Here is an account of the battle—

Majuba Hill is a flat-topped and very steep mountain, which commands Laing's Nek. After his first repulses Colley found himself encamped opposite the Boer position waiting for reinforcements. The Boers were steadily entrenching their position at the Nek, so that the storming of it would be far more difficult that it had proved when first attempted. So far the Boers had made no start at holding Majuba Hill on account of the difficulty of ascending it. Consequently, (a) if the Boers occupied it they would complete their chain of fortifications, (b) if the British occupied it they would outflank the Boer line, and when the reinforcements arrived, could attack with excellent chances of success. Sir George Colley accordingly deliberately kept back his reinforcements, a strong force of infantry and cavalry, at Newcastle, so as to tempt the Boers to occupy the hill, seized by a night march, and then ordered by flag-signal from the hill that these troops be hurried to the front. In two or three days they would be at his main camp and then a combined attack would be made. This fact hinged upon one consideration—that neither of the two small bodies into which he thus divided his army could be attacked and over-whelmed in detail. The hill appeared to be impregnable, and Sir George carefully provided for the defence of his main camp. The force which set out for the hill in the night was smaller than is generally given. It mustered 554 rifles and 200 of these were left at two detached posts on the four-mile road to the hill.

The top of Majuba Hill is flat, triangular, and covers about ten acres, and the crest line measures about 1,200 yards, so that 350 men made a small garrison for it. A hollow occupied part of the top. At the angle nearest the Boers the hill rose steeply to the edge and then from this tip a slope ran up for about 150 to a ridge, about forty feet higher, which cut across the top. Behind this ridge lay the central depression, and from the summit of the ridge, owing to the convexity of the scope, the tip of the hill could not be seen, much less the steep hillside. At the corner of the plateau nearest the Boers, and in advance of the curving slope just mentioned was a kopje (or koppie), a rocky mound. A party of Highlanders, afterwards reinforced by some 58th men, kept this kopje as an outpost. Behind them, on the true edge of the hilltop, was a line of troops composed here of Highlanders. Behind the transverse ridge, in the central hollow, lay the reserves. Finally there seems to have been three paths up the hill. One was by the Highlanders' kopje. The second was in rear of and to the right of the transverse ridge. The third was that next to the British camp, by which the force had ascended.

When the Boers perceived the troops on the hill, and determined to attack, a number of parties advanced to the lower slopes of the hill, and from early morning till 1.30 directed a heavy fire on the mountain. Only three or four of the British were shot, and the fire appeared absolutely wasted. But while this was going on smaller parties of the Boers were silently climbing the hill. A good deal of the hillside is dead ground," i. e., cannot be seen from the crest of the hill, so that they could climb safely over these portions. The fire from the covering force at once attracted the attention of the British, and by making it unsafe to show one's self on the sky line prevented them from watching the slopes of the hill. By 1.30 the first of these parties, about 60 men, was close under the Highlanders' kopje. Something had been seen of them, and the post had been reinforced, but no idea of their numbers was entertained. The Boers deliberately prepared for the destruction of this advanced post. The party collected under a rock-ledge which hid them from the soldiers on the skyline above them. Then, at a word, they stepped back with their rifles at the "present," and instantly discharged a volley, which brought down almost the whole of the picquet. The rest by this sudden slaughter of their comrades, fell back; the line along the tree crest in their rear seems to have shared the panic, and fell back to the transverse ridge. To this ridge Colley and his officers were leading the reserve, and as the two waves, the retreating and advancing met, there was a scene of intense confusion as Highlanders and 58th men mingled. For a while the retreating men bore the others back; then the officers got a little line of battle formed along this ridge; and here took place the fight for the hill. The line was confused, companies and corps were mixed up, the men were badly bunched, the flanks were left weak and unguarded, the men were disheartened by the sudden and amazing attack which had befallen them, and all was wild din and tumult. Then the Boer force, which had thus stormed the true crest, appeared.

For a while the two lines exchanged a heavy fire, but no loss occurred on either side. But the Boers were hugging the ground, covered by the convexity of the slope. All the British saw were spurts of smoke and rifle muzzles, and here and there a head cautiously lifted. The British lead was whizzing over their heads. The Boer fire was striking the ground in front of the British line; gradually it crept up, and the soldiers began to drop. The Boer line was being fed by the climbers lower down the hill. Then a fresh party came up by the path to the right of the ridge on which the British line was; then that right was enveloped with fire, and outflanked and outshot, the line gave way in rout. Colley stood to the end and was killed while urging his men not to run. The rest was a fight down the hillside. The official statement showed 20 officers and 266 men killed, wounded and missing; a heavy fall from 350.

A Lucky Day for "Bill."

A Peterborough hotel manager employed a handy man going by the name of "Bill" to do his window washing. One morning Bill, instead of doing his work, was amusing himself by reading the paper, and playing with Dickson Jewett's dog "Sport," and, as bad luck would have it, the proprietor looked in.

"What's this?" he said. Bill was dumfounded. "Pack up your things and go," said the boss.

The poor Bill went to the office, drew the money which was owing to him and then went upstairs and put on his good clothes. Coming down he went to say "Good-bye" to some of the other servants, and there he happened to run across the proprietor, who did not recognize him in his black coat.

"Do you want a job?" asked the proprietor.

"Yes, sir," said Bill.

"Can you wash windows?"

"Yes, sir."

"You look a handy sort of fellow. I only gave the last man $5, and I'll give you $6 per week."

"Thank you, sir," said Bill, and in half an hour he was back in the same old room cleaning windows this time and not reading the paper, or playing with the dog.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his

DR. G. B. FOSTER,

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the beatenest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old oysterman the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

THE KAISER'S VISIT.

Elaborate Programme Drawn Up for Emperor William's Reception—He Will Meet all the Notables.

London, Nov. 11.—Europe is now agog with rumors of diplomatic activity and alliances that may be effected. As a result, the relations of the European powers seem to be rapidly assuming a new phase. This, doubtless, is not a little due to the fact that in nearly all the recent international negotiations the United States has been a factor. The forthcoming visit of Emperor William to Queen Victoria is regarded as capping the climax of British diplomatic success, and the feeling of satisfaction at this state of affairs is not in the slightest degree marred by any feeling of jealousy over the Emperor's recent meeting at Posdam.

An elaborate programme has been drawn up. Upon the arrival at Portsmouth, Nov. 20, of the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the Emperor, Empress, their two sons, and others on board, it will be met by the British special service squadron, and it is said the Emperor, wearing the uniform of a British admiral, will be received by the Prince of Wales, similarly attired, and the Duke of York. After the salutes and a review the party will go direct to Windsor, staying there five days. Thence the Emperor will go to Sandringham for two days, and will there meet Lord Salisbury, Mr Balfour, Lord Roseberry, Mr Chamberlain, Lord Wolseley and other notables. The remainder of His Majesty's visit will probably be spent at the Duke of Devonshire's seat at Chatsworth, and in shooting in Scotland, the imperial party returning to Germany via Leith on the Hohenzollern.

M'CLEARY LOSES HIS LIFE.

Toronto Citizen Accidentally Shot While Handling a Rifle.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—A despatch from Orillia states that John McCleary, aged 32, of Toronto, met with a fatal accident at Moon River yesterday. He had been out with a hunting party and while handling a loaded rifle in a boat accidentally discharged it, the bullet crashing through his abdomen. Dr. Thompson, of Waubaushene, who was in the immediate neighborhood, reached the unfortunate man in twenty minutes and did everything possible to save his life, but without avail. Coroner Beaton, of Orillia, decided that an inquest was unnecessary, as no blame could be attached to any one. The remains were sent to Toronto to-day the certificate being signed by Drs. Thomson, Leask and Richey.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

> the mournful crocodile
> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
> —"2, Henry VI.," 1, [illegible]
> —"Poet's Lore."

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Gives Prompt Relief and Cures Permanently

Thousands of people die in November of rheumatism. In the vast majority of cases carelessness, ignorance and a lack of medical skill send the sufferers to the grave.

It can be honestly and fearlessly asserted that in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred Paine's Celery Compound would have banished the disease and saved life.

The original cause of rheumatism, as of so many other diseases, is a lack of nerve force. With this weakness of the nervous system there is a derangement of the digestive organs; the food stays too long in the stomach it turns sour, and the resulting acid enters the blood. The victim then takes cold, and the acid cannot be expelled from the system by ordinary means. Soon the joints swell, and then there is inflammation and great suffering.

Paine's Celery Compound used promptly and regularly quickly expels all the deadly acid from the body; the pains are banished, muscles and joints that have become contracted and stiffened soon become limber and regain their power, and the patient walks with comfort and ease.

No other medicine can do such marvellous work for those afflicted with rheumatism and sciatica. Paine's Celery Compound is truly your friend and life-renewer; it is the medicine recommended by the ablest physicians for the banishment and cure of a disease that has such fatal results in the variable autumn months.

A KINDLY ACT.

Minister of Railways Saved a Ragged Tot From Being Crushed at Quebec.

Moncton, N. B., Nov. 12.—Passenger Agent Lambkin, of the Intercolonial, tells the following incident of the crush on the departure of the contingent from Quebec. Hon. A. G. Blair and Hon. W. S. Fielding were pushing their way through the surging masses when suddenly a feeble cry was heard near by exclaiming in mournful tones, "I have lost my little sister." Mr. Blair felt something holding on his knee, and, looking down, saw a little girl not more than five or six years old, being crushed by the excited crowd. The minister picked the little ragged tot up and placed her on his shoulder. He appealed to the crowd to let him through, and his noble act was greatly admired and a passage was promptly opened for him and his charge. He took the little one to a house near by, where he left her in safety. In the rush he got separated from Mr. Fielding.
